GREATEST OF BATTLES IS EXPECTED

All observers believe that one of the greatest battles in history and perhaps the greatest of struggles of all time impends on the Western Front which includes the Maginot Line and the new front down to the coast of Holland and which might possibly include a further front if Germany should invade Switzerland.

Recent reports told of French successes in holding the Hun armies at Sedan and of their acceptance of the Nazi challenge. At Sedan Napoleon the Third gave in to Germany 69 years ago. This ground was again the scene of conflict in 1914-18.

The pace which the Germans set in their attack on the Low Countries indicates as observers have said that the enemy has been using as high as six or seven thousand airplanes in the Belgian theatre of war alone. Yet in spite of this and with Allied air power which is said to possess fewer planes than the enemy, Allied air forces have proven their superiority to the Nazis in personnel and in efficiency of machines. This is demonstrated by the German losses which are estimated to have been four times as great as those of the Allied planes in the Low Countries. British and French aviators are most efficient and their planes are the latest and most modern.

The Allied air arm has been fighting the Germans to a standstill, according to despatches from an Associated Press correspondent with the B.E.F. in Belgium published yesterday.

The present fighting is what the world looked upon as likely with mechanism used to a preponderating degree and permitting lightning thrusts by an enemy whose fortune depends probably upon days and months.

It is encouraging that the Allied mechanism wherever brought into action has proven itself as vastly superior to the Huns' equipment. There was the great battle of the tanks the other day in which the efficiency of the French and British tanks over the Germans was clearly demonstrated.

The Allies, it has been said, have the advantage of picking the ground on which to face the Huns. Germany had the initial advantage in her lightning invasions of the Low Countries but as time proceeds this is overcome with the Allied Powers making the selection of the terrain in which to face the enemy.

Allied strategists have been using their resources to the full and will exert them more and more as the days and weeks pass. They have time on their side. Hitler is compelled by his own situation to try and force a conclusion, it would seem, at the earliest possible time.

German strategy of huge masses in movement, hurled like lightning against the Allies at any cost to the Germans, now finds itself opposed by the brilliant strategy of the British and French and other Allied generals along this long front.

In the forces engaged and in the vast importance of the conflict, the battle on the west front may well be the greatest in history. Determined and confident, Britain and France and their Allies face the Nazis.

NETHERLANDS IN HISTORY

The Netherlands, Lowlands, or Holland, as it is called from the origin which means "hollow land" is a land which has seen a struggle with the ocean which has been conquered by the raising of dikes and turning of the streams into subserviency, forcing them to fertilize and enrich the land. The Netherlanders have a saying, "God made the sea, but the Hollander made the land." They reclaimed vast tracts from the sea and the reclaimed land is marked with great fertility. Canals are maintained within a network across the country, linking up rivers, lakes. Locks were in use on the canals as early as the fourteenth century. The climate is much like England's though warmer in summer and colder in winter.

The people are the descendants of those known to the ancient Romans as the Batavi, who lived on an island between the two branches of the Rhine and the Frisians who dwelt farther north. They were a hardy, hospitable folk, who hunted, fished or led a pastoral life. Their religion was simple and they were chaste and honorable. The Roman sway fell in the fourth century when the Franks overran the country. Under five centuries of feudalism commerce arose and world trade was developed. At one time the country was under the Spanish King and Emperor Charles Fifth. In the middle of the sixteenth century the struggle for freedom came to a crisis. In 1581 the Netherlands declared their freedom. In 1648 Spain recognized the independence of the Netherlands. The Dutch had made themselves the masters of the seas. Amsterdam had the first stock exchange and was one of the richest cities. Two great wars resulted with England. William Prince of Orange became King William III of England. Napoleon overran the Netherlands at the close of the eighteenth century. On the fall of Napoleon the Orange Family was restored. In 1830, the southern provinces seceded, forming Belgium.

The old Dutch language had a wider sway than the modern Dutch and it is heard yet among villagers in the north of France. Holland has been associated with scholarship, literature and science. The Dutch Colonies make her one of the richest empires in the world. The Boers in South Africa are descendants of the 16-century Dutch colonists in South Africa. The Dutch were great traders.

The Dutch resemble the English very much, being a freedom-loving people and have proved themselves as a nation and as colonists willing to make great sacrifices to retain or gain liberty. They have both the sea-faring qualities of sea-faring folk and are inventive and industrious. Agriculture is the basic industry of the Netherlanders.

Now these people who have assiduously minded their own business, have had to endure the curse of another would-be conqueror. Once it was Napoleon and now it is Hitler. The world knows how Napoleon disappeared from the life of Europe and it expects the exodus of Hitler in due course. Hitler, like Napoleon, wills to be conqueror, but he is not a general or military leader as Napoleon was. The Naziism he has created is worse than anything Napoleonic.

It has seemed the fate of the Netherlands to be the route that men who would dominate the world follow. It is in something of the position of the Holy Land, which was on the way over which the conquerors would pass between Egypt and Syria and other nations familiar to readers of the Bible and history and of other states not known. In the last war with Germany, the Germans had a plan to invade the Netherlands as well as Belgium but the high command decided against opening up the Netherlands.

Shortness of Breath May Be Due To Other Causes Than Heart Disease

As heart disease stands at the head of the list as a cause of death and this fact is known to almost everybody, it is often difficult for the physician to persuade his patient that his shortness of breath and pain in heart region are not due to heart disease.

The extra first beats of the heart is another symptom that causes alarm, yet "after middle age they may be considered almost a normal phenomenon".

Even swelling of the feet, when the heart is not enlarged, is practically never due to heart diseases.

What, then, are the symptoms of real or organic heart disease?

The one outstanding symptom is shortness of breath after exertion. Yet this symptom is very often present in those with a normal heart.

Shortness of breath on slight exertion is found in those with a blocked nose. As enough fresh air (oxygen) is not getting down to the lungs to purify the used blood, breathlessness due to lack of oxygen or too much carbonic acid, follows. If these individuals, while exerting themselves, will breathe in and out through the mouth, in most cases they will find that the shortness of breath does not come on as soon, doing the same amount of work.

Whether or not they have the nose condition corrected, the fact that getting more air down to the lungs prevents the breathlessness shows that the heart is normal.

Another condition causing shortness of breath is eating too many acid-forming food—meat, eggs, fish, cereals—for the amount of exercise taken. These are all nourishing foods and at least one of them should be eaten every day. Eating more fruit and vegetables will prevent acidosis, as this condition is called.

This same condition—acidosis—arises in those who are reducing weight so that those on reducing diets are often alarmed about their heart when they notice how easily they get out of breath. The using up of body tissues instead of food causes acidosis.

If, then, you get out of breath easily, you should first have your family physician examine your heart. If he find it normal and no blockage of nose present, there is no cause for worry, but it would be worth while to check up on your daily food habits.

Smelly Heroes

At no time is a fishing boat a pleasant place to be. The aura of their profession clings about these little craft, and is decidedly unsettling to the landlubber. What is more, they stay out in all kinds of weather.

When war comes, however, they jump from the slums of the sea to the heights of heroism. Those who man them are rough and often crude and unlettered. But, they know the sea, and they have stout hearts. No one who faces the ordinary day-to-day perils of the fishermen is in any danger of reflections on his courage. In this war, as in the last they have freely offered all their skill and bravery to the Empire, and both on the Canadian coasts and around about Great Britain, they are doing a defensive work which is all too often overlooked and ignored.—Windsor Star.

The 1940 Elections

PARIS, May 14.

I write this article as a battle rages in Belgium, on the border between Belgium and France and all along the French - German front, the greatest battle between men and materials and conflicting ideas that has yet been fought in human history. It is a battle involving millions of men and the accumulated wealth of great nations. Whatever its final results, it will be a turning point in the history of the world.

Meanwhile, in America, we are getting ready to hold two party conventions, in which we will nominate candidates for the Presidency. From now until next November there will be, in the usual order of things, debates, party divisions and a spectacle presented to the rest of the world of internal disunity.

That fact has played a part in the selection by the Nazis of this spring and summer as the time to drive for a decision in the war. There is not the slightest question about this. The Nazis timed to strike when the United States was immobilized—politically immobilized.

The gravity of this Hour cannot possibly be overrated. It must be said bluntly that it is by no means certain that Britain and France will win this war; it is by no means certain that the blows delivered, by forces greatly superior in numbers, airplanes and ruthlessness, having the advantage of strategical positions gained by the occupation without warning of five neutral countries—Denmark, Norway, Luxemburg, Holland and Belgium—will not be successful, and successful in quick order.

Five years ago the democracies were in an overwhelmingly superior position vis-a-vis Germany. They lost that position not in a moment, but from week to week and from year to year. Nobody deprived them of that position. They gave it away, because of complacency, overconfidence and unwillingness to face the facts. And now it has brought on the disaster of the war.

In a crisis like this one free men do not save themselves by feeling that they are committed, as by some fate, to a traditional pattern of behavior. They save themselves by asking lucidly, 'What is the very wisest thing that we could do?" and then doing it with courage and decision.

It is not wise to employ this summer and fall in a heated political campaign between two parties. It is not wise to make any change in the Presidency or the Department of State. The common sense of the American man in the street tells him this. The foreign policy of the United States will be during the next four years decisive for the whole American continent.

Although there have been many differences between the President and the Republicans on matters of domestic policy—these differences, except for the die-hards, being primarily differences regarding method—there are no essential differences in regard to foreign policy. Differences are being deliberately trumped up in order to furnish campaign material.

The President's handling of the foreign affairs of the United States has been masteryl. It has been the only masterly handling of affairs by any democratic statesman of a large power.

Alone among all the leaders of the three great free nations the President of the United States has from the first faced and grasped the whole bitter reality.

Alone among the heads of democratic states the President has been correctly informed, first by a Secretary of State who has great political sagacity and homespun common sense; secondly, by a diplomatic service superior in intelligence and liveliness to the British and the French; third, by a press which has done voluminous and energetic reporting, and fourth, and perhaps most importantly, by his own imagination— by the intuition of his extreme sensibility.

The President has been right. He foresaw what has happened, when people were branding him a calamity howler. He has been thinking ahead of events while the rest of the democratic world has been thinking one lap behind them.

In the democratic world he is a figure of immense proportions. The fall of Roosevelt in America would be worse for the cause of democracy and freedom than the Nazi occupation of Switzerland. I say that with weighed words, after travelling over a great deal of Europe.

It is not only that Mr. Roosevelt has for the democratic world a magic that that world sorely needs, but a change in administration now would inevitably break the continuity of a policy, or, if it did not, would create for weeks and months the fear that it might — and fear in this moment would have the same effect as reality.

Furthermore, every recriminatory debate on that policy would be picked up and used for purposes no Americans desire. There are times when it is good for the citizens of nations to disagree. There are other times when it is necessary to close the ranks, to discipline antagonisms, voluntarily to create that unity which tyranny can force. There are eras in which time moves deliberately, and eras when the metronome ticks off destiny with the rapidity of machine-gun fire. We are in such an era.

x x x

The Republican party has a great history behind it. In the two greatest crises of American history, in the critical years between the end of the Revolutionary War and the adoption of the Constitution, and in the ghastly years of the Civil War, the makers of American destiny were Republicans. Hamilton, who more than any other man secured the adoption of the Constitution, may justly be called the first Republican, although the party of that name did not yet exist, and its proudest name is Lincoln's.

The Republican party is properly called traditionalist, but its great moments were when it broke the traditions.

The Constitution founded the Republic. Lincoln—no traditionalist—saved it.

The greatest thing, it seems to me, that the Republican party could do now for the nation it has served so often and so magnificently would be to announce, and as quickly as possible, that if the President will accept a third term it will offer no candidate in opposition to him, but will offer, instead, only a Vice-Presidential candidate.

And if it wants to break the tradition once again, in the interest of the nation, it might look elsewhere than in the traditional places for a Vice-Presidential candidate, and nominate, for Vice-President, Wendell Willkie, one of our ablest citizens, a man who thoroughly represents the most enlightened and modern wing of Republican opinion, who is 100 per cent with Secretary Hull on foreign policy and who, were a change at this time desirable at all, is certainly Presidential timber.

The people would then have a chance to vote for Roosevelt, modified by Willkie or some other Republican; or Roosevelt, supported by whomever the Democrats might nominate.

The election of Roosevelt plus a Republican ticket would presume a reorganization of the Cabinet to include Republicans — in other worlds, a government of national concentration. And I personally believe that ticket would win.

It would reassure those who fear the President's impetuosity—which has not been manifest since the outbreak of the war. And it would mean that America continues to be politically mobile and in action, during every minute.

It is also completely constitutional. The party system was invented long after the Constitution was in operation, and the conventions are purely a politicians' instrument, having nothing, whatsoever to do with the fundamental structure of our democracy.

It would be large-minded of the Republican party to do this, but the Republicans may well remember that they governed America best and longest when they were most large-minded.

At any rate—and from Paris, where one sees events moving with the swiftness of a motorized battalion—it is impossible to think of one's self as a Republican or a Democrat, or a Socialist or a New Dealer. One thinks of one's self only as a citizen of the land of the free and the home of the brave.

A Refugee Speaks

Those persons who have lived under the brutal terrorism and oppression of the police states can fully appreciate what it means to regain a normal mode of life in a land where freedom and democracy prevail. Refugees from Europe, on reaching the shores of Canada, have burst into tears, knelt in prayer, and kissed the soil. This was not an affectation of sentiment, but such an outpouring of gratitude as seldom gushes from the human heart. Fellow-humans, who have lived for months like hunted and homeless creatures, find it hard to believe that there is still a country left on earth where liberty has not perished.

The feeling of refugees, and what Canada means to them, have never been more tersely expressed than in the words of Victor Kohn, a Jew from Czechoslovakia, who is now farming near Brantford. There is no rest, no peace of mind, nothing but fear and strain in the homeland.

"I was more tired when I got up in the morning than I was when I went to bed at night," he said. "But I sleep better now. When I go to bed I am not afraid some one will come in the night. When the door bell rings, I know it is not the Gestapo. It is fine to live in a land of freedom and liberty".

The refugees know. But do all Canadians know, do they really appreciate how fine it is to live in a country where freedom is as accessible as the air they breathe?—Hamilton Spectator.

It may be but the beginning of a career as a public benefactor.—Windsor Star.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Elasticity of British and French defence plans, despite strategic positions having been marked out long ago, is apparent in the Allied decision to adopt tactics involved in a field war of movement after a Nazi break-through in the Sedan area.

The Allied strategists have made allowance for various conditions and eventualities. A shift from a war of position can be made quickly and easily.

Allied strategy and the direction of the German attack gave the French army the first real crack at the German invaders pushing through Belgium but now the British army also has been in contact with the enemy.

In the choice of positions and in the operations of defence and counter-offensive now in progress and likely to continue for many days the Allied armies will operate as a unit under the direction of General Gamelin.

Throughout the greater part of the First Great War the British and French armies operated independently under their own commanders. The advantages of unified command were demonstrated in the last year of the war which brought victory.

This time the two armies in conjunction with the Belgian army, operate according to a common plan from the start. That plan no doubt contains alternatives designed to meet the different courses of action the enemy may take. It will unfold as the enemy's operations develop.

Waltz in Chiffon

WHETHER you're a bride-to-be or in love with the man you married years ago you'll find no lovelier dress than this silk chiffon for evenings this spring and summer. The designer most certainly had enchantment in mind and what's even better your pursestrings. It's not often we are offered such simplicity —and as many color choices—for a moderate price. Coral, gray a soft blue and even navy and black are available, each shade duplicated in a rayon crepe slip accompanying the dress.

The woman who has thin shoulders and arms will welcome the full graceful sleeves and the becoming jabot frill. All too often chiffon is cut with a beautiful yardage skirt and scarcely any bodice. No amount of talk about a jacket to go along should persuade the thin person to purchase such a style.

This type of dress is being worn with flowered dinner hats or chiffon turbans, but a chiffon scarf over the coiffure is decorative to and from dinner.

Stepping In Style

By ALICE ALDEN

THERE'S always room for one more idea in shoes, which doesn't appear to cut down the demand for seasonal favorites. Some of us like plain shoes, intact with heels and toes and soled more or less in the good old-fashioned way. The golf course is no place for a tricky sandal, and it often happens a shower comes up at the races. The bucko shoes shown look neat on any foot, are perforated for coolth, and offer a lot of walking comfort. Both the white-and-calf oxford, left, and stepin pump, right, have leather lacings. The pump is also available in beige with brown, blue with wine and black with wine. Mesh hose add chic to shoes like these, which will no doubt be making the rounds of New York's fair of 1940.

Vacation's Ahead!

BY ALICE ALDEN

IT'S ALWAYS time for a suit. If you didn't purchase yours early this spring, get a lightweight wool to finish the season and use for vacation travel. Today's model, featuring the long jacket, is good for plane, train or boat leaves. The wool is sheer and crisp and wrinkle-resistant, the suit shade of dusk-blue, practical but spirited. Think, for instance, how pretty it will go with a bon voyage bouquet. White pique accents may be removed or emphasized with pique accessories. Note the young, belted back of the jacket—easier to wear than the unbroken, severely-fitted style sponsored by many Paris designers. A favorite blouse of summer suit addicts is that made of gossamer, hard-wearing ninon which washes better than it cleans and is cooler than batiste. Remember to include it in your blouse wardrobe, combining it occasionally with an ankle-length dinner skirt as a change from your dresses.

Beauty by Bottle

DO YOU know that the milkman brings beauty to the back door every morning? Rich cream is grand to use when the skin is windtorn or sun-burned. It's good for the cuticle around the finger-nails. Not up to a cream made for the purpose, but it serves as an understudy.

If you find wrinkles are getting in their mean work, drink a glass of milk and cream, half and half, at the end of each meal. It will act favorably on the surface tisues of the face. If you're tired and jittery it will do you good. Take a glass at bedtime.

The list of vitamins in milk looks like a family reunion. A is there with a lot of his relatives, so is D. B is present to chug up an appetite, aid digestion and make the world look sunnier. C is not so plentiful, but is represented.

Added to vitamins are protein, calcium, lime, phosphorus, iodine and sugar to supply the needs of your energy motors.

Too many women are criss-cross and don't know why. They're tired or undernourished. A perfect condition for inviting all manner of beauty woes, especially facial gullies and sagging tissues.

We've heard about milk baths, but we think that was a terrible waste. Probably no woman ever had them anyway. Just one of those funny yarns.

For years a save-your-feet campaign has been put on by the medical profession and pulchritude preachers who have deplored the popularity of the spiked heel that throws the body out of balance and brings a host of foot griefs. It seems now as if these efforts have not been in vain. Women are buying bigger and better shoes with heels that provide a solid foothold and real comfort.

Twinging toes make a woman grouchy, so have a bad effect upon the feminine phiz. Poor little trotter, they haven't done anything, but lug you wherever you want to go. Why not give them a break? The next time you buy shoes have a heart.

Hot Weather Pet

BY ALICE ALDEN

THE STRIPED Jersey frock promises to be a hot weather pet in today's style and several similar versions— all on the long-sleeved shirtwaist theme. It's inexpensive chic and cool, and with a separate wool jacket of one sort or another, may be converted into a suit. There's an elongated navy coat for navy and white stripes, for instance; also, black for black and white . . . the white flannel jacket will turn it into a stunning sports outfit. For town, you'll choose simple white accessories such as the pique sailor with its black feather, the pique gloves with turn-back cuffs and the kidskin stepins. These incidentally, are something new in this leather. Sides and vamp are of quilted, elasticized kid, the heel of Washington, May 16 (AP)—Germany's Scandinavian invasion was credited by the Commerce Department today with causing a drop in United States merchandise exports in April.

The month's shipments totalled $315,000,000, which was $29,000,000 less than in March, $12,000,000 under the average for the first seven months of the war, but $88,000,000 higher than the pre-war month of April, 1939. Exports to Scandinavia, including Finland, accounted for $16,000,000 of the decline.

CHAPTER TWENTY

Chris yanked a half-dozen staccato shrieks of warning from the whistle, and washed the sweat from his eyes.

"Hold her, Chris. He's bluffing. He wouldn't dare—"

But, inexorably, the Baltic came on. Sondra's nails bit into her palms, as she tried to pour her own determination into the mind of Chris. This was a test of nerve. If Dynamite were at the wheel; or if she had her hands on those spokes. . . . But Chris . . .

She could see Jean Reynall in his pilothouse now. His face had the same rigid, granite look that Dynamite's wore. He came on. . . . He was almost upon them. She saw his hand move, and yank one short, imperious whistle blast that seemed to vibrate the very timber of the Tanya's deckhouse.

Chris rolled his eyes at O'Moore in a last look of appeal.

"Hold your course, confound you, Chris! Hold it! . . . Why, you white-livered sculpin Sondy Help me in to that wheel! I'll—I'll—"

But Chris, with a sound between a curse and a groan, had yanked the stop signal to the engine room, and at the same time spun the wheel hard over to starboard.

The Baltic surged past, not ten feet ahead of the Tanya's bow, and came to a stop within a few feet of the latter's port quarter. Jean Reynall, coming out of his pilot-house, assumed an exaggerated expression of pleased surprise. "Good morning!" He lifted one hand in a cheery salute. "A grand day for sight-seeing!"

Liane, all eagerness, stepped forward. "And what sights a gal may see—if she looks in the right direction," she flung back gaily, her expressive dark eyes moving over him.

He laughed. "That pleasing truth is just dawning on me," he replied, gazing pointedly at Sondra.

Sondra maintained an elaborate silence. Her teeth were clenched, and she was hating him for his insolently amused regard; for his complete ignoring of his outrageous attempt to run down the Tanya. Hating him also for being so handsome as he stood there, balancing to the roll of his abominable boat. Lest he have the satisfaction of seeing how much he had disturbed her, she leaned over the railing, pretending to watch something in the water between the vessels.

"I say, Miss O'Moore—don't you remember me?" Reynall challenged her. "You know — the fellow you had tossed out on your lawn during the party last night. I—hey, Shady!" he yelled suddenly. "Watch sharp, or we'll tangle the Tanya's net!" He leaned forward, estimating the narrowing band of water between the Baltic's stern and the Tanya's side. "Give her a kick ahead, old man!"

The response was startling—a roar of the Baltic's exhause, a thrashing of her screw that sent her leaping ahead, and a powerful thrust of water that struck the Tanya's port quarter a terrific blow. The Tanya, jackknifing violently toward her lowered seine, gave a lurch that flung Sondra against Ikeda, and halfway over the rail. Caught off-guard, she struggled to regain her balance, felt someone's hand clutch ineffectually at her shoulder, then found herself pitching headlong over the side.

She could swim like a fish; but the suddenness of her plunge, and the shock of the cold water, made her forget the Tanya's lowered net. Striking upward for the surface, her left hand came in contact with the yielding web, and caught. When she jerked to free it, she realized that a strand of the fine mesh, hooked under the teeth of the carved ivory fox-head on her bracelet, was holding her fast under water.

She feared losing the bracelet if she slipped her hand out of it, so set herself to the task of working it free. It was then that she felt herself seemingly surrounded by a confusion of arms. Two went about her. A hand grasped her trapped arm, slid to the wrist, and yanked her imprisoned hand free of the net.

As she kicked vigorously for the surface, she felt iron fingers clutching her sweater at the back. She broke water, expelling the last of her breath almost into the glistening brown face of Ikeda, who was treading water in front of her.

"You—again!" she gasped indignantly, deaf to the clamor on the deck above.

She brushed Ikeda aside with a thrust of her arm, but found that someone was still holding her at the back. With a quick roll she wrenched herself free from the clutching hand. Her feet caught in contact with her second rescuer, and she kicked out with a vindictive strength that not only thrust the man from her, but sent her scooting to the Tanya's side. Out of the tail of her eye she saw Reynall's dripping black head behind her.

"So he's the one who made me lose my bracelet, darn him" she thought."

Kemp solicitously helped her over the rail, while the ubiquitous Ikeda lent a hand from below. A moment later, Liane was hustling her into Chris's cabin, to help her out of her dripping clothes.

"My sacred totem!" Liane rattled on, as she deftly unfastened Sondra's brassiere at the back and pulled it, with her sweater, over her head. "I gave you credit when I saw you take that header over the side! Wondered why I hadn't thought of it myself. Boy! The way Jean went in after you! And Kemp had his coat off ready to dive when that bug, Ikeda, shoved him aside and flopped in, himself. But are you grateful? Not you. You come up glaring, knock Ikeda out of your way, give Jean a swift kick in the pants, and climb aboard madder than a wet hen."

Liane rolled up the sweater and stuffed it in one corner of the bunk; then began yanking at Sondra's wet slacks. "A swell reaction to chivalry! Gal, if Jean ever rescued me, I'd wilt in his arms and let him give me the works—including artificial respiration.

"The next time that devil comes pawing at me, he'll need artificial respiration!" Sondra burst out angrily.

"There, there, little dove." Liane tossed a towel over Sondra's bare shoulders. "Take a rub for yourself, and you'll feel better." She pulled out a drawer under Chris's bunk, and fished up some socks and a suit of blue-and-yellow pajamas. Put these on till your duds are dry. I'll take your wet things out to Hardtack and have him hang them over the stove."

She scooped the slacks up from the floor and folded them around the rolled-up sweater.

When Sondra, in her makeshift costume, finally stepped out of the cabin, she found the brightness of the day wiped out by a leaden threat of storm. Solid gray clouds had settled down over the coast, cutting off the tops of mountains as if with a knife. Gusts of wind scurried in dark lines across the smooth, Pacific swells. A bleak note sounded in the cries of the gulls still feeding, with unabated appetite, on the herring.

Katlean's men were brailing herring aboard the Scundoo. There was a suggestion of unusual haste in their handling of the huge dip-net which spilled its glittering loads into the hold of the little trawler. The Baltic waited near by.

As she walked aft, Sondra saw Kemp's Blue Dragon in the distance, headed for Sitka. Ikeda had gone with it, but Kemp was standing with Liane and Chris near the hatch where her grandfather sat. The captain looked grim. He reached for Sondra's hand and drew her down beside him. "Are ye all right, Sondy, gurl? That blasted young dock-walloper—if he had drowned ye, I'd have—"

"I was in no danger of drowning, lamb. The Baltic'c propeller-wave caught me off-balance somehow, and I just went over. There wasn't any dire intent in the manoeuvre, I'm sure."

"You're wrong, Miss Sondra!" Chris spoke in tones of suppressed fury. "Reynall had it all planned. That wave was intended to throw the Tanya's stern around into our own net so I'd have no chance to get under way again in time to block the Scundoo's set!"

"And it serves you right," drawled Liane. "You began the dirty work. He just out-gamed and out-smarted you, that's all. And I notice he's making the first haul of the season, while you, my surly Norseman, stand here making faces."

"Why, you—you—" Chris stepped toward her, his hands clenched. "If you were a man, I'd heave you over the side."

"Hey! Quit fighting, you two!" interposed Sondra.

"Yes, cheer up, Chris, old boy," said Kemp. "Quarreling with a lady always brings bad luck."

"Bad luck!" Chris swung about. "What have we had all day but bad luck? What else could we expect, with women aboard? It's a wonder a school of whales hasn't come along to complete the trip."

Liane had begun a sarcastic retort when Hardtack, who was dumping potato peelings over the rail, emitted a cracked yell, "Thar—she—blo-ows!" He stood, his white apron fluttering, his leathery, outstretched arm pointing seaward. All eyes turned in that direction.

A mile beyond the outer edge of the herring shoal a column of vapor shot up from a dark form rounding out the deep. Poom! The metallic sound of released air came, like a Jovian sigh, through the shrieking of the gulls.

"I told you!" Chris threw up both hands. "Heave it in, men—any way to get it aboard!" he shouted to the group laboring at the Tanya's net. "We've go to scram out of here." Wheeling, he raced to the pilot-house.

Another whale spouted; then another, and another, until twenty huge cetaceans dotted the surface of the sea.

"A school of 'em!" cried one of the deck hands. "On their next dive they'll strike the herring and go plumb crazy!"

A moment later the Tanya and all the other boats headed full speed away from the pandemonium that reigned in the school of herring.

Once clear of the danger, Chris turned the wheel over to his mate and came aft to the captain's side. "No use in any of our boats waiting out here to make a set," he said gloomily. "The whales have scattered this school to China. Tough luck, Cap'n."

"Aye. Tough luck for us—whales showin' up here after ten years. But good luck for—well, no matter.

O'Moore's weather-wise old eyes took in the racing mauve clouds; the white caps that were crisping the ocean's surface. "A nor'easter's brewin'," he said quietly. "Belike, this is the last offshore set a Reynall boat will find weather to make. He's welcome to this first hatful of fish. But from now on, his hauls are goin' to be water-hauls. We'll see to that, Chris."

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

All the way back to Sitka, Sondra was puzzled by the change that had come over Liane. She was unusually silent and avoided everyone. Her anxiety to reach port was so marked that Kemp began to chaff her about being afraid of Chris.

For once, Liane appeared to lack a snappy comeback. As they neared the waterfront, she stood well forward, intently scanning the Sitka wharves. The only activity there centered about the Glory, alongside which lay the Scundoo, unloading fish. The Glory's charthouse door was open. At closer range, Sandra could see Miss Jacqueline seated inside, her fingers plying a pair of knitting needles. The Baltic was nowhere in sight.

Liane waited at the rail, ready to leap off the moment the Tanya touched the O'Moore float. "I won't go up with you just now, Sondra," she said. "Must dash home to see how mother is. See you later."

"Wonder what devilment she's up to now," Chris growled. But his eyes, following her, held a look of surly admiration.

With Kemp's assistance, the captain was finally established in his chair in the upstairs sitting room at Echo House. Sondra set a bottle of cognac on the table between the two men, and went to her room to change.

She was slipping into a flowered house-coat when she remembered the Bates contract. With a hollow feeling of dismay, she caught up the brassiere to which she had pinned the envelope, and found—only the safety pin. A hasty shaking of the garments she had worn brought no better result. She realized, guiltily, that she hadn't given the document a thought since her talk with Liane on the way to the fishing grounds. Even while getting out of her wet clothes in Chris's cabin, after her tumble overboard, she had been so concerned about the loss of her good luck bracelet that the contract had never entered her mind.

She recalled how Liane had jerked off her sweater. The envelope must have been torn from its pin then; it had fallen to the floor and in the dim light from the porthole had escaped notice. It must be there in Chris's cabin; it just must be! She would go down now and get it before the Tanya left the float. Dynamite would be certain to ask for it when she told him about the blowing of the safe.

Hurriedly, she got into a sports frock and coat, and dashed out into the hall. She had reached the head of the stairs when a bumble of voices inside the sitting room halted her. Polena's, shrill and with unusual agitation, rose clearly. "With my passkey, captain, I go into the library to tidy the mess that Liane woman made. And there was the safe, all—"

Sondra turned into the sitting room to face the situation.

The captain looked up sharply. "Sondy, co you know about the safe?"

"Yes. It happened during Liane's dance last night. But nothing of value was in the safe, lamb, and I didn't want to spoil your party by telling you then. Afterward—well, we all rushed out to the fishing grounds in such a hurry, and so many things happened out there that I—well, I just never thought of it."

She explained, without mentioning Jean Reynall's presence, how she had entered the library, had caught one glimpse of Alexander on the floor, and then had been flung aside in the dark.

Kemp's quiet voice broke in. "Let me tell you what I know about it, captain."

"I'm listenin'."

"I had posted Alexander at the light switch beside the door opening between the drawing room and the library. After we'd switched off the light, I slipped back there to give him some further instructions, and found him gone. I supposed he'd be back any minute, so I waited, my back against the library partition. When Liane touched off the Venetian powder, the effect was rather startling there in the dark, as you know. But, apart from the flare of light and roll of drums, I felt a vibration that didn't seem just right to me. So, knowing the library doors were locked, I slipped out into the reception room. I was surprised to find no light there. And while feeling for the switch I found that the library door opening off the reception room was standing open. I went in, switched on the lights, and found Sondra. Winthrop, the Forest Man, saw me leave the drawing room, and followed me into the library." He went on to describe the manner in which the safe was blown and the Forest Man's vain search of the premises.

"Since Sondra assured me that the safe held nothing of value to anyone but yourself, the attempted burglary didn't seem important enough to trouble you with last night, sir."

"You're all too darned considerate of me!" rasped the captain. "The Bates contract was in that safe, Starbuck. And that's of definite value for the Baranov Packers just now. With it, Reynall could force me to furnish him all the fish he can use until the middle of next month. Sondy! Was that fellow here last night?"

Sondra hesitated; then admitted it. "Well, yes. He came in the full-dress uniform of an American naval officer; but—"

"Ramps Reynall's old uniform, by jiminy! I saw him, but with all that confounded punch in me I—"

"But he left before the safe was blown, Dynamite. I recognized him and—"

"The nerve of the spalpeen! Comin' here to rob me in old Ramps Reynall's uniform!" Then, to the astonishment of his listeners, the Captain threw back his head and laughed. "Burglary! Safe-blowin'! So that's what he had in mind when he boasted he'd collect on that contract. He rubbed his small, scarred hands together. 'Sondy, send Alexander for the Commissioner and the Marshal."

"But I tell you he didn't—"

"No buts. To jail he goes, and—"

"Pardon me, captain," Kemp put in hastily. "Reynall may be guilty, of course; but so far you really haven't a scrap of evidence on which to base a conviction in court."

"Conviction be hanged, Starbuck! All I want is to throw a monkey wrench into his business, and he's just after handin' me the weapon, himself. I'll stick him in the brig, and get his bail fixed so high he'll have to stay there till his trial comes up at the fall session of court. No one ever ran a herring business successfully from the inside of a hoosegow, and ye can lay to that."

"Dynamite!" Sondra put both hands on her grandfather's shoulders and shook him. "He hasn't possession of the contract. I took it out, myself—after the blow-up. I've got it now in—a—a—safe place. Nothing is missing. Not a single paper." She prayed silently that he wouldn't demand the document immediately.

"Why didn't ye say so in the first place?" The captain looked both outraged and deflated. "Humph! Well, if that's the case, I might as well get at my figuring. Get out my herring records, Sondy."

Glad to divert his mind from the contract, Sondra placed on the table the canvas-covered journals that contained herring data gathered from every source for the past fifteen years. The captain rested his hand on the pile of books and looked up at Kemp.

"Reynall can play his luck and be hanged," he said. "These records are my ace in the hole. They cover every known thing that's a factor in the movement of herring — dates, tides, winds, hours of rain and sunshine. The earlier logs record the presence of whales, too."

"Will the return of the whales affect our offshore fishing, sir?" Kemp inquired anxiously.

"Aye. Somewhat. But the whales can't be everywhere at one time; and with these records I can pretty well chart the course of any herring shoal that appears out there." He glanced up as Sondra began edging toward the door. "Where are you goin', Sondy? Hand me that pencil and some paper."

"Here you are, lamb. I—I left something aboard the Tanya. I'm going to run down and fetch it now, if there's nothing else you want, Dynamite."

Kemp came to his feet. "I'll go along, Sondra. Better put on a slicker. It's raining cats and dogs."

x x x

They were hurrying along the rain-drenched wharf, when Sondra happened to glance over at the Glory. She halted abruptly. "Oh, Kemp! Look!" The old figurehead under the stubby bowsprit was whole again, and white with a coat of priming paint. The laughter mermaid, with one arm gaily outflung, was pointing the way through the gray, slanting rain. "They've restored her!" breathed Sondra feeling a little foolish because an emotional chill ran over her.

Then her gaze fell on the Glory's charthouse, and her mood changed. In the open door stood Liane, shaking rain from a yellow sou'wester. Inside, obviously welcoming her, was Miss Jacqueline. The door closed, with Liane inside.

Sondra grasped Kemp's hand. "Hurry hurry," she said.

They found the Tanya deserted, except for Hardtack, the cook, in his galley assembling a mulligan. "I'm going to look for something I left in Chris's cabin" Sondra told the cook. "Perhaps you saw it when you dried my clothes this afternoon, Hardtack. A long, fat enelope?"

The leathery little man shook his head. "Divil an envelope," he said.

She left Kemp in the galley, and plunging into Chris's cabin, peeled off her slicker.

After a ten-minute search she sank to the settee under the porthole with a sickening conviction of loss. "It's gone!" she gasped. "Lost!"

"What's lost?" Kemp stepped in, closing the door behind him.

"The Bates contract! I took it from the safe last night, and pinned it inside my sweater. I'm sure it was there when I fell overboard, but—"

"Great Scott! Was it the contract you had in your—" Kemp stopped, his face flushing with embarrassment. Sondra looked up inquiringly.

"I mean to say, I happened to notice you had something inside your—er—sweater front, just before you went overboard," he explained. "Could Reynall have snatched it when he went to your rescue there, under water?"

Remembering Reynall's grasp on her sweater, the arms that had encircled her as she fought to clear her bracelet, she nodded. "Oh, Kemp! Whatever shall I do when Dynamite asks me for it?"

Kemp slipped off his slicker and tossed it into a corner. "Look here, Sondra," he said firmly. "Ever since that fellow Reynall landed, he's kept you in a turmoil. Forget this row between him and your grandfather. Let them fight it out in their own way. Dynamite has all the best of it, anyway; though I do think he's a bit screwy—picking a fight this way, when the season's just begun."

"Dynamite, screwy! What are you talking about, Kemp Starbuck? He didn't pick this fight. The Reynalls did. And if you think I'm going to stand by and do nothing while—"

"Oh, all right! All right." He threw up his hands; then laughed—an indulgent, amused laugh. "You adorable, loyal little thing, Sondra. No wonder I'm crazy about you. But please p-l-e-a-s-e don't let your fighting interfere with you and me." He dropped to his knees in front of her, and took both her hands in one of his. "That's all that concerns me, darling. Do you realize we've never been alone together since Reynall came? Never gone fishing or cruising, as we used to? Why, you've even lost interest in the things you and I used to like—that Russian plaque, for example. You were so happy when I got it for you; but you haven't mentioned it—I don't believe you've even thought of it—since."

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can weigh about as much as you ever did — even look healthy and strong, yet — you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dopey, tired and pepless.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They are world-famous for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up, you'll feel like bounding up the stairs as if you were floating on air. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

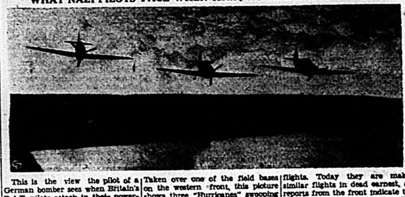
WHAT NAZI PILOTS FACE WHEN R.A.F. HURRICANES ATTACK



This is the view the pilot of a German bomber sees when Britain's R.A.F. pilots attack in their powerful Hawker "Hurricane" fighters. Taken over one of the field bases on the western front, this picture shows three "Hurricanes" swooping down on a bomber during training flights. Today they are making similar flights in dead earnest, and reports from the front indicate that they are taking a heavy toll of Goering's bombers.

Situation 'Obscure and Fluid' On West Side of Dent in Allied Line

Positions Changing Hourly Through Attack and Counter-Attack

NOT CRITICAL

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 16 —(CP—Cable)— French troops are holding the German advance on the east side of the dent into the Allied lines at Sedan, a few miles inside France from Belgium, but on the west side the situation is "obscure and fluid," it was announced here shortly after noon today.

"It is very difficult to say what is happening on the west side of the dent in the Allied line," it was stated here, "and no attempt should be made to disguise that fact that the situation is serious but not critical."

The Allied line today runs in general from east of Antwerp toward Louvain and east of Charleroi and southward toward Mezieries south of Sedan to Longwy.

Heavy attacks took place practically all along this front yesterday, the most serious and sustained being between Dinant and Sedan.

On the west side of the dent in the Allied line at Sedan, open warfare has developed and a French statement declared that "the Germans profitted by their advances yesterday to push forward armored columns which penetrated some distance into our lines," but it was emphasized here that the whole situation near Sedan is fluid, changing hourly with attacks and counter-attacks from both sides. In the north there is still heavy fighting in Zeeland, the southwestermost province of Holland, between Allied and German troops, particularly at Walcheren and Beverland, but there were no reports as to what is actually happening.

In Belgium, Liege, near the German frontier, is isolated but holding out. It appears likely that Namur, approximately midway between Brussels and Sedan, also is isolated but still holding out.

LIFE SENTENCE, LASHES GIVEN IN CRIMINAL ASSAULT

Tony Bello and Leonard Hill Given Long Terms Also 20 Lashes Each

D. HILL GETS 15 YEARS

Trio Sentenced for Attack on Young Wife of Royal Canadian Air Force Member

Toronto, May 16.—(CP) — Life imprisonment and 20 lashes were the sentences imposed Wednesday by Mr. Justice J. Keiller MacKay on Tony Bello and Leonard Hill, convicted of criminally assaulting the 26-year-old wife of a Royal Canadian Air Force member. Hill's brother, David, received 15 years and 15 lashes on a similar charge.

Each faced three separate counts. The life sentences and lashes were imposed on the most serious charge other life sentences for a second revolting offence. In addition, Bello received a concurrent term of eight years for robbery with violence and Hill ten years on this count.

David Hill's sentence covered all three counts.

The charge arose from an attack April 3 in which the men were said to have forcibly urged the woman, formerly of Regina, into an automobile, drove her to a lonely suburb and there each assaulted her. On the return to Toronto they allegedly struck her and took rings, watch and money.

Death Maximum Sentence

Maximum penalty of the most serious of the three charges is death by hanging and, in passing sentence, Mr. Justice MacKay said: "The horror, the detestation, the vileness and the grim reality of your crime cries out to high heaven and the expiation should be made on the gallows. But, a long-suffering society recoils and shrinks from the exaction of the death penalty, except where human life is taken, and reviewing authorities might commute your punishment to that less commensurate with the gravity of the crime than the one I am about to impose".

According to evidence at the trial, the woman was waiting for a street car at a busy intersection, on her way to visit a hospital. A stranger in the city, she was accosted by the three men in a car. After urging and a shove, she got in, the men promising to take her where she wanted to go.

After the assault and robbery, she was shoved from the machine and went to the nearest house, told her story and later telephoned the police. A doctor found her clothing dirty, her face tear-stained and her hair disarranged with the side of her face bruised and swollen and lumps on her head.

ADMITS AIDING IN KILLING SIX

Abe Reles Puts "Finger" on Two of His Ex-Pals and Himself in Trial

New York, May 16.—(AP)—One of the Kingpins of Brooklyn's murder-for-cash syndicate, swarthy Abe (Kid Twist) Reles, calmly put "the finger" on two of his ex-pals in court yesterday and admitted that he himself had killed—or aided in killing six men.

The star witness for the State in the murder trial of Harry (Happy) Maione and Frank (The Dash) Abbandando also admitted that he was one of the persons who harbored Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, industrial rackateer, when he was the object of a continent-wide search.

Maione and Abbandando are on trial in the ice pick slaying of George Rudnick, suspected police informer, in 1937—the first trial growing out of Brooklyn District Attorney William O'Dwyer's drive against a gang blamed for dozens of killings.

It was during cross-examination by Defence Counsel William Kleinman that Reles was drawn into his "confession".

"Did you shoot one of the Shapiros?" Kleinman asked, referring to three brothers known in the underworld.

Admits Pulling Trigger

"Not alone, I was one of the party", said Reles.

"Did you pull the trigger", interjected Judge Franklin Taylor.

"I did."

From there Reles went on to admit taking part in the killing of Jake the painter, not otherwise identified; a Labor leader named Greenblatt; a man named Rocco; Irving (Puggy) Feinstein, and Rudnick.

In direct examination, Reles said Rudnick was picked up in an automobile and driven by Abbandando to a garage where Maione and Harry Strauss, who was indicted in the killing but given a separate trial, were waiting, he said.

When he arrived at the garage, Reles, said, he found Maione, Abbandando and Strauss beside Rudnick's body.

When they were stuffing Rudnick in a car, he went on, "he (Rudnick) gave a kind of little cough and Strauss said 'Da bum ain't dead yet'. Strauss started with the ice pick and Maione hit him with the meat cleaver".

Nazis Bite Hand That Fed Them Says Van Loon

New York, May 16—(CP)—Hendrik Willem van Loon, historian and biographer, in a letter to the New York Herald Tribune revealed a little of how the Nazis made such a devastating attack behind the lines of his native country, The Netherlands. He wrote:

"Listen, America, here is something you ought to know. After the last war the people of The Netherlands took care of half a million German children, received them in their homes, fed them, clothed them and kept them for one, two or four years, that they might be restored to normal health. And twenty years later those nice, dear children, speaking of course, perfect Dutch (had they not been full-fledged members of a Dutch household for many years?), returned to the land of their hospitality, garbed in one of those 50,000 Dutch uniforms (about which our correspondents have been cabling for three months), but again, nobody would believe them, and, thusly disguised, those grateful little Germans, now completely contaminated with the Nazi virus, burned down the houses that had been their homes and struck down the hands that had fed them and saved their lives.

"But America won't listen, and America won't believe. Until it will be too late and the vermin has eaten its way into fabric of our own edifice of State.

"And for this letter I will be called a warmonger, and the Nazi boys will smile slyly and say, 'Just because we burned down his own birthplace he is perhaps just a little hysterical.' Which God forbid."

"Stabbed in the Back."

Ottawa May 16—(CP)—F. E. H. Groenman, Netherlands Minister to Canada, said in a statement tonight tha this country "has been stabbed in the back by a hords of Germans who for years had enjoyed its hospitality."

"The Netherlands are down, but not broken and will rise again because whatever may be lost, the country's soul has been saved," the Minister said.

"Our Allies have helped as much as they could. Their blood and that of our men has mingled in an attempt to stop the aggressor. It has been of no avail because time was too short, the aggression too brutal and too quick. The Netherlands are in the hands of its ravishers.

"But our noble Queen, who on May 10 proclaimed The Netherlands' burning indignation at what Germany did to her country, is safe. We will keep the fire of that indignation burning in our hearts. For this indignation is not only directed against the enemy—it is directed against all that is mean, false and mighty in the world."

PEDESTRIAN KILLED

Toronto, May 16 —(CP)— Mrs. Florence Murdock, 61, Swansea, suburban Toronto, was killed Wednesday when struck by an automobile as she stepped from between two parked cars. The fatality brought traffic deaths in Toronto this year to 31.

Police said the body of Mrs. Murdock was carried more than 70 feet on the front of the car driven by Harold Moore, 30 Toronto. An inquest will be held.

Fiery, Itching Toes and Feet

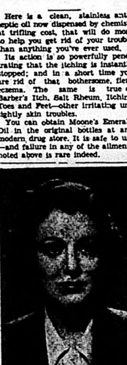
Here is a clean, stainless antiseptic oil now dispensed by chemists at trifling cost, that will do more to help you get rid of your trouble than anything you've ever used.

Its action is so powerfully penetrating that the itching is instantly stopped; and in a short time you are rid of that bothersome, fiery eczema. The same is true of Barber's Itch, Salt Rheum, Itching Toes and Feet—other irritating unsightly skin troubles.

You can obtain Moone's Emerald Oil in the original bottles at any modern drug store. It is safe to use —and failure in any of the ailments noted above is rare indeed.



Ruth Hussey in "Within The Law," railroaded to prison, although innocent of the charge of stealing. The scene is from "Within The Law," now playing at the Capitol On the same program Zane Grey's "The Light of Western Stars."

AT THE McCARTHY

"IN OLD MISSOURI"
"THE COVERED TRAILER"

Two features and each a circus of fun, is the current offering at the McCarthy Theatre.

"In Old Missouri" featuring the Weaver Brothers and Elviry, of vaudeville radio and screen fame, is the big feature attraction number on, while the Higgins Family, composed of James, Lucile and Russell Gleason, Harry Davenport and Tommy Ryan, in "The Covered Trailer" their newest laugh-loaded comedy is hit number two.

Be sure to bring the whole family to see "The Covered Trailer." It will make them all feel so good there won't be any arguments at home for a week or more. The latest chapter of "The Shadow" serial, the most exciting film attraction on the screen also is now showing at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE BELLE

"VIGIL IN THE NIGHT"

"Vigil in the Night," which is now on the Belle Theatre screen is notable for the superb work of its stars —Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne and Anne Shirley—and the heart-gripping human drama contained in this vivid picturization of the A. J. Cronin story.

Distinctive also is the unusual realism that marks, behind-the-scenes sequences in hospitals, and in this respect this RKO Radio film has the virtue of serving as a glowing tribute to the nursing sisterhood as well as being absorbing and profoundly moving screen fare.

The story follows in intensely dramatic fashion the exploits of Carole Lombard as a courageous, altruistic nurse whose life is devoted to her noble work and to her younger, less socrificing sister, played by Anne Shirley. Brian Aherne is ideally cast as a clever surgeon whose romance with Miss Lombard counterpoints the more starkly dramatic episodes and culminates in the fusing of the twain's high ideals, ambitions and destinies.

A striking departure from her well-remembered comedy characterizations, Miss Lombard's portrayal of the self-sacrificing angel of mercy as one of the most compelling dramatic interpretations ever offered on the screen. The dramatic scope of the role reveals new facts of the star's versatility. Anne Shirley as the younger nurse who allows her sister to take the blame for a criminal carelessness only to redeem herself heroically in the end, called upon emotional reserve and gave an outstanding performance.

Also adding conviction to this powerful drama by A. J. Cronin, whose "The Citadel", will be remembered by many, are the fine characterizations of Julien Mitchell, Robert Coote, Brenda Forbes, Rita Page and Peter Cushing.

The direction of George Stevens, also producer of "Vigil in the Night" is firm and facile. He has painted his picture in alternate bold, dark strokes and light, deft touches, as needed, the result being a powerful yet exquisite presentation of stark reality.

Funny Penner Comedy

Joe Penner has returned to the Belle screen in one of the most amusing films in which the popular radio and screen comedian has yet starred — "Millionaire Playboy."

The side-splitting situations are tied around the central idea of a bashful young man who is allergic to kisses—one kiss and he hiccups until someone scares him—and of an ingenious effort to effect a cure.

Penner plays the luckless fellow and makes the most of the many opportunities to evoke laughs. Most of the action takes place at a mountain resort where a friend takes him in the hope of effecting a cure.

Linda Hayes makes a fine foil for the irrepressible Penner, while other capable players in the cast include Russ Brown, Fritz Feld, Tom Kennedy and Granville Bates.

Rubinoff and his orchestra in a smart musical revue will be presented on the same program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"THE LIGHT OF WESTERN STARS"

The thrills and romance which Zane Grey so artfully stirred into his lively Western plots flavor "The Light of Western Stars." newest of the master's stories to reach the screen under the production guidance of Harry Sherman. With Victor Jory, Jo Ann Sayers, Russell "Lucky" Hayden, Morris Ankrum and Noah Beery, Jr., heading the cast, it is now playing at the Capitol.

Notable for a fine central character—that of a bad man who rides and shoots and makes love, all with equal abandon—the Zane Grey tale sets a staccato pace that never lets up for an instant. A lovely girl from the East is forced to marry the bad man at the point of a gun; the bad man rides off to battle with Mexican rebels, a gang of outlaws are blown to high heaven by explosives cached in a rocky rendezvous—these and many more pulse-tingling events fill every foot of the film.

Victor Jory plays the bad man, while Jo Ann Sayers is cast as the girl who is forced to marry him and who later tries to reform him. The direction is that of Lesley Selander.

"Within the Law"

"Within the Law," the stage triumph by Bayard Veiller, now comes to the screen in modern form.

Gustav Machaty, the Continental director of Hedy Lamarr in "Ecstasy," directed the new picture. Ruth Hussey and Tom Neal, both products of the New York Theatre Guild have their first important leading roles, Miss Hussey as Mary Turner, the character created by Jane Cowl in the original stage play. Also featured are Paul Kelly, William Gargan, Paul Cavanagh, Rita Johnson, Samuel S. Hinds, Lynne Carver, Sidney Blackmer, Jo Ann Sayers and Ann Morriss.

The original Veiller drama remains as it was played on Broadway but with modernized treatment. Contemporary New York is the locale, with Mary Turner as a department store salesgirl. She is sent to prison by the store owner for a theft she did not commit and plans for revenge.

On gaining her freedom, the girl joins a gang of clever racketeers who prey on the store magnats but always remain within the law. Mary meets his son and they are married, thus adding to her revenge. Then the youth is implicated with her in a crime. The girl relents, knowing that she loves him. Revenge is forgotten as the gangster leader shoulders the guilt, which is rightfully his, and the young couple face life in the future within the law in letter as well as spirit.

WALL STREET

New York, May 16 (AP)—Steels and a few specialties stood staunchly in a general ragged stock market today. These groups showed about all that was left of a morning rally as trading approached the fourth hour.

Advances of fractions to around 3 points were registered for Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, U.S. Steel, Republic, Dow Chemical, Air Reduction, Johns Manville, Eastman, J. C. Penney, and Phillip Morris. Aircrafts slipped after an early flight, then recovered.

In the Canadian group Canadian Pacific, Dome and Distillers Seagram all improved fractionally. Lake Shore was off a point, Canada 4's eased one quarter.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 16—(CP)— The Toronto market today recovered a small part of its recent losses in quiet trading through the early part of the session. The golds led with a gain of 1.14 in the index while base metal shares added .70 and industrials .58. Turnover in the first three hours was off to 306,000 shares.

Practically all industrial groups ruled higher. Gains ranged up to 2 points or more and nearly all interlisted leaders moved ahead. Papers, foods, senior oils and utilities especially were more cheerful.

Cheaper base metal issues were in demand at better prices. Ventures and Waite-Amulet added about 20 cents and Steep Rock firmed 10 cents or more. In the golds gains of 5 to 15 cents marked most of the active traders.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, May 16—(CP)— There were no sales on cattle up to mid-session on the Toronto livestock exchange today. No sales of sheep or lambs was reported. Hogs were steady. Veal calves were steady. The cattle holdover from Wednesday was 100 head. Receipts reported by the Dominion livestock branch were: cattle 60, calves 10, hogs 360.

GUARD AT 'PEN' LOSES HIS LIFE

Body is Found in Shallow Water 15 Feet From His Submerged Boat

Kingston, Ont., May 16—(CP)—Kenneth Haig, 49-year-old Kingston Penitentiary guard, was found drowned today in Lake Ontario. His motor launch was submerged in shallow water about 15 feet from the body.

The body was found by Ald. C. P. Dalton and his gardener, Wilfrid Austin. It is believed that the launch was swamped during Wednesday night's gale. Haig had been seen working at it earlier.

Haig, a guard at the penitentiary for the past six years, is survived by his widow, two sons and two daughters.

Nazi Gains in Belgium Being Made at Expense Of 'Enormous Losses'

Brussels, May 16—(CP Havas)—German gains in Belgium are being made at the expense of "enormous losses" in men and materials, Foreign Minister Paul-Henri Spaak said today.

In sectors taken by the Germans, there are "veritable mounds" of destroyed tanks. He said the German Air Force is jeopardizing its numerical superiority by making enormous sacrifices in attaining objectives.

Spaak said the morale of the Allied troops is "excellent," especially since the Belgian and Franco-British troops joined action. There is a steady flow of reinforcements to the front, he said.

In a broadcast speech Communications Minister Jean Delfosse said "Franco-British aid is becoming more effective every hour."

"Our strength of resistance is increasing as the Germans draw farther from their bases and extend their communication lines," Delfosse said.

Belgian troops are "performing miracles of heroism" and are inflicting heavy losses upon the enemy.

Butter Declines On Light Demand

Toronto, May 16 — Prevailing poor demand caused another slight decline in butter prices during yesterday's session of the Toronto open produce market, but eggs remained steady.

While available supplies were not heavy with no selling pressure evident, the butter market sagged as buyers merely nibbled at offerings. A few early sales of top grade Ontario creamery solids were recorded at 23 cents per pound, but holders found it difficult to arouse buying interest when they offered at ¼ cent under this figure in afternoon dealings.

Former prices were quoted on the egg market. Volume of fresh receipts and demand were about balanced. Government inspected shipments continued to command ½ cent per dozen premium.

Montreal Produce.

Montreal, May 16 —(CP)— Produce market prices here, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 24¼c to 24½c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 23¾c to 24c.

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large 23½c to 24c; A-medium, 21½c; A-pullets, 19c; B, 21½c; C, 18½c. Receipts: 4,103 cases.

Wheat Price Break In Chicago Almost Greatest in History

Chicago, May 16—(AP) — The roar of Europe's war has produced an earthquake in Chicago's teeming wheat pit, centre of world trade in the most important single food commodity.

A price break without parallel in days of the first Great War and seldom equalled in grain trade history occurred in the wake of the German smash on the western front.

It upset the careful calculations of millions of persons and startled agriculture and the many Allied interests and businesses.

In the first three days of this week the market value of the new wheat crop which United States farmers will begin harvesting within a month was cut more than $125,000,000.

The eyes of grain and agricultural interests—and of the experts in the government's regulatory commodity exchange administration—hence were focused today on the sensitive wheat market, geared to the tide of war and semi-demoralized by apparently frantic selling.

The market's behavior in the European crisis was watched not only for its immediate effect but also for an indication of economic changes to be wrought by Germany's launching of the fight to the finish.

The war-inspired selling began Monday and up until the start of dealings in the crowded wheat pit this morning prices had collapsed 23 cents a bushel. Other grain prices dropped in unison, rye losing even more ground.

Most of the price gains inspired by the war and built up laboriously in the last eight months were wiped out. Before the opening today wheat prices were the lowest since last November and rye the lowest since just before the war started.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, May 16—(CP)—Bacon-hog markets reporting early today showed unchanged prices. Dressedweight: Brantford $10.50, Hull $10.40, London $10.40 plus transportation, Stratford $10.40 plus transportation.

Chatham later reported prices unchanged there at $7.50 liveweight and $10.30 dressedweight.

BOMBERS PICK OUT MANY OBJECTIVES

Communique

The text of the Air Ministry's announcement:

"The Royal Air Force last night carried out east of the Rhine a big offensive against the enemy's road and rail communications which are supporting his forces in their invasion of the Low Countries and Luxembourg.

"The attacks lasted throughout the night and many tons of bombs were released. Road and rail communications were attacked at many points, fires broke out and heavy explosions were caused.

"This was the heaviest attack yet made by the Royal Air Force during the war."

Push Slowing Down

Allied war communiques declared that Germany's big push through the Low Countries was being slowed down by the stiffening resistance of land and air forces.

British Tommies thrown into the sagging Belgian line were reported in a headquarters communique to have "successfully held back serious German attacks" in hard fighting.

Waves of Allied planes broke up mechanized forces massed by the Germans in an attempt to capture Brussels and turn the flank of French fortified lines.

A British headquarters communique said that since the start of the Lowlands offensive the air force with the British expeditionary force has destroyed at least 124 German planes, while 23 have been downed by anti-aircraft fire.

150 Planes Used

British headquarters said an Allied fleet of 150 planes raked German lines converging on the Meuse at Sedan yesterday and their bombing and machine gunning halted the German advance and allowed the French to counter attack.

The loss of 35 French and British planes in the stafing operation was called "not excessive."

Repercussions from the funfire at the great battle in progress in Belgium shook houses at Deal on the southeast coast of England, 60 miles from the continental coast. Inhabitants recalled that cannonading in Flanders' fields a generation ago similarly rattled windows and doors.

Wounded Arrive in England

Wounded from fighting zones began arriving in England. Between 200 and 300 British casualties, half of them stretcher cases, arrived at Liverpool early today from France and Norway.

Tommies wounded in the first engagements in the Low Countries remarked grimly: "We've got something to beat."

A Belgian communique declared that the Liege forts (some of which Germany claims to have taken) "continue to resist" in the Maastricht sector, where the Germans broke through.

Reuters News Agency reported that the Belgian government had decided to remain in Brussels despite the threat broadcast by the Germans that the city would be devastated if military operations continued there.

Flank Rests on Zeeland

In the Low Country fighting British land forces were reported resting their left flank on Zeeland, the Dutch province, and Antwerp, in Belgium. Their lines were said to cover Brussels.

A south British coast port got a scare early today from a heavy burst of gunfire. A plane flying at great height turned away from a barrage of shells. No air raid warning was given and no bombs were dropped.

At home, Lord Woolton, Food Minister, announced reductions in June in sugar, bacon and butter rations but he added this reassuring statement:

"Whatever happens, you shall have food."

Given More Food

In two instances the reductions put the rations back to the identical amounts that were allowed when the rationing scheme first went into effect last February.

Regulations allowed each person four ounces of bacon and butter and eight ounces of sugar per week. Following discovery that the nation's surpluses of these foods were greater than was originally estimated the bacon and butter rations were raised temporarily to eight ounces each and sugar to 12 ounces.

The bacon reduction has not yet been announced but it will be "soon" Lord Woolton said.

GREECE POURS

It was reported anew, without confirmation, that Great Britain was pressing Greece for permission to establish naval bases on Greek Islands.

The British-French battle fleet based at Alexandria, Egypt, had put to sea for "scheduled manoeuvres" and this caused new uneasiness among the Greeks that hostilities might be impending.

Colonel Papademas, Undersecretary of War and outranked only by Premier John Metaxas as head of Greece's armed forces, arrived at the frontier region of Yanina to take personal charge of general preparedness measures.

The Yanina district on the Greek mainland is flanked at sea by the Greek island of Corfu, at the neck of the Adriatic, the Otranto Strait.

Troops at Piraeus, near Athens, began embarking and disembarking exercises with infantry, cavalry, artillery, aviation and engineering units participating. Similar exercises were to be conducted at other ports.

Anglo-French Fleet in Practice

The booming guns of the British-French fleet in their practice off Alexandria formed an obligato for the fluctuating fears of southeastern Europe, the Near East and Egypt.

Recently the greatest concern has been over the possibility that Italy would drop her non-belligerent or "pre-belligerent" status and join Germany.

An Alexandria dispatch said that thousands of Italians in Egypt were starting to liquidate their households and businesses while Italian sources there acknowledged that the situation was "delicate."

Italians also were reported leaving Turkey.

NEW LARGE-SCALE

French Marshal Forces

The French command has marshalled forces to meet them.

At Sedan, where the Germans yesterday secured a foothold east of the city, they did not succeed in debouching from the small pocket held on the left bank of the river. French counter-attacks were in progress along the Meuse in that sector and succeeded, the spokesman said, in "re-establishing the situation"

Along the rest of the Maginot Line, from Sedan to the Swiss frontier, the situation remained absolutely unchanged, with only local actions occurring at various points.

In the north Allied troops now based on Antwerp have entered into contact with the Dutch forces defending Zeeland province.

Morning Communique

The morning communique of the High Command stated:-

"The battle in the regions of Namur and Sedan has assumed the character of a war of movement, with motorized and air forces participating on both sides. In the higher interest of the conduct of operations, no precise information on the actions in progress can be given at present."

The military spokesman said that the latter phrase of the communique was to be interpreted as a virtual order to the whole population to maintain a disciplined silence. The spokesman warned the press against the wild rumors brought south by the refugees coming down from the war zone who suffered bombing attacks while en route.

Meanwhile German air raids on Nancy, south of Sedan and 40 miles inside the French-German frontier, killed and wounded an undisclosed number of persons and caused nine alarms.

Six Alarms Sounded

Six alarms were sounded during the night in the region of Lille, just inside the French border 60 miles west of Brussels, and two in the area of Le Havre, French channel port, this morning. It was not disclosed immediately whether any bombs were dropped.

It became apparent that Germany's army, slowed by fierce counter - attacks at Sedan, was crashing headlong into Allied warfare after the Nazis' own style in a great battle of movement.

This was the picture of the conflict to be pieced together in Paris.

Germany's vaunted war of speed and flexibility which Blitzkrieged Poland was adopted by the French to meet thrusts of Nazi tanks on the 50-mile front from Sedan to Namur, Belgium.

When German troops were halted in the Sedan sector by French counter - attacks onrushing Nazi tanks had succeeded in battering their way across the Meuse at three points

Pushed back by strafing planes and powerful tanks, the French infantry had given way.

Re-formed to Hold Infantry

Then the defending lines reformed to hold off the Nazi infantry rushing into three gaps in the Meuse line.

At the same time French tanks closed in behind the lines to engage those of the enemy that had broken through.

The decision of the French high command to fight speed with speed meant that it had abandoned, at least for the moment, any plan to fight a war of position in the line of concrete pill boxes built on the Belgian frontier as a northwesterly extention of France's Maginot Line.

Liege Forts Hold

In Belgium, said the Belgian high command, the Liege forts "continue to resist." King Leopold of the Belgians called by radio on the Forts of Liege to resist to the utmost for the Fatherland.

The Belgians told of several infantry engagements which checked German attempts to advance, of demolitions which hampered seriously the movements of the Reichwehr and of stiff and effective defence against German warplanes.

Today, the French infantry clung to new positions after counter-attacks which the War Ministry said had driven back across the river the Germans who had punched a 10-mile salient into French territory south of Sedan day before yesterday.

The French War Ministry acknowledged that Germans crossing the Meuse between Namur and Mezieres had "pierced some Allied positions." Mezieres is five miles inside France.

Again a War Office spokesman characterized the situation as "serious but not critical."

All told, there were some 20 divisions, or about 300,000 men on each side, engaged in the developing battle of the Meuse.

MODEL OF FAMOUS C. N. R. '6,400' NOW ON DISPLAY

Four-Foot Model of Famous Locomotive Complete in All Detail May be Seen in Window of C.N.R. Ticket Office

BUILT BY LEO FLAGLER

Handsome true-to-scale models of the famous C.N.R. "6,400" locomotive, one of which drew the Royal Train during Their Majesties visit here last May and a Royal Coach are now on display in the windows of the C.N.R. Ticket Office, Front Street, attracting the admiring attention of crowds of passersby.

Of especial interest to Bellevillians and more particularly to those connected with the railway, is the four-foot model of the locomotive. The work of Mr. Leo Flagler formerly of 344 Bleecker Avenue, but now of Montreal, the model is perfect in every detail. Railroad engineers who have viewed it state that it is true to type of the newest locomotive now operated by the railway.

Its long sleek lines, streamlined body, its eight large drive wheels, coal-tender and water-tank are exact replicas of the huge "Iron Horses" that daily operate in transcontinental runs. A battery ingeniously hidden in the tender, furnishes lights.

The model was built from Mr. Flagler's own plans and took eleven months to complete. The most of the work was done while he was a student at Belleville Collegiate Institute.

The Royal Coach is a masterpiece of model-work in white and gold. Typical of the royal equipages that furnished transportation for monarchs and their queens centuries ago, it is complete with royal blue plush upholstery, golden windows and wheels, and is equipped with delicate springs. It took ten months to complete and is another evidence of the clever handiwork of its builder.

ALLIES EXPECTED TO ENTER NARVIK

Allied Wheeling Movement Threatens to Cut Off Nazi Retreat Into Sweden

With the Allied Forces on the Narvik Front, May 16—(CP)—Allied troops expected to enter Narvik momentarily today and take the beleaguered Norwegian iron-ore city from its Nazi defenders.

Bombed at dawn today by Allied planes and harassed by French infiltration troops supported by tanks the Germans appeared near the end of their tether.

An Allied wheeling movement, featured by attacks on the town of Stordalen, meanwhile threatened to cut off the Germans from the railway to the Swedish border. The Nazis were running low of ammunition and in the last 24 hours had received only scant supplies dropped by parachute from transport planes.

Parts of City Isolated

That part of Brussels in which the legations and embassies are concentrated was isolated from the rest of the city this morning by a troop cordon. Only persons with special passes could get through.

The streets in this area were empty, except for military dispatch-riders and official cars.

The rest of the city looked almost normal. Street cars and buses circulated, and shops and restaurants were open—the latter, however, only at certain hours.

But the refugees pouring toward the railway stations were not a normal sight. About 200,000 persons were estimated to have left the capital already. In the outskirts roads were jammed with refugees heading for France.

Also to be seen were groups of men marching to their assembly points for mobilization. They were cheered by civilians as they passed by singing.

FAST, LIGHTWEIGHT

"Fighters will be regarded as a defence weapon—a kind of long-range anti-aircraft "artillery".

Heavy bombers will be looked upon as long range "heavy artillery" or mopping up and work where speed is not too essential.

Extreme Mobility.

The lightweight, jack-of-all trades planes would be a kind of new model "cavalry". They would have extreme mobility, the ability to attack and feint and the capacity to convoy aerial troop transports and harass communications, supply lines and moving troops.

In this third field military experts see the biggest strides.

The new British Beaufort, which is said to be proving particularly effective in the low countries campaign, is in line with the trend toward the use of the middleweight plane.

It is heavily armed, with good range; fast and designed especially for strafing troops and making low flying bomb attacks.

The Defiant also is a step in the same direction. It is purely a fighter, but it is a two-seater, more heavily armed, with a powered gun turret.

It is a step up toward the middleweight class from lightweight planes as the Beaufort is a step down from the heavyweight bomber.

government might need protection from the minorities.

"I hope, however," he said, "that we shall not be as conscious of minorities and majorities as it may have been necessary for us to be in previous parliaments and that we shall all feel a sense of collective responsibility."

Expect Full Account

Mr. Hanson said the opposition would expect from the government a full account of its stewardship in the past seven months. The people who had perhaps been too complacent up to now were demanding it.

"Canada's participation in this great conflict which, I fear may grow worse instead of better," he said, "should be bounded only by our ability in men, in intelligence, and in treasure."

Mr. King and Mr. Hanson said Mr. Glen possessed the qualities of impartiality, good temper and firmness necessary to enable him to safeguard the rights of the House and of every member and to preside over its deliberations.

The Senate assembled in mid morning to install Hon. George Parent, veteran of the upper chamber from Quebec, as Speaker in succession to Hon. W. E. Foster of New Brunswick.

At the other end of the main corridor of the Parliament Buildings, Commoners renewed acquaintance and many of the 82 newcomers to parliament moved slowly through the aisles searching for seats assigned them.

15 New Senate Members

There were new faces in the Senate, too, with 15 new members of the Red Chamber to be sworn in.

Following the usual prayers, the galleries were opened and spectators, majority of them friends and relatives of the new senators, slowly took their seats.

The clerk informed the Speaker there were new senators to be introduced and Senator Raoul Dandurand, government leader of the upper chamber, left the House and returned a moment later with Hon. Fernand Fafard, former Liberal member of parliament for L'Islet. Mr. Fafard was the first senator to be sworn in.

Senators Introduced.

Following Senator Fafard, the other fourteen new senators were introduced in the following order: Hon. J. C. Elliott, London, Ont., former Postmaster-General; Arthur L. Beaubien, St. Jean Baptiste, Man., former member of Parliament for Provencher; John J. Stevenson, Regina farmer; Dr. Aristide Blais, noted Edmonton physician; Donald MacLennan, of Inverness, N.S., former member of Parliament for Inverness-Richmond; Charles P. Howard, Sherbrooke, Que., former member of Parliament for that constituency.

Elie Beauregard, Montreal lawyer; Athananse David, Montreal lawyer and former Quebec Provincial Secretary; E. C. St. Pere, Montreal, former member of Parliament for Montreal-Hochelaga; Salter Hayden, Toronto financier; Norman McL. Paterson, grain and shipping magnate from Fort William, Ont.

W. J. Hushion, Montreal, former member of Parliament for Montreal-St. Ann's; J. J. Duffus Peterborough, Ont., former member of Parliament for that constituency; and W. D. Euler, Kitchener, Ont., newspaper publisher and former Minister of Trade and Commerce.

Senator Dandurand moved adjournment of the Senate until noon.

COUNTY POLICE COURT

William Farrar, Trenton, was sentenced to serve two months in the common jail by Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in today's County Police Court here after he had pleaded guilty to a charge of theft, which had taken place in Sudbury some weeks ago. Farrar was arrested in Trenton on a warrant issued in Sudbury and today elected summary trial before Magistrate Butler and pleaded guilty to the theft of an overcoat, suit of clothes and other wearing apparel stolen in Sudbury.

"Restitution has been made in this case and as the accused has not troubled the authorities too much I would recommend a moderate sentence," stated Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C.

Second Infringement

Fred Babcooke Deseronto, was convicted of a second offence of violating the Game and Fishery Act regulations, to wit the transportation of game fish, pickerel taken from provincial waters. He was fined $20.00 and costs for a second such offence. The charge was preferred by Game Warden Herb McCabe, who informed the court this was Babcooke's second offence.

Stanley Kleinstuber, Sulphide, was fined $25.00 and costs after being convicted of the illegal possession of liquor. "This charge could have been more serious", prompted Mr. Donnan, which resulted in the increased fine being imposed.

A local teen-aged youth was sentencer to serve 15 days in the common jail after being convicted of unlawfully taking fish from local waters, namely by means of a gill net. The lad was unable to pay a ten dollar fine, he said.

Given Suspended Sentence

Pte. Angus Lowery, of the C.A.S.F., appeared on a charge of taking part in an affray, fighting and generally alarming the public in the village of Stirling recently. "I'll plead guilty to fighting," replied Lowery, who was later given three months' suspended sentence, upon the payment of the costs thereof.

"This man was recently returned home from England and is awaiting a final medical board. He went overseas with the First Division and as I understand it this whole trouble is the result of a drinking bout", pointed out Mr. Donnan.

When asked his age today, Lowery stated he was forty-seven.

"Did you tell the military authorities your right age when you signed up last fall?" asked Mr. Donnan.

"No sir," replied Lowery as he smiled knowingly.

Cincinnati Reds Score 5 Runs In First Inning to Defeat Dodgers and Regain 1st Place

Gene Thompson, Hurling for Reds, Allows Only Five Hits

HUBBELL WINS

Giant Hurler Keeps Eight Hits Well Scattered—French Shutout Boston Bees

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

The National League still is a pitcher's league. The games yesterday should have satisfied any doubters.

Cincinnati Reds beat Brooklyn Dodgers 5-2 on the five-hit hurling of Gene Thompson and a merry-go-round in the first inning; Larry French held Boston Bees to two hits as Chicago Cubs triumphed 2-0. Lean old Carl Hubbell of New York Giants kept eight hits well scattered in penning up Pittsburgh Pirates 5-2. And Kirby Higbe, the Philadelphia speedballer, easily whipped St. Louis Cardinals 6-3 on 11 hits.

The game at Brooklyn, which put the Reds back on top in the see-saw race for the league lead, started out like a whirlwind with Cincinnati sending 11 men to the plate and scoring all its five runs. Yet the McKecknie men got only four hits in the big blast.

Bill Werber led off with a home run against Whitlow Wyatt, two walks and a single filled the bases and Bill Hershberger quickly cleared them with a triple. Then Van Mungo took over and John Rizzo hits his first pitch for another run—Cincinnati's last.

Thompson had his sinker working perfectly and would have had a shut out except for a letup in the third when Herman Franks doubled and a walk and two singles scored both Brooklyn's runs.

French Buffaloes Boston

French's southpaw slants had Boston helpless, but Nick Strincevich nearly matched him. For six innings each gave up only one scratch single.

The Chicago runs came in the eighth when an error put French on first, a triple by Stanley Hack brought him home, and a single by Bill Herman scored Hack.

The only runs Hubbell permitted the Pirates were home runs by Lee Handley on the first pitch of the game and by Bob Elliott in the fourth. The 36-year-old lefthander used his screwball sparingly, but kept the game always under control. Joe Moore gave him a margin in the third with a two-run homer.

Higbe's assignment against the Cardinals was a snap after the Phillies slapped out six singles for six runs in the second inning. As a result he never had to bear down very hard and even three runs for St. Louis in the fifth on Joe Orengo's home run, two singles and a double by Johnny Mize didn't create much of a stir.

All four games in the American League were rained out.

WINS FOR THIRD TIME

Clayton Bishop, Onsett, Mass., motorboat driver, won the coveted Hearst Trophy, for the third time in the annual Albany-to-New York race—one of the most gruelling of motorboat classics. At TOP Bishop is shown with the trophy, and BELOW he is pictured hurtling his craft over the finish line. Bishop bested 113 drivers in the 150-mile grind.

McCarthy Not Worrying Over Slump of Yanks

St. Louis, May 16(AP)—Manager Joe McCarthy of New York Yankees doesn't seem to be losing any sleep over the dismal beginning of his world champions this season.

His biggest job has been to prevent the long losing streak from damaging the morale of the club—suddenly in last place in the American Baseball League after growing accustomed through the years to substantial leads.

Playing under such pressure is something new for them, but the boss is authority for the statement it still is a great ball club and that the players feel they will snap out of it before long.

"I'm not going to start worrying after all these years," he said today. "You can't do any good worrying. When you're in a slump nothing goes right."

"I change pitchers and the new one is hit harder than the fellow he relieved," he laughed. "I let a pitcher stay in there and the attack grows heavier. When the pitching is good the defense is bad or we don't hit.

"Nothing much you can do about it, is there?"

Two successive postponed games spoiled the Yankees' hopes of changing their luck against the Browns.

DARK COMET IS LAME AFTER HEAVY WORKOUT

Favorite for King's Plate is Doubtful Starter on Saturday

HOOD IS "SHARP"

Silvos, Ring Wise and Frobisher Likely to Draw Strongest Support

Toronto, May 15 (CP)—The ticklish problem of healing a lame foreleg and so allow Dark Comet, the favorite, to start in the 81st running of the King's Plate, today faced handlers of the stable of G. M. Hendrie of Hamilton.

Stock of the game three-year-old took a drop yesterday after George C. Hendrie, nephew of the owner, announced that the left foreleg had gone lame. He expressed hope, however, that the injury was not serious and that the gelding would be ready to start in the nine furlongs gallop for the King's 50 Guineas and a $7,500 added purse.

Dark Comet pulled up lame after a workout last Saturday. Rumors spread that the favorite had gone wrong, but "Red" Hamilton, Hendrie's trainer, remained mum. While Hendrie watched yesterday, Dark Comet was jogged about the turf at Woodbine Park. After the horse was returned to the barn George C. Hendrie revealed that the horse was lame.

The injury was a severe blow to the Hamilton-owned stable. It recalled the case of Glanford, a Hendrie hope four years ago. He was nominated for the big race, but finally had to be withdrawn as the result of shelled hooves.

Attention was turned to the balance of the field of 12 expected to start after the news of the injury spread.

Jack McIntyre's Hood was reported "sharp as a tack." Others drawing support were J. E. Frowde Seagram's Silvos, Harry Gidding's Ring Wise and Parkwood Stable's Frobisher.

ROCHESTER WINGS IN SECOND PLACE OF INT. LEAGUE

Hottest Team in Loop at Present Time, Winning Eleven of Last Thirteen Games

LEAFS SPLIT

Toronto Defeats Orioles 3-0 in First Game and Lost Second 3-1 in 11 Innings

(By The Associated Press)

Rochester Red Wings, hottest team in the International League today, haven't been getting much pitching lately, but unlike their parent club, St. Louis Cardinals, they aren't letting it worry them.

The Wings, winners of 11 of their last 13 games have found out that if you make a lot of runs first, the other club is going to find it hard catching up. They have averaged 10 hits and nine runs a game, and have hauled themselves to within one game of the league-leading Jersey City Giants.

An 8-1 victory over the pace-setters yesterday gave Rochester undisputed possession of second place, as Baltimore Orioles, who were tied with them, split a twin bill with Toronto Maple Leafs, winning the nightcap 3-1 in 11 innings after dropping the opener 3-0.

Herschel Lyons hurled for the Red Wings yesterday and went the distance, although nicked for 11 safeties, while his mates fell on a quartet of Jersey City moundsmen for 13 safe blows off Manuel Salvo, Bill Harris and Hugh East. They were finally stopped by Roy Henshaw.

Nick Etten's home run, with one on in the 11th, gave Baltimore an even break with Toronto and broke up a clever mound duel between Orlim Collier of the Orioles and Johnny Pezzullo. Collier gave up three singles in the seventh for the only Leaf run.

Buffalo Bisons recaptured fourth place from Newark by nosing out the Bears 8-6 in the only other game played yesterday. Rain caused postponement of Syracuse-Montreal contest. Homers by Pat Mullin, Johnny Kroner and Clyde McCullough gave Buffalo the margin of victory.

G. M. HENDRIE ADMITS HORSE A LITTLE SORE

Owner of Dark Comet, Eligible for King's Plate, Issues Statement

McTAGUE TO RIDE

George M. Hendrie, owner of Dark Comet, made a public announcement yesterday which clears up all speculation on the condition of the favorite for the King's Plate. Since the gelding showed signs of soreness after his workout of last Saturday morning, when he sped a mile in 1:44 and galloped out the Plate distance of a mile and a furlong in 1:58 3-5, rumors have been flying thick and fast. Mr. Hendrie feels that the general public is entitled to know all the facts about the horse, chiefly because he is at present favored to win Saturday's running of Canada's foremost stake.

It is frankly admitted by Mr. Hendrie that Dark Comet is not a thoroughly sound horse. He wants the public to know that. Following Saturday's testing mile and a furlong trial, Dark Comet showed definite signs of soreness. That is the reason he was only walked on Sunday and Monday mornings, and jogged with a pony, minus "tack" on Tuesday morning.

All signs of soreness had disappeared by this time and the gelding kept his training engagement, a final trial over the complete route, on Wednesday morning. Having in mind the horse's condition, no unnecessary chances were taken in asking him for speed—and, indeed, he does not need any further sharpening up, for he is as fit right now as hands can make him for the test. Dark Comet came back in good shape after his easy mile and a furlong in 2:02 4-5 Wednesday morning.

Mr. Hendrie hasn't any serious misgivings about the horse breaking down or seriously injuring himself in the race, or he certainly would not start him. He wants the horse to have this chance to add the greatest of all Canadian stakes to his record, and he believes the public wants to see the horse keep the engagement, so he will start. Word came from Narranganset yesterday that Jockey Charlie McTague is on his way here to ride Dark Comet. He was aboard the gelding in his Orpen Cup and Saucer score last fall at Long Branch Park, and gave Dark Comet a perfect ride to win that stake.

FOXX NAMES MYTHICAL NINE

Team Would Have Batting Average of 323 With Plenty of Defence and Good Pitching

Chicago, May 16 AP). — Jimmy Foxx, who qualifies as an authority on the subject of hitting, lined up a power-plus mythical baseball team today, which he guaranteed would send chills through all opposing mythical pitchers, even on their hottest days.

Foxx, the Boston Red Sox first sacker who has slammed out eight homers this season and currently leads the major leagues in runs batted in, emphasized his selections were made strictly on consistent slugging ability, with defensive ability not considered. His mythical club has a lot of defensive class, however, and the only thing wrong with it is that Jimmy declined to put himself in "uniform."

Here is the powerhouse aggregation, made up entirely of active players: Catchers, Bill Dickey, New York Yankees; Ernie Lombardi, Cincinnati; Don Padgett, St. Louis Cardinals; pitchers, Red Ruffing, Yanks Bucky Walters, Cincinnati; Emil Leonard, Washington and Jim Bagby, Boston Red Sox; third base, Ken Keltner, Cleveland; shortstop, Joe Cronin Boston Red Sox; second base, Charley Gehringer, Detroit; first base, John Mize, Cardinals, and from left to right in the outfield, Joe Medwick, Cardinals; Joe DiMaggio, Yanks and Ted Williams, Red Sox.

"That team is selected strictly for hitting ability" he said. "On a defense standpoint I'd take Luke Appling, Chicago White Sox, or Arky Vaughan, Pittsburgh, over Cronin, and Joe Gordon, Yanks, or Bob Doerr of our club over Gehringer. But when the chips are down I'll take Cronin and Gehringer at the plate."

Foxx again sidestepped when he named Mize, Williams, Joe DiMaggio and Charley Keller (Yankees) as the four greatest natural hitters now in baseball. Exclusive of pitchers, the collective lifetime major league hitting average of his mythical team is .323 plus.

At 32, Foxx in his seventeenth season in organized baseball, his first having been spent with Easton of the Eastern Shore League. Now hitting an even .300, his lifetime major league plate mark is .337, and his World Series average .344.

CHIEFS RETURN BLANTON

Syracuse, N.Y., May 16 (AP)—The office of the Syracuse International League club announced today it had returned Pitcher Darrell (Cy) Blanton to Pittsburgh.

Blanton was purchased in midwinter for $10,000, with a condition that the Chiefs had thirty days to satisfy themselves the pitcher's arm had recovered from its weakness of last year.

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

DID YOU KNOW THAT efforts to consolidate the Belleville City and Mercantile Softball Leagues will be made soon? . . . Secretary Harry Knott is a patient in the Belleville General Hospital, where he underwent an operation yesterday. . . . It is expected Harry will be on hand for the opening of the softball season, however. . . . Minus his red mask, Stan Luther, the Montreal wrestler who appeared hooded here last week, will meet Pedro Valdez of Mexico, at the Arena Friday night? . . . That the local Kinsmen Club is contemplating a marble tournament among the kiddies, as well as their annual Kid Kar Derby? . . That Jackie Kearns, recently expelled American jockey, is with the Sims Exposition, now playing here? . . . Jackie Cooper, of Kansas City, with his boat Tops III, is a definite entry in the Picton regatta and is also expected to race at the Belleville Rotary Club meet also. . . . That Grover Cleveland Alexander is still eking out a living running a flea circus along Broadway.

It looks as though the old game of baseball is just about washed up and ready for the cleaners in Eastern Ontario. The Bay of Quinte League was to have met here last night, but only H. M. (Dolly) Gray, who is acting as sugar-daddy for the local entry, was present and indicated intentions of continuing. Picton did not put in an appearance, while even President Mayor McKibbon and Secretary Harry Doyle ignored the conclave. Captain Sills of the 47th Battery in Napanee was on hand to say he expected his unit to be called into active service in the near future and therefore the "artillerymen" were unable to give a definite answer in regards to league affiliation at this time. Louie Yanover of Picton phoned to say that the Prince Edward County seat team would not entertain a two-teamed setup of Belleville and Picton, while the Lake Shore loop apparently is not interested in an interlocking working agreement with the Quinte gang. If baseball passes into oblivion in this district in 1940 it will mean no baseball will be played east of Cobourg, with the exception of the Kingston City League.

However, there seems to be an ember of interest shown among the local ball players, as some 25 or 30 answered the initial call for practice at the Collegiate Campus last night. It was not surprising to see 14-year-old Jimmie Mills, son of Peeney Mills, out shagging flies for his first "big time" practice. Like father, like son, they do say. A good infield could be garnered in Belleville, judging from last night's turn out of Vince Guay, Lornie Jarrell, Bill McQuade, Harold Reid and a couple of other promising-looking youngsters. Joe Kelleher and Lefty Weeks, who returned home after a sojourn in Northern Ontario recently, were limbering up their arms, while we understand Speedy St. Louis has agreed to turn out and give a hand with the catching duties, but unless something can be done regarding the formation of a league, baseball is like a turkey dinner the day after Christmas—all done. The next move lies in the hands of President McKibbon and Secretary Doyle, but unless the 47th Battery sponsors a club, it's curtains for baseball here.

The other evening Red Townsend's junior "mushballers" journeyed over to the Airport for a practice softball game. The Flyer boys beat the local kids 16-2. Steve Hook and Mike Powers shared the hurling duties of the juniors, while the "birdmen" used four moundsmen, as they were trying out players. "This edition of the Flyers is as good a softball team as I've ever seen in this section of the province," stated Townsend as he lauded the Flyers' pitching staff especially. If the Airmen are as strong as Townsend says they appear, will the O.A.S.A. permit them to play intermediate "B" softball? After all the R.C.A.F. have some 2,000 men to draw from at Trenton. They play here Friday.

The Peterboro' scribe wants to know what's going on in Belleville baseball circles as there was reference made in Ottawa suggesting Belleville was building for E.O.B.A. competition. "It's all news to us, pal." Where the Capital City scribe got the fodder to manufacture that story is beyond this corner, and the Liftlock City scribe is right when he says we haven't got a good intermediate team here.

Do you remember when Brooklyn Dodgers and Chicago Cubs played to a 9-9 tie before darkness closed their game at the end of 19 innings one year ago today? It was the longest game in the National League since Aug. 17, 1932, when the Cubs beat Boston 3-2 in 19 innings.

There is talk of the South Hastings League meeting in the near future to discuss the possibilities of organization for 1940. Last season the S.H.L. was composed of Latta, Shannonville, Foxboro and the champion Cannifton club. Incidentally if there's a ball team in Foxboro they'll have to return to their old diamond, as the more recent park is now utilized otherwise.

Sport Spice — Junior Thompson held the Dodgers at bay and the Reds are now leading the National League by virtue of a win over the Dodgers yesterday.. Les Canadiens bought Morey Rinstead, of the Vancouver Lions yesterday....Apparently Dick Irwin believes Horace Greeley's suggestion of "go west young man"; because earlier in the week Les Canadiens purchased Moren Mercer, defenceman, and Jack Adams (no relation to Red Wing Jawn), a centre player, from the same club....Burleigh Grimes, former major league pitcher, was married to Miss Ines Martin at Grand Rapids yesterday..Grimes gave his age as 36....They do say Dark Comet has gone lame, but then the King's Plate has been won by allegedly crippled horses before.

Fourteen Golfers To Take Part in Round-Robin Tourney

New York, May 16—(AP)—Fourteen top flight golfers of the United States and an added entry from the Argentine, Martin Pose, tee off at Fresh Meadow Country Club Friday in that unique and slightly complicated test known as the Goodall round robin tournament.

Prizes totalling $5,000 await those who have compiled the best "plus scores" when the final round of match play is completed Sunday.

Jimmy Demaret of Houston, Texas, who gave the boys a trimming all around the winter circuit and wound up with an impressive victory in the Masters' event at Augusta, is the favorite. Harry Cooper, last year's Goodall winner, is not entered this time.

Some regard the Goodall as the truest test of competitive golf. They go out in sets of three, in seven 18-hole rounds. Demaret, for instance, will have two different opponents on each round, so that at the conclusion of the seventh match he will have encountered each of his fourteen rivals.

The scoring is on a "plus" and "minus" basis. If a player is two up on each of his rivals at the end of a round, say, he has a score of four-plus. Each of his opponents is two-minus, which is bad. Cooper, Canadian open champion in 1932 and 1937, won with a remarkable final score of 31-plus last year. He was three strokes over par for the seven rounds.

Obviously, there is some luck attached to the Goodall. A player, for instance, might shoot himself a 70, and yet gain no points because each of his opponents for the round also fired a 70. Some other player in another threesome might shoot a 70 and gain five or six valuable points because his opponents were having an off-day. But they figure it balances up in the long run.

In tomorrow's opening round Demaret is grouped with Craig Wood and Jimmy Thompson, a threesome calculated to pull a big gallery. Byron Nelson, the United States open champion, battles Ben Hogan and Jimmie Hines. Henry Picard, the P.G.A. king, plays against Gene Sarazen and Martin Pose, the Argentinian, Paul Runyan, Lawson Little and Sammy Snead form the fourth group, and Horton Smith, Dick Metz and Clayton Heafner the fifth.

Two rounds each are scheduled Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

RIPPLE GIVEN CHANCE TO MAKE MAJOR DEAL

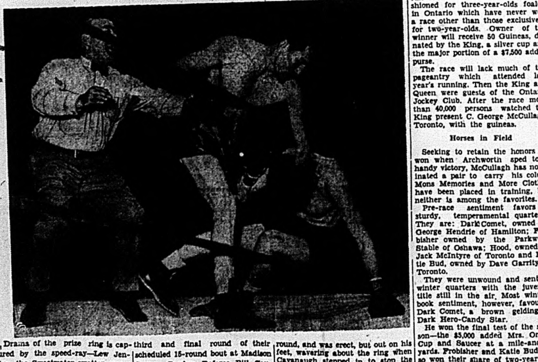
Brooklyn, May 16 (AP)—Brooklyn Dodgers disclosed today they had given Outfielder Jimmy Ripple permission to make a deal for himself with some other major league club. If unsuccessful he has agreed to join Montreal Royals of the International League. Ripple's departure brought Brooklyn within the 25-player limit effective at midnight tonight.

A NEW CHAMPION IS CROWNED



Drama of the prize ring is captured by the speed-ray—Lew Jenkins, the Sweetwater swatter, gaunt cowboy from Sweetwater, Texas, slams lightweight champion Lou Ambers over the lower ring rope in third and final round of their scheduled 15-round bout at Madison Square Garden. Referee Bill Cavanaugh reaches out to pull Jenkins from his helpless victim. Ambers went down four times in this third round, and was erect, but out on his feet, wavering about the ring when Cavanaugh stepped in to stop the bout in one minute 29 seconds of the third round—thus crowning a new champion of the lightweights; Lew Jenkins, of Sweetwater.

RAILBIRDS CANNY WITH SELECTIONS IN KING'S PLATE

Experts Cautious Regarding Favorites for Popular Classic at Opening of War Year Racing Season

(By Foster Barclay, Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Toronto, May 16—(CP)—Despite the war, plans proceeded throughout Canada for a banner racing season, headed by the 81st running of the King's Plate. Indications point to normal purses and crowds and a larger number of participating thoroughbreds.

Racing fever mounted here as the cream of the Ontario-foaled three-year-old crop turned into the drive leading to the King's Plate May 18. A late spring retarded training, but with the advent of clear, warm weather conditioning of the eligibles was accelerated.

About a score of the 38 horses nominated for the classic at Woodbine Park remained on the hopeful list, as trainers placed their charges on a rigid training diet. The field will take further trimming and by post time about 11 or 12 will answer the starter's bell to match speed and stamina in the mile-and-a-furlong event.

The big race, oldest continually run race on the continent, is fashioned for three-year-olds foaled in Ontario which have never won a race other than those exclusively for two-year-olds. Owner of the winner will receive 50 Guineas, donated by the King, a silver cup and the major portion of a $7,500 added purse.

The race will lack much of the pageantry which attended last year's running. Then the King and Queen were guests of the Ontario Jockey Club. After the race more than 40,000 persons watched the King present C. George McCullagh, Toronto, with the guineas.

Horses in Field

Seeking to retain the honors he won when Archworth sped to a handy victory, McCullagh has nominated a pair to carry his colors. Mons Memories and More Clothes have been placed in training, but neither is among the favorites.

They were unwound and sent to winter quarters with the juvenile title still in the air. Most winter-book sentiment, however, favoured Dark Comet, a brown gelding by Dark Hero-Candy Star.

He won the final test of the season—the $5,000 added Mrs. Orpen Cup and Saucer at a mile-and-70 yards. Frobisher and Katie Bud also won their share of two-year-old honors. Frobisher scampered to a handy triumph in the Clarendon Plate and Katie Bud won the second of the test events, the Coronation Stakes.

Hood, a big chestnut colt by Marine-Wishing Well, campaigned often last year. He entered the winner's paddock six times to lead in the number of winning efforts.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop and ma were opening their mail at breakfist and ma said, Well, Willyum, you've never asked me if I've ever heard anything from the slogan contest.

Have you ever heard anything from the slogan contest? pop said, and ma said, Yes, I have.

What slogan contest? pop said, and ma said, Don't you remember when I was racking my mind to compose a slogan in less than 10 words to enter in the Fluffed Oatsies 5000 doller slogan contest, and I asked you how you liked the idea of Change to Fluffed Oatsies, and you skoffingly replied, Keep the change. Well, your laughing attempt at humor gave me my big idea, in other words Change to Fluffed Oatsies and keep the change. You see, it was a slogan with a double meaning, because Fluffed Oatsies are a little cheaper than most cereals, so thats where keep the change comes in, she said.

You're not going to tell me you won, for Peet sake? pop said, and ma said, That's just what I'm going to tell you, do you see this envelope with Fluffed Oatsies Corporation printed in the corner?

But yee gods, you couldn't of actually won. I mean the sum of 5000 dollers simply doesn't exist except in dreams or painfully accumulated savings, pop said, and ma said, It's an old saying that the wise see wisdom in what others regard as a joke, and I was wise enough to reap the profits from your little joke.

If there's a 5000 doller check on these premises let me see it with my own unbelieving eyes, pop said, and ma said, They didn't send me a check, just a notification, and nobody said I won 5000 dollers, because the grand prize went to some woman somewhere named Snellenback of Swellenberg or something, and what I won was number 50 of the local prizes for this district, and when it comes it will be 3 dollers.

By gollies for a minute I had all the unpleasant sensations of a man who marries a rich wife, for this relief much thanks, pop said.

And he folded his paper and left for his office.

In the course of the reports by committees, Vic Knowles, who is in charge of the sports group said that his section would be under way very soon. The president notified the members that the next meeting night would probably be Charter Night for the branch with the District Governor in attendance.

U.S. AMBULANCES HEAVILY SHELLED

Several of American Drivers Attached to French Army Reported Missing

Paris, May 16.—(AP)—An American ambulance driver, Lawrence A. Jump of Nantucket, Mass., who was attached to the French Army, was reported missing today after German artillery bombarded the ambulance he was driving.

Official French reports to the United States Volunteers Ambulance organization in Paris said the ambulance was heavily shelled during a local action in the Sarreguemines sector of the western front several days ago.

Another American ambulance was wrecked and three others hit by shells, Colonel James Sparks, head of the volunteer unit, announced.

At the same time Miss Anne Morgan's Friends of France Committee which has been removing the civilians from the French Ardennes Department, reported to its Paris headquarters the unit had been bombed repeatedly in Northern France.

Forced to Take Lunch

Miss Morgan said its 10 ambulances and 20 cars were forced to cover in woods to escape German planes. They returned to a village in the Aisne Department, when the Nazi aerial attacks made it impossible to continue the rescue work.

Colonel Sparks said it had not been determined whethed Jump was killed, wounded or taken prisoner. His ambulance was in flames when it was last seen by a French officer.

An ambulance driven by Charles Willen of New York City was reported wrecked. Willen said he counted more than 50 shrapnel holes in the car.

Ambulances driven by Paul Willis of Albuquerque, N.M., Thomas Esten of Stoughton, Mass., and Jack Calhoun, an American resident of Paris, also were hit by shells.

Colonel Sparks said the ambulances were plainly marked with red crosses.

BODY RECOVERED AT STONEY POINT

George Kingsbury Drowned in Brighton Bay When Sailing Boat Capsizes

Brighton, Ont., (Special) — The body of George Kingsbury, seventeen-year-old Brighton youth drowned a week ago when the boat in which he and two companions were sailing capsized in Brighton Bay, was recovered at ten o'clock today 400 feet off Stoney Point.

The body was discovered floating in the water by Glasby and Claude Dale, uncles of the dead youth.

The discovery culminated days of intensive search during which airplanes from the Trenton base of the R.C.A.F. were used.

Prevailing weather conditions today intensified the search and six boats resumed the lookout for the body shortly after dawn.

The funeral will be held tomorrow with interment in Mount Hope cemetery.

Roosevelt Wants No Delay in Plane Delivery to Allies

Washington, May 16 — (CP) — President Roosevelt today asked the United States Congress to take no action which would interfere with delivery of airplanes to the Allies. He said in this connection:

"For the permanent record, I ask the Congress not to take any action which would in any way hamper or delay the delivery of American-made planes to foreign nations which have ordered them, or seek to purchase more planes. That from the point of view of our own national defence, would be extremely shortsighted."

City of Montreal Now Under Control Of Quebec Commission

Quebec, May 16 (CP)—The Quebec government introduced today in the Legislative Assembly a bill placing the City of Montreal, long beset by financial troubles, under "the surveyance and control" of the Quebec Municipal Commission.

The measure will come up for second reading later in the day in the Provincial Lower House.

Presentation of the bill, introduced by Premier Godbout, came at the heels of a conference yesterday between the Premier and officials of Montreal, which was unable to meet a bank loan and a public bond issue. The obligations, which matured yesterday, totalled more than $6,000,000.

Police Blotter

Careless motorists, who fail to observe city traffic ordinances may find themselves in serious difficulties, Belleville police authorities warned today. Last evening George Wallbridge, of this city, complained to the authorities that he was nearly "run down" by an alleged careless motorist at the intersection of Pinnacle and Victoria Ave.

"I was attempting to cross Pinnacle St., when a motor car speeded across the intersection without so much as observing the stop street sign. The fender of the car nearly struck me," complained Mr. Wallbridge as he supplied the police with the licence plate number of the vehicle. The matter is under investigation.

Fender damage resulted as two motor cars collided at the intersection of Everett and Catherine Sts. late last night. The drivers of the cars were said to have been Miss M. Quinn, 85 South John St., and Jack Clarke, 48 1-2 Bridge St. There were no injuries sustained and the matter was amicably settled between the parties before the police arrived.

Detective Fred Isard apprehended one Thomas Peters, who is wanted in Kingston on a serious charge. Peters was turned over to the Kingston police at noon when a warrant for the accused man's arrest was produced.

Last night's heavy rainfall resulted in an increased number of transients seeking shelter at the police station when 17 were given sleeping quarters. Three inebriates also were confined to the local Bastille.

MISSES CHANCE TO RECEIVE $140

One hundred and forty dollars eluded the grasp of Miss Vita Ritch, whose address was given as 11 Strachan Street, when her name was selected by the audience at the Capitol Theatre last night as being eligible to sell her photograph to the management for that amount. Miss Ritch was not in the audience or the crowd that filled the lobby and thus missed the opportunity that many have waited for.

The contest staged by the management on the occasion of Fotonite caught the popular fancy. Four youngsters vied in a "liars" contest with a diminutive eight-year-old winning the prize with his story of how "I went over with the troops in 1914, and when attacked by four enemy bombers, brought them all down with one shot from my shotgun."

Churchill, Retiring From Naval Control, Thanks Personnel For Accomplishments During War

London, May 16 (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill, relinquishing direct control of naval affairs, thanked all officers and men of the fleet today for their accomplishments in the first eight months of war.

Of the new First Lord of the Admiralty in the coalition government, A. X. Alexander, Mr. Churchill said: "I leave you in good hands both afloat and ashore."

The message follows:

"On leaving the Admiralty, I desire to convey to all the officers and men of His Majesty's fleet an expression of my personal admiration for the work which they have accomplished during these first eight months of war. The ever increasing demands made on the personnel and ships has been and, I am convinced, will continue to be met with an unrelaxing devotion to duty.

"The several gallant battles which have been fought are a source of inspiration—but I understand the ceaseless toll of those many for whom the chance of battle has not come, but who daily face danger and strain in carrying out their duties.

"The kindness and help of the navy has been a comfort to me. I was proud after many years to come again to the Admiralty in an hour of peril and the sorrow which I feel on leaving is tempered by the feeling that I will not be far away.

"I leave you in good hands both afloat and ashore. As Prime Minister and Minister of defence it will be my duty to watch over your interests and your proceedings. To all His Majesty's fleet and auxiliaries and to the merchant navy I wish God speed, victory and peace."

W. R. McCREARY BUYS FREIGHTER

The Glen Allan Which Has Been Operating Under Hepburn and Wilson Ownership for Years Will Pass Over to New Owner on Saturday

When the Picton-owned package freighter "Glen Allan" docks at Trenton this week-end it will mark the final voyage under the ownership of Hepburn and Wilson, Prince Edward County shippers. Mr. W. R. McCreary, Belleville cheese-buyer and owner of a fleet of trucks announced today that he has purchased the steamer and will take formal delivery of her on Saturday, May 18th.

It is understood there will be no change in the operating personnel of the crew, the veteran Trenton skipper, Captain Ben Bowen retaining his command. T. Wilson, chief engineer, Picton, will also "stay with the ship."

The Glen Allan is the last Bay of Quinte freighter to run weekly between Trenton and Montreal and has no opposition in this line. Captain Bowen, is a veteran of the Great Lakes and has been in command for several years.

Under the same command, the ship will not lose any prestige by being operated under new management, for Mr. McCreary's fleet of trucks and his business acumen is well known throughout the east.

Victoria, May 16 (CP)—Dr. William Rose of Victoria, has been informed by that British Air Ministry that his son, Pilot Officer Stephen G. Rose, is missing following Royal Air Force operations May 14. Pilot Officer Rose was 24 and a graduate of the University of British Columbia. He taught school before joining the R.A.F. in May, 1938.

Paris, May 16 (AP)—The German embassy staff from Brussels was detained under military guard by order of the French government today at the frontier opposite the Swiss town of Vallorbe. The staff is en route to Switzerland, but will not be permitted to proceed until the Belgian embassy staff is safely out of Germany.

CLAIMS HIS BOMB WILL NEVER MISS

Vancouver Carpenter Says Air Pressure, Wind or Motion of Ship Make No Difference

Vancouver, May 16 (CP).—A Vancouver carpenter claims he has evolved plans for an aerial bomb that can't miss.

Aimed from the air at the funnel of a ship at sea the bomb will find its target despite air pressure, wind or motion of the ship itself, says Theodore Kennedy.

He can't explain in detail how his bomb works because its effectiveness depends on secrecy—in the hands of two belligerents it would mean stalemate, he said—briefly this is how it works:

The bomb is released at its target, held in a vertical position by four rudders. Within the missile are three ground glass lenses. While the bomb is in the perpendicular there is no reflection on the lenses. But when air pressure, wind or change in position of the target deflects the aim, reflection on the lenses affects a photo-electric eye which operates the the rudders to set the projectile back on its course.

Kennedy said that for five years he has been trying unsuccessfully to interest naval experts in the practicability of his invention.

EARL OF ATHLONE FETED IN LONDON

Lord Decies Calls Him 'Best Possible Man for Job' of Governor-General

(By D. E. Burritt)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 16.—(CP Cable)—In a brilliant dining room dotted with all kind of military uniforms the Earl of Athlone was tendered a farewell luncheon today by the British Sportsman's Association, whose spokesman described the Governor-General designate of Canada as "the best possible man for the job".

The Earl's head bowed shyly as he heard his colorful military career outlined in detail by the Chairman, Lord Decies, who said it was no light task for a man of Lord Athlone's age to accept such an appointment and "we all appreciate the wonderful self sacrifice he is displaying".

Then, he added jocularly, "look back at what he is leaving: a nice home, a couple of glasses of port after dinner and a good cigar."

The chairman read a message from Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, General Officer Commanding the 1st Division, Canadian Active Service Force, expressing regret at his inability to attend "because miliary duties make it impossible".

On New Job at 66

Lord Athlone rose to a crescendo of applause and after a brief word of thanks for the reception turned his reply into words of praise for Canadians. He paid tribute to the officers and men he had met "somewhere", stressing the word "somewhere" because Lord Decies when referring to General McNaughton, had mentioned "Aldershot", but quickly corrected it to "somewhere""

"Most men at 50 are too old for such a job," the Earl continued, "but at 66 I am off to Canada for a new job. I only wish it had been 26 years ago when I got my first appointment papers, which I have still got in a tin box. . . .But I am looking forward to the job and wish to assure you all that I shall do my very best."

(Lord Athlone, then Prince Alexander of Teck was appointed Governor-General of Canada shortly before the outbreak of war in 1914. He went to France instead.)

WAR COUNCIL MEETS

Paris, May 16 (C.P.-Havas)—The Allied supreme war council met here today.

ASKED TO LOAN FIREARMS

London, May 16 (CP)—The army today called for the loan of privately owned firearms as Britain organized the home defence corps to deal with any German parachute invasion.

MORAL EFFECTS OF BOMBING HAVE BEEN CONFIRMED

In Discussing Holland's Surrender London Times States Destruction of Property and Threat of More to Come Big Factor in Issue

COOL HEADS NEEDED

London May 16 (CP).—The British morning press today admitted the gravity of the war situation but voiced unflagging confidence that Allied courage and resourcefulness would carry through to eventual victory.

"Rest assured," said the Daily Express, "that Mr. Churchill, our Minister of Decence, is also Minister of Offence. He was the man who made the first tanks in the last war. He has not displayed his goods in a shop window, but they are there."

The Times, discussing the Netherlands' capitulation, said, "This is a grave event for reasons other than those connected with the campaign which is now in progress and it may well become a landmark in the history of warfare. In one instance the claims made for the moral effect of the bomber have been confirmed, and resistance has been brought to an end by destruction coupled with the threat of more to come, in a densely populated area."

The battle of the Meuse "is only an item in a far wider vista," the Times said. "We have to contemplate, for example, a continental coastline from Namsos to Rotterdam, not far short of 6,000 miles in a straight line, in the hands of the enemy, with all its possibilities for offensive action against these islands.

"We have to remember that the German submarines have of late been inactive and may well now be waiting, refitted and with rested crews, to take part in such an offensive.

"We have to consider what the campaign has already revealed of the tactics of parachutists aided by subversive internal elements and—it is cruel to say so, but the fact cannot be blinked—genuine refugees from German tyranny suborned by menace of murder or torture of their relatives in the hands of the Gestapo.

"We have to envisage and provide for possible extension of the conflict. We shall need cool heads as well as stout hearts in the coming days, but we have never lacked the aid of either in previous crises in our history."

The News Chronicle said Germany might attack soon through Switzerland, with Italy joining. "For such a contingency," it said, "the French have been preparing for years, and they will know how to meet it."

TESTING OF BOMB DELAYED FOR WEEK

Lives of 300 Healthy Goats at Least Temporarily Spared

Aberdeen, Md., May 16—(AP) — A test of the death-dealing powers of inventor Lester P. Barlow's liquid-oxygen-carbon bomb was postponed today until next week and the lives of a herd of goats were at least temporarily spared.

The inventor declined to go through with the test today because, he said, he was ordered to bring out a 1,000-pound sack of his "Glmite" 20 minutes before the scheduled time and much of the oxygen evaporated.

The approximately 300 goats, examined by physicians to make sure they were physically fit, were brought to the War Department proving grounds here to serve as victims in a test of the liquid oxygen-carbon bomb which Barlow contends spreads death by peculiar shock "waves."

Officials in Stand 2,500 Feet Away

He predicted the experimental blast 30 feet in the air would kill the animals, tethered in the field.

High ranking military and naval officials from nearby Washington were invited to the official test, ordered after a joint session of House and Senate Naval and Military Affairs committees heard Barlow describe the bomb. Witnesses arranged to view the demonstration from a stand 2,500 feet away.

Barlow apparently side-stepped an attempt by the Maryland Society for the prevention of cruelty of animals to stop the test by a court injunction. Federal attorneys obtained removal of the S.P.C.A.'s suit from a state to a Federal court and no hearing on it was set prior to the test.

The petition asking transfer to the Federal court said the experiment was "vital to the national defence."

APPOINT VISITING PROFESSOR

Montreal, Ma 16 (CP).—Dr. Richard Kroner, whose teachings, critical of the Nazi government, resulted in his resignation as professor at University of Kiel, has been appointed visiting professor of logic and metaphysics at McGill University, it was announced today.

Dr. Kroner, who will come to McGill for two years, was professor of philosophy at University of Kiel from 1929 to 1934. In 1934 his classes were broken up violently by members of the Nazi party following his criticism of the government and he resigned.

Text of Throne Speech

Ottawa, May 16 (CP)—Text of the Speech from the Throne, delivered in the Senate Chamber today follows:

Honorable Members of the Senate:
Members of the House of Commons:

You have been summoned to the first session of a new parliament at a time of the greatest conflict in the history of mankind. Upon the outcome of the struggle will depend the maintenance of civilized society and the inheritance of human freedom for our own and future generations.

Since parliament last met, the nature of the conflict, the character of the enemy, and the perils which menace all free nations, have become only too clear. In that short space of time, the world has seen the peaceful and peace-loving peoples of Denmark, Norway, Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg, made the victims of the treachery and barbarism which have marked the successive outrages of Nazi Germany. It has also witnessed the invasion of Finland, and, despite the epic resistance of its heroic population, the partition of that unoffending country."

At any time, the lust of conquest may vastily enlarge the theatre of war. These tragic events have but served to intensify our determination to share in the war effort of the Allied powers to the utmost of our strength. In this resolution the government has been fortified by the direct and unquestioned mandate of the Canadian people.

The organization and prosecution of Canada's war effort have commanded the unremitting attention of my ministers. The constant consultation and complete co-operation maintained with the governments of the United Kingdom and France have been materially strengthened by the recent visit to those countries of my minister of National Defence.

You will be fully informed of Canada's action both in the military and economic fields. You will be asked to consider measures deemed essential for the prosecution of the war, and for the social and economic requirements of the country.

While the present session of parliament will necessarily be mainly concerned with Canada's war effort, and the measures essential to the achievement of ultimate victory, my ministers are of opinion that, despite what today is being witnessed of concentrated warfare, it is desirable, as far as may be possible, to plan for the days that will follow the cessation of hostilities.

As a contribution to industrial stability in time of war, and to social security and justice in time of peace, resolutions will be introduced for an amendment to the British North America Act which would empower the parliament of Canada to enact at the present session legislation to establish unemployment insurance on a national scale.

The report of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations, which has just been received, will be tabled immediately.

Estimates Seen Brought Down

Members of the House of Commons:

You will be asked to make financial provision for expenditure necessitated by the existing state of war.

The estimates for the current fiscal year will be submitted to you without delay.

Honorable members of the Senate:

Members of the House of Commons:

Since the last session of parliament, a much beloved governor-general has passed from our midst. In the death of Lord Tweedsmuir, Canada mourns one whose character and achievements had endeared him to our people, the British Commonwealth has lost a wise and understanding counsellor and the fellowship of writers a gifted interpreter of the graces and humanities of English literature.

I join with you in the expression to Lady Tweedsmuir and the members of her family of the deep sympathy of the Canadian people.

His Majesty The King has been pleased to appoint the Earl of Athlone as his representative in succession to the late Lord Tweedsmuir. The sense of duty and the public services which have distinguished the lives of the governor-general designate and the Princess Alice ensure for His Excellency and Her Royal Highness an eager and cordial welcome to Canada.

As you assume, in these dark and difficult days, the grave responsibilities with which you have been entrusted by the Canadian people, may your resolution be sustained by the knowledge that it is the liberties of all free peoples that you are helping to preserve.

Unless the evil powers which threaten the very existence of freedom, are vanquished, the world itself will inevitably he reduced to a state of international anarchy.

I pray that Divine Providence may guide and bless your deliberations.

Highlights of Report

Ottawa, May 16.—(CP)—Following are outstanding recommendations in the report of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations made public today:

1.—Dominion Government assumes entire responsibility for unemployment relief for employables.

2.—Dominion assumes entire provincial (but not municipal) debt.

3—Provinces withdraw from income, inheritance and corporation tax fields. Also surrender all present subsidies.

4.—Dominion respects remaining revenue sources of provinces.

5.—National adjustment grants paid annually to provinces, according to need, to maintain national average services without excessive taxation. Emergency grants would be used to deal with abnormal conditions.

6.—Future provincial and municipal bororwing in Canadian funds only. Provinces still borrow on own credit or, if loans approved by Dominion Finance Commission, on credit of Canada.

7.—No control of provincial expenditures. "Real provincial autonomy" in local matters. Greater provincial control over municipal finances advised.

8.—Broadening of incomes tax base, increasing burden on lower and middle brackets and increasing Succession Duties. Progressive elimination of Sales Tax.

9.—Dominion jurisdiction over unemployment insurance, basic hours and wages and a national employment service. All welfare services but relief would remain with provinces.

10.—General review of freight rates urged. No opinion on railway amalgamation, as outside scope Dire dangers of uncontrolled rail-highway rivalry pointed out.

11.—Regular Dominion-Provincial conferences to be held, with a permanent Dominion Secretariat.

12.—Merger of Prairie provinces and merger of Maritime Provinces held of small gain, even if possible.

POLICE RECEIVE COMPLAINTS

Toronto, May 16 (CP).—Police today received complaints from members of Canada's armed services regarding anti-war circulars signed "Political Committee, Communist Party of Canada".

The circular is said to have been mailed to the homes of hundreds of soldiers, airmen and sailors, urging them to "fight to extradite Canada" from the war and to "join the Communist party."

50,000 PLANES A YEAR AT LEAST PRESIDENT'S AIM

Mr. Roosevelt Points Out Speed of Mechanized Armies, of Parachute Invasions and Bombing Attacks

HUGE DEFENCE FUND

Washington, May 16 (CP)—President Roosevelt in asking Congress for $1,182,000,000 in cash and contract authorization for military implements to face "any lightning offensive" against American interests said he would "like to see this nation geared up to the ability to turn out at least 50,000 planes a year."

"Furthermore," he added, "I believe that this nation should plan at this time a program that would provide us with 50,000 military and naval planes."

"These are ominous days," he declared at the outset of his message, "days whose swift and shocking developments force every neutral nation to look to its defences in the light of new factors. The brutal force of modern offensive war has been loosed in all its horror."

Speed of Mechanized Armies

Before detailing his program, he spoke of the speed with which mechanized armies move, of parachute troop invasions and of bombing attacks.

Because of these things, he said, the protection of the Western Hemisphere "more than ever" calls for "ready at hand weapons capable of great mobility."

Explaining the purposes of the huge new defence fund, Mr. Roosevelt said it would be used for four things:

"First, to procure the essential equipment of all kinds for a larger and thoroughly rounded-out army;

"Second, to replace or modernize all old army and navy equipment with the latest type of equipment;

"Third, to increase production facilities for everything needed for the army and navy for national defence. We require the ability to turn out quickly infinitely greater supplies;

"Fourth, to speed up to a 24-hour basis all existing army and navy contracts, and all new contracts to be awarded".

Dangers of Being Unready

In stark, realistic words, which weer broadcast to the United States and relayed over the world by short wave, Mr. Roosevelt pointed to lessons learned by nations which were not ready for war and were overrun by enemies.

"Surely", he said, "the developments of the past few weeks have made it clear to all of our citizens that the possibility of attack on vital American zones ought to make it essential that we have the physical, the ready ability to meet those attacks and the prevent them from reaching their objectives'.

"This means military implements —not on paper—which are ready and available to meet any lightning offensive against our American interest" he said. "It means also that facilities for production must be ready to turn out munitions and equipment at top speed".

Still Praying For Peace

The President, who has been in communication with Premier Mussolini in an effort to preven further spread of the war, said he still is praying for peace and for banishment from the earth of aggression and force.

Yet, he added, the United States plainly has a task before it of building up her armed might.

"Our defences must be invulnerable, our security absolute, but our defence as it was yesterday, or even as it is today, does not provide security against potential developments and dangers of the future.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Atmospheric effects on Mars! The Martian atmosphere is light, being only one-fifth as heavy as ours. A partial effect of this is that the daytime temperature is about 50 degrees above zero and night-time temperature about 100 degrees below. Another effect is that the sky color if seen from Mars would be a very deep blue as compared to our own. Evidence that Mars has an atmosphere is given by the greater clearness of its markings at the centre of the planet than at its edges. There also appear to be moving masses indicating clouds. In the Martian atmosphere there are water vapor and oxygen, revealed by the spectroscope.

Retired Members Of C. A. S. F. Given A Service Badge

Ottawa, May 17—(CP) — Plans for a service badge for members of Canada's fighting forces now retired from active service were announced in an order-in-council tabled in parliament yesterday.

The badges will not be issued until the order has been proclaimed in the Canada Gazette.

They will be white metal buttons bearing three maple leaves and three fluers-de-lis in red enamel with the single word "service" in a panel. A Union Jack will be a central figure.

Members of the navy, air force or army who have served three continuous months with pay and have been retired through physical disability will be the only persons entitled to wear the badges, and a penalty of $500 fine or six months imprisonment will be imposed for unauthorized use of such badges.

Immediate Declaration of War By U. S. Should be Made Says Paper

America Should Help to Defend the Line Which Allies Are Holding at Such Sacrifice, Comments N. Y. Herald Tribune

WOULD TIP SCALES

New York, May 17 (CP)—The New York Herald Tribune said yesterday that "it is quite probable" the least costly solution for the United States against the eventuality of a Hitler victory "would be to declare war on Germany at once."

In a lengthy editorial entitled "What Real Preparedness Means" the newspaper said the invasion of the Low Countries "has blasted two tremendous facts into the American consciousness with a vividness and immediacy not achieved by all the ghastliness of the last months and years."

The first fact, the editorial said, "is that Germany may win this war," and the second is that "the German war machine is a thing as powerful as it is hideous." After outlining German methods of warfare, use of treachery, espionage and "Trojan horse" tactics, The Herald Tribune said the only opposition to the Nazi machine is force—"force having every ounce of national energy, unity and resolve behind it."

Warning against the United States shutting its eyes to these facts The Herald Tribune went on:

"We have imitated every error of the European democracies too slavishly already. . We must face the future and prepare for it now . .

"One can hardly begin such an analysis without realizing that it is quite probable that the least costly solution, in both life and welfare, would be to declare war on Germany at once— to help defend, in other words, the line which the Allies are now holding at such sacrifice . . .

"Our actual contribution for many months could be only in the gift of airplanes and goods—that is about all we now have to contribute. If we could tip the scales with that much and so save European culture and world economy from the appalling disaster and chaos of a Hitler victory it would be many times worth it. If not, if Hitler wins anyway in a few months, we would be little worse off than we are now."

He also paid tribute to Canadian newspapers and newspapermen. "The press of Canada is splendid. In my experience with Canadian newspapermen I have invariably found them to be courteous, cooperative and accurate."

London, May 17 (CP).—Beaching of the Belgian liner Ville de Bruges, formerly the President Harding of the United States Lines, after a bombing attack three days ago was described by members of the crew who reached London today.

The crew included sixty-two Canadians, of whom two were killed.

James Gibson of Montreal, the 35-year-old boatswain, said the sixty-four passengers, mostly women, were landed safely, making the shore about 200 yards away in seven boats.

The 13,869-ton ship was transferred to Belgian registry last January. It was heading out of a Belgian port when attacked. Four members of the crew, including the two Canadians, were killed when an aerial torpedo burst.

$1,700,000 Appropriated to Acquire Vessels to Protect Shipping

Ottawa, May 17—(CP)—An appropriation of $1,700,000 under the War Measures Act for acquisition of vessels for protection of Canadian shipping has been made by the Dominion Government, according to an order-in-council tabled in the House of Commons yesterday.

The order-in-council, signed on April 5, gave no particulars of the type or number of vessels to be provided.

Another order-in-council of the same date provided that all Canadian ships putting out to sea must be provided with protective equipment for personnel against machine-gunning. Ship owners must provide the equipment to the specifications of naval authorities. Type of the equipment was not mentioned.

Representative Comment On President's Address

New York, May 17 (CP)—United States newspapers gave general approval today to President Roosevelt's National Defence message to Congress, several papers paying particular welcome to the President's appeal "not to take any action which would in any way hamper or delay the delivery of American-made plans to foreign nations which have ordered them."

The New York Times was among the papers welcoming this particular part of the President's speech. There was scattered minor criticisms of the message, mainly on the point that the President did not state where the $1,000,000,000 was to come from.

Representative comment follows:

New York Times: There cannot be the slightest doubt that the country expects Congress to respond promptly to the appeal . . . it is now our opportunity to help demonstrate that democracy, no less than dictatorship, knows how to act decisively . . .

Boston Herald: If the President had asked for 100,000 planes and $2,000,000,000 the people of this section would not have cavilled. . . They will be especially pleased at his request to Congress not to do anything which will interfere with the shipment of planes to the Allies. Their emotions and their convictions are with the Allies and the President.

New York Daily News: President Roosevelt's armament speech yesterday was a masterpiece. Its common sense is unanswerable.

Newark (N.J.) Star-Ledger: The people are more than willing to grant the President's appropriation requests. There will, indeed be widespread disappointment that the President did not give some hope of greater American assistance for the Allies short of actual participation in war. . . .

Atlanta Constitution: It (The President's message) should bring a new hope to those nations which have put their faith in the democratic way of life . . for it voiced the spirit of a people.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch: President Roosevelt has the nation solidly behind him . . . pacifism has no place in a nation which is committed to the protection of a rich hemisphere against the attacks of the most powerful militarists the modern world has ever seen.

ASKS CONGRESS TO REMOVE LIMIT OF AIR FLEET

U. S. War Department Wants 6,000-Plane Top Limit Removed in Order to Proceed With 50,000 Plane Program

HURRY LEGISLATION

Washington, May 17 (AP).—The United States War Department asked Congress today to remove the 6,000-plane top limit on the size of the Air Corps, in line with President Roosevelt's proposal for a fleet of 50,000 army and navy aircraft.

The recommendation was made to the House Military Committee by Brigadier General L. D. Gasser, Deputy Chief of Staff of the army.

Gasser testified at the hearings started by the committee to rush through necessary legislation to carry out the President's $1,182,000,000 defence program.

The attitude of haste coincided with general approval expressed for the program.

Although General Gasser gave no indication of how many additional planes the army might seek, he said the expansion "might be construed to include barrage balloons, if we adopted that technique."

Both the House of Representatives and Senate manifested, with scattering exceptions, a unanimity that London, Ont., May 17 (CP).—A farm family of five persons was wiped out at Scottsville, about ten miles west of London, today. Provincial Police said four had been slain while the fifth person committed suicide.

Police said that evidence surrounding the deaths point to the fact that William Hunt, 45, killed himself with a rifle after slaying his wife, Elsie Hunt, 41, his two children John, 16, and June, 13, and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Charlotte Warren, about 80 years old.

A high-powered rifle was used. The Hunt farm is located near No. 4 Highway, south of the village of Lambeth.

The deaths are thought to have occurred about 6:30 a.m.

NEXT SIX MONTHS FATEFUL ONES STATES ROGERS

Defence Minister Returns From Visit Overseas — Confident Spirit of Allied Countries Cannot be Broken

NEED UTMOST EFFORT

Quebec, May 17—(CP)—Defence Minister Norman Rogers, warning that the next six months "will test our courage and endurance to the limit," expressed confidence today in ultimate victory for the Allies.

The Defence Minister, who returned early today from a visit overseas, referred in a prepared statement to the "profound appreciation" of Canada's war effort and to the "splendid impression" the Canadian forces have created in England.

"I believe it is true to say that Canada has never stood higher in the esteem of the British people than it does today," the Minister said.

"Everywhere there is a profound appreciation of the contribution Canada is prepared to make in the present war. I mention this not only as a ground for present satisfaction, but even more as a challenge to all of us to put forth our utmost effort as long as the war may last.

EFFECTIVE WAY TO HELP ENGLAND

New Chronicle Says U.S. Should Warn Italy if She Comes in America Will Come in With Allies

London, May 17—(CP) — The News Chronicle said today that the only way the United States could give the Allies effective help at this moment would be to warn Italy that if she enters the war it will find America at the side of the Allies.

The planes that America can send during the next few weeks will be only a small factor in the battle, the newspaper said. "The prospect is that the pressure on the Allies will become much greater in the near future through the entry of Italy into the war and the only way America could give effective help at this moment would be to warn Italy that such a move would find the United States at the Allies' side.

R.C.A.F. Machine Of Trenton Crashes Near Grafton

Machine Mired in Cooper's Swamp Near Eddystone, Six Miles North of Grafton — Flare Seen Dropped Before Machine Started to Lose Altitude

TRENTON, Ont., (Special) May 17—Buried in a muddy tomb beneath the wreckage of their demolished Norseman plane, the bodies of four members of Trenton Base of the Royal Canadian Air Force were recovered early this afternoon by searchers in a swamp six miles north of Grafton.

The dead are: Flight-Lieut. Harvey Jasper, Winnipeg, pilot of the ill-fated machine; Flying Officer G. E. Auld, navigator, Toronto; Flying Officer J. E. Pidcock, Montreal, and Aircraftsman John R. Kean, Windsor.

The bodies were found after a search of the district in which the plane crashed had proved futile. The machine had struck the swampy ground with such terrific impact that the engine and cabin of the plane were nearly submerged in oozy mire. The dead officers were discovered in the cabin.

Possibly Four Dead

Ottawa, May 17—(CP) — Three and possibly four men of the Royal Canadian Air Force died early today in the crash of a plane near Cobourg, Ont., it was learned here.

It was understood here the plane was a Norseman type of machine carrying four occupants. At R. C. A.F. headquarters it was said three bodies have been found but have not yet been identified.

"There possibly may have been a fourth fatality or one crew member may have escaped by parachute," said a spokesman.

Complete details were not available here but it was believed from reports that the plane crashed shortly after midnight, about 15 miles north of Cobourg.

The remains of the plane were not found until about 3 a.m. and at that time there was no trace of the crew. Later advice was to the effect three bodies had been found and a search was going forward for the fourth member of the flight.

Cobourg, Ont., May 17—(CP) — A Royal Canadian Air Force plane crashed early today near Eddystone, Ont., and the fate of the crew was not established immediately. The machine mushroomed with a terrific crash in Cooper's Swamp in the dark and wreckage was spread on bushes and trees for 100 yards around the mired fuselage. Eddystone is 15 miles north of Cobourg.

The plane was found at three a.m., about three hours after the crash, by searchers who set out from Cobourg, 15 miles southeast of here. No trace of the crew was discovered and it was believed they were buried under the debris.

The crew is thought to have crashed with the machine, a Norseman bearing the R.C.A.F. insignia and the number 678, because farmers saw a flare immediately before the plane plunged into the swamp and a parachute flare was found hanging on a tree near the wreckage. Witnesses at first thought the plane was in flames.

Big Convoy of Australian Troops Joins British Army in Near East

Second Australian Division Reaches Egypt After Long Voyage of 9,000 Miles

ALL ARE VOLUNTEERS

Cairo, Egypt, May 17 (AP)—Great Britain's army in the Near East was bolstered today by arrival of a big convoy of Australians.

Many of them sons of men who fought at Gallipoli in the first Great War, they formed the second contingent of Australian troops sent overseas since the war began.

Some of the Australians travelled in a big liner which was painted a drab grey. Others came in troopships which have been moving Imperial regiments.

Bronzed by their 9,000 mile voyage, the men looked fit and well. All are volunteers, of splendid physique, and they have had at least six months' training in handling modern weapons.

The first contingent of Australians landed here just over two months ago and now they are part of the Allied forces assembled to guard the lower Nile Valley.

Efficient Movement of Troops

London, May 17 (CP)—The Australian second division which arrived today in Egypt was embarked at Port Melbourne, Victoria and Perth, Western Australia.

"I have never seen a more efficient or speedier movement," the ship's master of one transport, was quoted as having said in dispatches reaching here. Crested bulkheads showed she had carried Royal Scots ("Pontius Pilate's Bodyguard"), Royal Welsh, Royal Irish and Green Howards.

"The discipline was satisfactory and there was complete co-ordination. At Port Melbourne the long gray wharf was deserted except for military and transport officers, but along the flat and sandy shores of Hobson's Bay thousands, gathering at midnight, sang and cheered as they braved a comfortless day to watch the Australians going to war.

Scenes at Embarkation

"The soldiers laughed and joked on their way down to the ports of embarkation. They sang 'Roll Out the Barrel' and 'Rule Britannia.' They scrawled slogans on the troop trains, among them 'Berlin or Bust' and 'Puckapunyal to Berlin and return with the Fighting Furies, Five Bob a day and all found'."

Puckapunyal, nicknamed "Cocker Spaniel," was one of Victoria's training camps.

MOMENTOUS MEETING OF SUPREME COUNCIL OF WAR IS HELD

Paris, May 17 (CP-Havas) — The meeting of the Allied Supreme War Council here yesterday was "of exceptional importance for the progress of current military operations and preparation of plans for the future", an authorized French spokesman said today.

British Prime Minister Churchill, who came here to attend the conference, left early this morning for London.

Also present at the meeting yesterday were Premier Reynaud, Defence Minister Edouard Daladier and Gen. Marie-Gustave Gamelin, Allied Commander-in-Chief.

Hitler Fails in His First Blow, Must Modify Plan, Says Duval

Paris, May 17. —(CP-Havas)—General Jean Duval, French Military expert, found considerable cause for comfort today in the progress of developments on the western front.

"The difficulties that preoccupied us yesterday are not yet resolved" he wrote in Le Journal, "but they have gotten no worse, and from this fact alone they have to a certain extent been attenuated. . . .

"Let us remember that our troops are now in an infinitely better situation than they were Wednesday morning. They have been reinforced in effectives and material. Certain weaknesses in local commands have given way to modifications which have already had a fortuitous influence.

"Finally, let us remember also which have already had a fortuitous enemy would have to break through our front and pass through en masse with the first blow—and the first blow means the night before last.

"He did not succeed. His plan has therefore already suffered a heavy setback. Now he must modify it and start off on a new tack. That is our gain".

SEVERAL FINE CATCHES OF PICKEREL MADE

Apparently there is no dearth of the wily pickerel in the lakes and streams of this district, according to some of the boys who took advantage of the opening of the season this week.

Some fine catches have been reported from various parts of the district with the Moira River said to be the home of some fine specimens of this particular branch of the finny family.

Last night Mr. Reginald Wardle and a party of two friends, who had dropped their lures in Stoco Lake yesterday afternoon, returned with three fine specimens, the largest of which tipped the scales at four pounds.

A party of Front Street business men, who forsook the demands of business for a day also came home with some fine trophies of the fish chase.

Varying reports would indicate that the pickerel are at least as numerous if not more so, than they were a year ago.

8 CASES LISTED FOR SITTINGS

Non-Jury Sittings of Supreme Court Will be Held in Belleville on Monday

Eight cases are listed for trial at the non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario, which opens in Belleville, before the Honourable Mr. Justice Keiller MacKay, on Monday May 20th of which two are uncontested divorce actions.

Two actions for damages entered as the result of alleged faulty or icy sidewalks are on the docket and include Sandercock versus the Village of Madoc and Bankey versus the City of Belleville. In both incidents the plaintiffs allege injuries as the result of slipping on icy sidewalks and sustaining personal discomfort. The cases are being contested by the respective municipalities.

A joint action for the alleged possession of a motor car between Follwell versus the Belleville Motor Car Company resulted in counter claims and is based on the alleged ownership of a motor car. B. C. Donnan K.C., represents the Follwell interests, while the firm of Porter, Payne and Arnott has been retained in the interests of the Belleville Motor Car concern.

Dulmage versus the Globe Publishing Company, is a civil action for damages arising out of a fatal accident in Trenton last fall after W. H. Dulmage died after being struck by a motor car. The final case, as listed by Sheriff J. D. O'Flynn, is an action to collect a balance of money said to be owing for the purchase of jewelry by one Ambrose Dean. The case is that of Twiddy versus Dean and at present is not defended.

King and Queen Landed in Canada One Year Ago Today

Ottawa, May 17 (CP).—One year ago today there was joyous excitement all across Canada. King George and Queen Elizabeth landed at Quebec City at the start of their history-making tour of the dominion and the eastern United States.

In startling contrast, this anniversary day sees the empire at war and practically all the principals who attended the landing ceremonies engaged in labors associated with the conflict.

Their Majesties are in England with mighty battles raging just across the English Channel, and in Canada the heads of government who welcomed the sovereign and his consort are striving to lend every aid to the Allied cause.

But those who saw the King and Queen leave the gleaming white yacht, Empress of Australia, and step on Canadian soil liked to recall today, with all Canada, the happy occasion of that peaceful May morning twelve months ago.

The young couple were greeted with wild acclaim. Planes thundered overhead, whistles of ships in the harbor shrilled, guns boomed from the fortress on the towering cliff and a thrill of pride and patriotism ran the length of the country.

Little Girl Asks Why She Does Not Hear Her Daddy's Voice

Do you know that there is a lonely little nine-year-old girl in Belleville. Miss Doris Bedford is her name and she has listened a long time for her soldier Daddy's voice to come over the radio in the soldier broadcast from England. Doris listened a long time and still her daddy did not say hello 'Doris.' She thought something should be done about it so she wrote a letter to the studio asking what was the reason she never heard her daddy's voice. The man at the studio felt sorry for such a small girl and he wrote her a letter.

Broadcasting House,
London, W.I.
24th. April, 1940

Dear Miss Bedford:

Thank you for your nice letter.

I am looking forward very much to broadcasting from the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. Perhaps when this happens we may be able to get your father to say hello. I cannot make any promises, but keep listening to our programmes and some day we may be able to grant your wish. Don't be impatient, because it takes a long time to make arrangements and in fact we may have to wait until we get to France.

Yours faithfully,
R. T. Bowman.

MOVABLE WEALTH OUT OF COUNTRY

Switzerland Has Transferred Most of Its Reserve Gold to New York, London and Paris

New York, May 17 (AP).—Switzerland, famed as a citadel of wealth as well as of democracy, has shifted much of her movable riches out of the grasp of possible Nazi conquest to the United States, Wall Street sources said today.

The little republic nestled in the mountains south of Germany, with a population of 4,200,000, is rated in financial circles as probably the wealthiest nation in the world in proportion to size.

Switzerland, by latest official figures, had more than $500,000,000 in monetary gold, held United States investments totalling about $1,115,000,000 including $540,000,000 in common and preferred stocks.

At least one-fourth of the gold and large amounts of securities were said to have been shipped to this country for safe-keeping. Swiss financial institutions have increased their Wall Street branches and connections to follow the golden trek from the little countries of Europe.

Bankers suggested the bulk of the remaining riches either had been transferred to Paris and London or was ready to leave on the first roar of a gun to join unaccounted billions or refugee capital in London, Paris and New York.

Blossoms on Norway Maples

Some Citizens Have Been Puzzled by Sight of Apple-Green Blossoms on One Tree—Now All Bear Blossoms

Blossoms on a maple tree! Almost unbelievable, but such was the sight which met the eyes of pedestrians walking along Dundas Street yesterday morning. In addition to the leaves which were just nicely developing at the tips of the branches the slender young sapling was also covered with what appeared to be myriads of apple-green fruit blossoms.

Knowing that the sapling had been planted the year before as part of a Norway maple tree-planting program sponsored by the local Parks Board added to the so-called mystery and much conjecture was rife as to the cause of the phenomena. Various suggestions were forwarded by the public, among them that the sapling was some kind of a fruit tree or that branches of some fruit tree had been grafted in by mistake. Suddenly, however, the mystery was explained.

The mystery was brought to a head when it was discovered that other maples planted at the same time were also blossoming. The maples which are known as Norway maples have been advocated by nurserymen as shade trees, as they are very fast growing. One of the characteristics of Norway maples is that when leafing in the spring, they also blossom much the same as fruit trees.

REFUGEES TARGET FOR NAZI BOMBERS

Trainload of Belgian Women and Children Struck by Bombs—Villages Turned in Blazing Bonfires

By DREW MIDDLETON
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the British Expeditionary Force in Belgium, May 17 (AP)—The German "Luftwaffe," the terror that flies by night and by day, has carried the ruin and suffering of total war far behind the Allied positions in three days of bombings which have struck Belgian and French towns, cost hundreds of lives and done inestimable damage to roads and buildings.

There has been no relief for British pursuit squadrons fighting Nazi planes attacking British troops and positions on land. Only this morning came word that German Heinkel planes dive-bombed a railway station where a trainload of Belgian refugees had just arrived. Twelve refugees were killed and scores were wounded.

Technically, the bombing is confined to "military objectives" —a phrase with which Germans cover every town with a railway station or bridge. Aircraft bearing high explosive, incendiary and delayed-action bombs have attacked these "military objectives" at a dreadful cost of human life.

Last night, the sky was alight with burning towns. The town we stopped in shook with the explosion of heavy bombs and anti-aircraft fire. The effects of the bombing were brought close when we passed through a village which 15 minutes later was bombed by eight Heinkels.

Incendiary bombs had turned the main street into a roaring bonfire when we returned. Refugees huddled in doorways or lying under farm carts had been wounded or killed.

The Swiss Will Fight Against Any Invader States Eric Corradi Who Spent Boyhood in Switzerland

Natural Defenses and Well-Trained Army Would Make Country Difficult to Conquer

NATION OF PATRIOTS

The spirits of Winkelried and William Tell still hover over the eternal snows of Switzerland.

The indomitable courage and heroism of these national figures that eventually succeeded in throwing off the hated Austrian yoke still permeates the quiet peace-loving people of the Alps. The love of country and liberty that fired Winkelried, devout Swiss patriot who parted the Austrian spears with his body at the battle of Sembrach in 1351, so that the handful of Swiss soldiers could separate the enemy forces, is still evident in the descendants of those men who fought to free their country eight centuries ago.

So says Eric (Jimmy) Corradi, Swiss artist of the Capitol Theatre here. Born in Basel, beautiful city that borders three countries, France, Germany and Switzerland, Corradi spent the best part of his youth there before coming to Canada. He has made several visits to his homeland in recent years.

"If the aggressor comes, he will find a united country awaiting him," the artist said, his eyes betraying the intense feeling he holds for his native land." Every man, woman and child will rise in arms to the defence of the Motherland, should the necessity arise."

Independent Since 1351

The Swiss people, since the days of their independence in 1351 and during which time, with the exception of repelling a few sporadic sorties on the part of the Austrians, have engaged in no wars, have been and are intensely patriotic, he said. The French, Swiss, Italian Swiss and German Swiss, while holding the friendliest feelings for their border neighbors, will rise as one to defend that liberty, bought by the blood of illustrious forefathers.

Since the days of William Tell, who shot an apple from the head of his son to satisfy the whims of an autocratic tyrant, and incidentally save the lives of his townspeople, shooting has been the national pastime of the Swiss.

It is taught in the public schools. Shooting clubs are found in every town, village and hamlet. The Swiss, Corradi, claims, are the finest sharpshooters in the world. Women as well as men are highly proficient with a rifle.

Every man must serve in the army, an organization that of late years has become highly mechanized, although no lack of attention has been paid to Switzerland's last lines of defence, the mountains.

Her Alpine forces are the best in the world, he says. Highly trained in this particular phase of warfare, an invader would need all his resources to conquer Switzerland in the present mode of "blitzkrieg" wars.

"True," he ruminated, "on the German border there are only the lakes and the Rhine separating the two countries, but between Switzerland and Italy are the mountains. Here one or two machine-gunners could hold an entire army at bay. Fortifications hewn into the rock of the mountain-sides present a formidable front to an invader."

One of Most Beautiful Countries

It would be nothing short of another world tragedy to see Switzerland overrun by an enemy force, he said. "It is one of the most beautiful countries in the world, and is the home of many universities. Delicate machinery, the finest in the world is made here, as is evidenced in the fame of the Swiss watches. A friend of mine," he continued, "has a watch made by himself, the size of the head of a tack. It keeps perfect time, and is valued at $40,000. Medicine, music, the arts, as associated with Switzerland has made it famous.

A national chapel in Sempach, scene of the famous battle that resulted in Swiss independence, is one of the sights of Switzerland, and is revered by the Swiss. The chapel is made entirely of the skulls of Austrian dead, killed when Winkelfried made his heroic sacrifice. The skulls are indented and many crushed in parts, mute evidence of the halberds and "morgen stafs" in the hands of the three hundred Swiss who fought and defeated an army of three thousand Austrians. It was in the battle that Winkelfried, seeing the Swiss troops unable to divide a solid phalanx of Austrian spears, advanced to the enemy ranks, and grasping a handful of the weapons, forced an opening. "Give me liberty, or give me death" was his cry. He fell dead, but not before the victorious Swiss rushed through the breach and converted certain defeat into decisive victory.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Covered Trailer"

"In Old Missouri"

Now playing at the McCarthy Theatre are two outstanding comedy feature presentations that for humor and hilarity few pictures in the past have equalled.

James Gleason, Lucille Gleason, Russell Gleason, Harry Davenport, Mary Beth Hughes and Tommy Ryan, better known to moviegoers everywhere as The Higgins Family, in their newest and funniest comedy "The Covered Trailer" is hit number one, while The Weaver Brothers and Elviry, famous vaudeville, radio and screen stars in their new musical comedy, "In Old Missouri" is hit number two and another swell all comedy feature. "The Shadow" serial is an extraordinary film filled with mystery and thrilling adventure, is now presented also in addition to the above laugh-hits, at the McCarthy Theatre.

"Dark Rapture"

"Dark Rapture," filmed and recorded by Armand Dennis and his wife Leila Roosevelt Dennis, while on an expedition sponsored by the late King Albert of the Belgians, which penetrated into the mysterious depths of the Belgian Congo, is booked for showing next week at the McCarthy Theatre, and the following is a short insight of the important scenes which will flash upon the screen, from this film.

Mysterious rites of the jungle, hidden since the beginning of history from the white man's gaze . . . Painful ceremonies by which wild boys become savage men . . The dancing to weird tom-tom music in the jungle night . . The music is primitive swing . . The dance steps are Big Apple and shag in a Congo setting . . Life with the pygmies four and a half feet tall in the depths of forests where the trees are so tall the sunlight never reaches the ground . . Pygmy women considered beauties by neighboring negro tribes and kidnapped for work and marriage . . The ceremony of the sacred river never before seen or filmed by white people . . Pygmy hunters catching antelope in nets . . The weird pygmy hunt by moonlight and their eerie hunting cry . . Tiny pygmies building a jungle suspension bridge over crocodile filled rivers . . The "bronco-busting" of wild elephants into tame work animals . . The whipping scenes where powerful negroes are fiercely flogged with long whips to show their bravery and indifference to pain . . The mysterious land of the giants with flowers and ferns taller than the average white man and people seven feet tall . . The land of unseen women, beauties seven feet tall, hidden from the gaze of men . . Wild dancing of the giants . . Unarmed natives lassoing wild elephants . . Barehanded capture of the best elephant in the herd . . Smallest men and biggest beasts . . Pygmy tribe eats an elephant in five minutes . . The wild flight of elephant-drawn prairie schooners before the raging forest fire as a terrific thunder and lighting storm stampedes both men and animals.

AT THE CAPITOL

"THE MAD EMPRESS"

"The Mad Empress" relates the tragic historical chapter of Maximilian and Carlota. The cast of the film, which is released by Vitagraph and opens at the Capitol Theatre next, is headed by Medea Novara, Austrian-born star, in the stellar role of Carlota, Conrad Nagel, and Lionel Atwill.

Filmed in Mexico City, the picture enjoyed opportunities never before made possible to producers. A special decree in Mexico City authorized the use of Mexico's National Museum of historical costumes. It also permitted Miguel Torres, the director and producer, to shoot sequences in the Royal Throne Room, the magnificent ball room, and Empress Carlota's bedroom in the National Palace.

Torres filmed battle scenes which required the services of 7,500 Mexican troops. These forces were assigned by the Mexican secretary of war. Historical material valued at $3,000,000 was placed at the use of Torres. Some of it had never been outside the museum walls.

"Light of Western Stars"

That host of fans who go for action and romance can get out the old ten gallon hat and the six guns and high tail on down to the Capitol Theatre where Zane Grey's "The Light of Western Stars," featuring Victor Jory, Jo Ann Sayers, Russell "Lucky" Hayden, Morris Ankrum, Noah Beery, Jr., J. Farrell MacDonald and Ruth Rogers opened last night.

There were whoops of joy in the theatre as this outstanding Zane Grey narrative unfolded on the screen under the magic guidance of Producer Harry Sherman and Director Lesley Selander. Once again this pair, makers of the great "Hopalong Cassidy" films, have captured all the spirit of the old west, peopled the picture with grand characters, carried it from scene to scene in a blaze of action, pausing only to temper it with moments of romance.

On the same programme the modernized version of Bayard Veiller's magnificent stage drama "Within The Law", starring Ruth Hussey, Paul Kelly, Tom Neal and Wm. Gargan.

AT THE BELLE

"IT ALL CAME TRUE"

The Belle Theatre's next attraction, will be "It All Came True." based on the Louis Bromfield novel and starring Ann Sheridan, the red-headed Texan dynamo who has become Hollywood's most outstanding feminine personality, combining, as she does, that "oomph" with dramatic fire.

Playing one of the most delightful characters ever created by Louis "Rains Came" Bromfield. Ann is at once bold and beautiful, hot-tempered and honest. She is sentimental, but is the last person in the world to admit it. She sings, does the rhumba, and "hangs one" onthe jaw of a would-be talent scout, all with equal proficiency.

With the quaintness, charm and dramatic suspense of the Bromfield novel, "It All Came True" tells the story of a group of people who live in a New York boarding house run by two sentimental old women, using it as a refuge where they can fight off the reality of the present and dwell in the fond memories of the past. The complacent atmosphere of the house is shattered when first Ann, daughter of one of the landladies comes home to roost and again when the housekeeper's son, Jeffrey Lynn, returns home after an absence of five years, with a gangster who intends to use the house as a hide-out. The gangster, played by Humphrey Bogart, is so won over by the motherly ministrations he receives that he offers to straighten out the financial difficulties of the boarding house by converting it into a night club with a "Gay Nineties" background. From there the story works up to a surprise climax.

Ann Sheridan sings such old favorites as, " Mr. Dooley," "Oh, You Beautiful Doll", and "Pretty Baby", with the same distinctive quality that she sings the brand new rhumba "Gaucho Serenade" and the sweet romantic ballad, "Angel In Disguise."

The popular Belle British Newsreel with its latest "over there" war pictures and general world news events and a clever comicolor cartoon "Confederate Honey" will be also exhibited. On the week end matinee a breath-taking chapter of the popular "SOS Coast Guard" serial will be presented.

"Vigil in the Night"

Hailed as the year's most dramatic picture, "Vigil in the Night" now at the Belle brings to the screen such favorites as Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne and Ann Shirley in the picturizatiion of the widely read story by A. J. Cronin.

Penner's Funniest Comedy

"Millionaire Playboy," Joe Penner's newest fun film on the same program offers a running fire of laughter, ranging from giggles through frightening shrieks to deep-toned belly laughs. It is Penner at his funniest and liveliest and that means plenty of genuine saucy comedy.

Rubinoff and his orchestra are an added feature on the same program.

THE SPIRIT OF FRANCE

France at war is one of the greatest inspirations to liberty the world has known. Today she stands with Britain, that other champion of the rights of nations to exist and to develop according to their own destiny without infringing on the rights of others or being infringed upon.

Yesterday the world read ringing words of patriotism which sound so like the heroic and patriotic notes of The Marseillaise. They were the words of Premier Reynaud, who sees Hitler staking all, risking all, like the mad gambler with the destinies of nations which he is, on the mad thrust 'at the heart of France." He sees the mightiest clash of nations and after that he sees Hitler downed. Germany has staked its all on the Western Front offensive and will be defeated, he said.

France and Belgium again bear the burden of being the cockpit of Europe where freedom has to pour out its blood against the insane ambition of Nazi Germany. To Belgium Reynaud offers triumph. He promises Belgium that "our victory will be hers," and these challenging words, "when all can seem lost, the world will see what France is capable of." He sees Hitler plunging headlong into the most gigantic attack against the democracies on the west front in an effort to wrest a decision in two months. "If he fails, he is doomed. He knows it," said the Premier, who along with the French and British and Belgian and other allied peoples, means that Hitler will be doomed.

M. Reynaud's speech was on the highest theme of devotion to country and liberty. Frenchmen's hearts must have beat faster and their labors seemed less as these words are said, "the days and months ahead are going to decide the centuries to come . . . The times through which we must live will perhaps have nothing in common with what we have known .. . . We are full of hope because we know our lives count for nothing. One thing counts—to preserve France.'

France has spoken through Reynaud. His words ring with the spirit of democracy, they are words of deepest devotion to country and the cause of freedom which France has long since espoused. They inspire Frenchmen to the great ordeal, tragic though it be, and in the words of the President of France, M. Herriot, France will remain faithful to her past and her destiny.

MR. ROOSEVELT SEES AIR LESSONS FROM THE WAR

President Roosevelt of the United States on Thursday asked Congress for one billion, one hundred and eighty-two million dollars as a defence fund and expressed the hope to see the United States so geared up that it could produce at least 50,000 planes a year.

This appeal to the President to Congress shows his reaction to the grim realities of developments in the Old World, particularly in the past few weeks, since Germany stepped out from behind the Siegfried Line and took the aggressive against Denmark, Norway, Luxembourg, Holland and Belgium, in about a month. Revelations of the past few days in the invasions of the Low Countries and Luxembourg have brought acutely to public attention the menace of the world from a power that wills to break treaties and to flout all the conventions of civilization.

The speed of and havoc caused by mechanized armies, the stealthy suddenness of parachute invasion and the flights of long range bombers have shown the inadequately protected nations the grave danger in which they are.

Mr. Roosevelt mentioned no nation by name but everyone knew to what nation he referred when he said "the brutal force of modern offensive war has been loosed in all its horror."

Mr. Roosevelt showed that in old days the oceans were reasonably defensive barriers when fleets under sail made an average of five miles an hour but even then there was danger of a sudden foray. In the days of steam the oceans gave strength to the United States defence, but air navigation has raised the speed of possible attack to 200 to 300 miles an hour. He pointed out that the new possibilities of nearer bases from which attacks could be made on the American Continent for from the fjords of Greenland it is four hours by air to Newfoundland, five hours to Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Quebec and only six hours to New England. The Azores are only two thousand miles from parts of the U. S. eastern seaboard and if Bermuda fell into hostile hands it is a matter of less than three hours for modern bombers to reach U. S. shores. From a base in the outer West Indies the coast of Florida could be reached in 20 minutes. Alaska is within four or five flying hours of Vancouver, Seattle, Tacoma and Portland.

The President was outspoken on the urgent need of his nation for the physical and ready ability to meet any menacing attacks and to prevent them reaching their execution. "This means military implements —not on paper—which are ready and available to meet any lightning offensive again our American interest." He painted the duties as follows—"Our defences must be invulnerable, our security absolute . . . Our ideal, our objective, is still peace—peace at home and abroad."

Mr. Roosevelt referred to the fact that airplanes are soon outdated and that many of the planes of the belligerent powers are not of the latest models. From the point of view of U.S. defence he indicated that the U.S. is not behind other nations in types of planes but it is in productive capacity where she falls behind. The U.S. navy is stronger than at any time in history and has a large construction program under way. The U.S. army is at the greatest peacetime strength.

It is recalled that Mr. Neville Chamberlain not long ago declared that neutral nations must be adequately armed or associate themselves with nations which can protect them against aggression.

Mr. Roosevelt has seen the situation in Europe steadily descending into the pit of war through dictatorship. Everyone recalls his powerful pleas for peace and his appeal to Hitler, which proved ineffectual against the self-will of the German Fuehrer.

Mr. Roosevelt made a statement which is of the chief importance today to the Allied nations, "For the permanent record I ask the Congress not to take any action which would in any way hamper or delay the delivery of American-made planes to foreign nations which have ordered them or seek to purchase more planes. That, from the point of view of our national defence, would be extremely shortsighted." This covers the question of planes sold to nations which can take delivery.

The Poilu Prints His Paper

Paris—(CP)—The war has greatly increased the number of newspapers published in France but no reference to the war as such is found in any of them. The editors and staffs of the several dozen newborn since last September are at the Front.

Every French unit wants its own and it is not difficult to find illustrators, cartoonists, caricaturists, poets and moralists , to fill the sheets. Most of them are mimeographed and circulate in the camps and trenches as did another set of war gazettes 25 years ago. A number of them reach Paris.

"Le Tortillard" (The Twister) announces itself "Comic-tragic-climatic." An advertisement on the front page of a recent edition offers "To counterfeit 10-day permissions (passes) in return for enough straw to make a comfortable bed."

Another is known as the "Anti-Cafard" and its slogan under the title is "In the beginning God created the Blues—these morbid insects have been responsible for many of the catastrophies which afflict humanity." Old soldiers of any country will appreciate the vigorous "anti-cootie" policy of this sheet.

Majority of the newspaper names are impossible in translation but among them are to be found "The Vagabond Duck", "The Echo of Cementville," the "Alert."

The "Little Bridge" says, "We are somewhere working at something which demands a certain amount of time to complete. We have a certain amount of leisure and a certain amount of talent. These pages are meant to maintain a certain good humor in the uncertain life of the soldier."

While the "Balloonet" describes itself as the "least puffed-up of the war front newspapers." Its advertisement section offers: "One bronchitis almost new; one lung congestion slightly used but solid and one cough guaranteed to resist any cough cure yet invented — for sale to anybody behind the lines who has the leisure to enjoy them."

A work brigade offers generously —20 shovels, 18 picks, 14 wheelbarrows, 10 pails and four nails to the collectors of old iron. Another regiment advertises for "Young and beautiful stenographers to look after personal correspondence. Quick, discreet and capable of entering by the windows."

Short stories, poems, cartoons fill the pages—there is special space given to promotions, decorations and "permissions". Not the slightest reference to the war is to be found in any of them.

World Revolution

Isolationists have been trying to protect their position behind the moral excuse that the present war is simply a war of rival imperialisms, a game of power politics between the grasping nations of the wicked Old World. Many of them are being rudely awakened to the fact that this is a much different kind of war, by the tactics of the Nazis in pouncing upon one small country after another that has observed the most punctilious neutrality, and by their methods in striking directly and unscrupulously at the terrorization of civilians. But it is not merely the methods of the Nazis that are unrestricted and revolutionary, but their fundamental aims.

As Otto D. Tolischus, our former Berlin correspondent, writes from Stockholm, the present war is by proclamation of the National Socialist regime itself a revolutionary war—a war that heralds a world revolution in which are to be laid the new foundations for the twentieth century and the next millennium. It is supported by a fanatic revolutionary faith which despises the liberalism and individualism achieved in recent centuries at so great a cost, and calls for a new collectivism based on an iron discipline and the ruthless sacrifice of the individual for the benefit of the collective whole—or of the ruling caste

This is confirmed anew by the latest statement of Alfred Rosenberg, the Nazi party philosopher, who declares that "the war which began before all the world on May 10 is the greatest of revolutionary wars. An outworn era is crumbling to dust beneath the marching feet of the German Army." This revolution is not directed, as some of its catch-phrases may lead once to suppose, merely against the "plutocracies," against the "tyranny of gold," against free world trade, against capitalism, or even merely against democracy and liberty. What its supporters hate and despise and seek to destroy is nothing less than civilization itself. It is indeed a "revolution of nihilism". And its fanatical leaders, it is now clear, have no limits on their aims. Their aims grow with their conquests, and always reach beyond them. Hitler professed at first to be seeking to unify in the Reich only people of German blood. He has since grabbed one non-German nation after another. He now declares that his aim is nothing less than the destruction of the British Empire. But if he should succeed in this tremendous project, who believes now that he would stop there? His whole character, his aims and methods and those of his followers mean that he would merely look around for new worlds to conquer and lay waste. The world must adjust itself to this possibility and take without a moment's loss of time every step necessary to avert it. — New York Times.

Benefits of the Diabetic Association

It was a common sight less than twenty years ago to watch an overweight friend or acquaintance begin to lose weight and with it loss of health and strength. The cause was diabetes. In a few months, in a very few years at least, he passed away because there was no known treatment for diabetes that would postpone death longer than this. Since the discovery of insulin, diabetics are now kept alive and most of them are able to carry on gainful occupations.

Despite the knowledge that a proper diet and the use of insulin will prevent death, many diabetics get careless about their diet and regular use of insulin and some get beyond help.

In Great Britain a few years ago what is known as the Diabetic Association was formed with the object of helping one another and helping spread the knowledge of how to live safely and well with diabetes to those who were losing all hope. Just as the object of a service club or labor union is to get and give help, so with the Diabetic Association. In addition to diabetics, physicians, dietetic and food research workers and nurses are allowed to join the association.

One of the chief objects of the association is to educate the public, particularly employers, to learn that a diabetic who knows how to take care of himself and does it, is just as efficient, mentally and physically as those who are not diabetics.

"The association also attempts to overcome the natural feeling of despair among patients at the discovery of their affliction. The effect of belonging to a well organized diabetic family or association facing a common difficulty in an important benefit, and practical instructions, hints, and association news are conveyed to all members by the Diabetic Journal. The association provides information about the location of diabetic clinics and boarding houses where diabetic patients receive special consideration, about holiday camps for diabetic children, about where insulin can be readily obtained, and about district nurses who visit diabetics who are infirm."

It would be well for diabetics to form their own local association and then link up with parent association in Great Britain for an exchange of all that is being learned about diabetes and its treatment.

Inside Nazi Germany

In this article released by the British Ministry of Information the writer reveals the existence of a widespread system of bribery and corruption in Nazi official circles. The payment of bribes may ensure a mitigation of harsh conditions and even escape over the frontier for the conquered.

Out of the welter of events let loose upon the world since the outbreak of the war, two facts about Germany stand out above all others. They dominate and determine the conduct of events particularly in Eastern Europe, and will doubtless affect also the outcome of the war.

These facts are: first the brutalization of the German people under the Nazi regime, and second, the deterioration which some of the better German characteristics have undergone under Nazism

Comparatively little is as yet known about the second, not less important, fact which this occupation has disclosed. The first six months of Nazi rule in Poland have revealed, apart from the brutalization and deterioration of the German character, an amazing decline in German efficiency, capacity for organization and in corruptibility which were once the pride of the German people.

A state of chaos, disorder, corruption and lack of organization had been disclosed in the Nazi-occupied part of Poland which would have horrified the generals of the old Imperial German Army, which occupied the same territory from 1915 to 1918.

The most striking illustrations of this demoralization are revealed in the scheme and measures connected with the Nazi treatment of the Jews. Among these the failure of the grandiose Nazi scheme for the establishment of the so-called Jewish "Reservation' in the Polish district of Lublin is best known.

The scheme was based on one of those ill-conceived Nazi theories involving the wholesale transfer of populations from one place to another as a means of solving a complicated social problem. All the Jews from Germany, Austria, Czechoslovakia, and also from some parts of Poland, were to be transferred by force to this particularly poor and sandy spot of Poland.

Without taking the trouble to ascertain whether the district was capable of taking in all the Jews to be sent there; without making any preparations for their housing accommodation or feeding, trains from all parts of the Reich began to dump down Jews into the reservation. The result was that famine, typhus and cholera soon broke out and began to decimate not only the unfortunate Jews, but also the non-Jewish Polish population and even to threaten the "chosen race" of the Nazi conquerors themselves. The plan had to be abandoned.

But while the Nazi Governor and his lieutenants suspended the plan and refused to admit any further drafts of Jews into the reservation, the Nazis in Berlin continued their expulsion and deportations.

At the height of an exceptionally cold winter, with the temperature at thirty degrees below zero, entire Jewish communities from Stettin, Schneidemuehl, and other cities were sent in open cattle trucks across Northern Germany and Poland to Lublin, only to be sent back by the Nazis to their old homes.

Not all came back; hundreds of frozen bodies remained in the snow-covered fields of Poland, as signs of the breakdown of Nazi organization; thousands died from epidemics; hundreds of thousands were ruined and deprived of everything they had in their lives. And all this because of Nazi inefficiency and disorganization.

Brutal Plans

The plan for a single big reservation in Lublin had to be abandoned, but a new plan, no less brutal, took its place. It is the establishment of Ghettos on the medieval pattern in a number of districts and cities. Instead of segregating the Jews in one particular district, the new scheme proposes to segregate them from the non-Jewish populations in the places where they live and to expel them from a number of other districts which are to be reserved exclusively for the higher Aryan race. This plan, too, demands the forced removal of hundreds of thousands of people from their homes, the uprooting of entire communities and the ruin of hundreds of thousands of people.

Once again chaos and disorder reign in Nazi-occupied Poland; again people are packed into cattle trucks and driven from their homes to unknown destinations; again people are expelled from one place and not admitted into another. again there is no preparation, no planning, no co-ordination, no investigation into whether the expelled Jews could find a roof over their heads or food, for the first days, at least, of their arrival.

Again the Gauleiter of one district does not know what the other is doing. The Gestapo in Berlin gives orders, of which the local Nazi leaders in Poland are not even informed. Both, the Gestapo and the Nazis issue orders and make plans of which the Army authorities do not approve and later cancel.

Nazis "Buy Up" Jewish Homes

In the midst of all this a plot has been discovered in which Gestapo men, Storm Troopers, and Army men have united to capitalize this terrible tragedy of human beings for their own petty gains. The plot is worked in the following manner: when the Jews are expelled from a certain district of a city and ordered to go to another, they are usually given only a few days', and sometimes only a few hours' notice. They are not allowed to take any of their property or of their heavier home belongings. Sometimes, they are compelled to leave just as they are, with only the clothes they have on them. Within the short time of their notice, they have to dispose of their homes and belongings and are, of course, obliged to "sell" everything at whatever price they can get.

This opportunity is utilized by the Germans to enrich themselves at the expense of the unfortunate Jewish people. For a few marks they "buy up" homes and belongings which had taken the labour of generations to build and accumulate.

To do this kind of "business" on a large scale, companies have been formed in Germany with branches in Poland. The companies have as their agents Gestapo men, Nazi leaders, or Army men. These inform headquarters in Germany, in advance, when an expulsion order is about to be issued against a Jewish community.

At the appropriate moment, men arrive, either from Berlin or Koenigsberg, and "buy up" the Jewish homes and valuables. The unfortunate people doomed to be expelled are ready to give away everything belonging to them for just a few marks which will be of help to them on their long journey. In this way, a big flourishing "business" is now being carried on in Germany.

It has been disclosed that the proceeds of these "business transactions" are shared between the local Nazis who order the expulsions and the German agents who "buy up" the property. It has even been issued for no other reason than to enable the Nazis and their agents to collect their ill-gotten profits and commissions from the "sales" of the homes of the expelled people. Such is the corruption now rampant in Nazi-occupied Poland.

Nazis "Smuggle" Jews Abroad

Nor is the corruption limited merely to the expulsions and to these so-called "sales". It pervades every phase of life in the occupied territory. Bribery of German soldiers, unknown during the German occupation of twenty-five years ago, is now the rule of the Nazi army. Gestapo men, Storm trooper, and soldiers, all take and even demand, bribes. By means of a bribe one can be free from concentration camps, spared torture, expulsion, escape from forced labour and even execution. A bribe will contravene many dreaded Nazi decrees. For a bribe, Nazis will help their victims to escape abroad from the hell they themselves had prepared for them.

Entire organizations, consisting of German soldiers and Nazi civilians, are operating on all frontiers for the purpose of smuggling people out of Nazi Poland to countries abroad. There is a fixed rate for such smuggling, ranging from fifty to five hundred dollars, and thousands of people are availing themselves of this service.

Strong Financially

The necessities of war give new and added importance to our financial transactions with residents of countries other than Canada. The need for foreign exchange to finance our purchases in these countries, particularly the United States, will increase as our requirements for raw materials rise with the expansion of our industdial activities in support of our war effort. Since borrowing in the United States by belligerents is prohibited, unless our income from trading transactions can be greatly increased, the only alternative which will remain open to us, is the gradual realization of our capital assets abroad. The accumulation of favorable balances in recent years is, therefore, a matter of considerable satisfaction. That this position was maintained during 1939 is shown by the official estimate recently released by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and this report, under existing conditions, assumes even greater importance than in times of peace.

During 1939, Canada's receipts from external sources exceeded expenditures in other countries by the substantial sum of $209 million. This was a material increase over the balance of $180.2 million reported for 1938, but considerably less than the totals of $218.2 million and $306.5 million attained in the years 1937 and 1936, respectively. The preliminary summary for 1939 shows total credits in current account—commodity trade, gold shipments, tourist expenditures, interest, dividends, freight and payments for other services—at $1,561.3 million, an increase of 7 per cent. as compared with 1938. Debits rose by 6 per cent, to $1,352.3 million.

Canada is in a strong financial position.—St. Catharines Standard.

Choice of Death

We are indebted to the British Ministry of Information for two successive extracts from broadcasts to the Reich by Dr. Goebbels' department on March 25 and 29 respectively, writes Toronto Saturday Night. On March 25, German hearers were assured that "Metal donations should be a sacrifice and a gift. The party will supervise the collection. The voluntary principle will be preserved everywhere." On March 29, they were informed that "Metal collection is a sacrifice made by the German people to carry on the fight for existence forced upon us. Any person ...who in any way diverts such metal from its destination injures the fight for freedom of Greater Germany and therefore will be punished by death." Obviously the most complete freedom exists in Germany in this matter, and the actions of every German are left as voluntary as they can possibly be. Nobody who is willing to be punished by death is under any compulsion whatever. Nobody need do anything that he would rather die than do; the choice of death is always open.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The German high command is employing in Belgium the tactics which brought speedy success in Poland but so far has failed to create the disorganization of the defence which came speedily in Poland.

A feature of these tactics is the rapid push of mechanized columns towards definite objectives within the territory of the opposing side. These pushes are launched with a degree of violence which involves considerable risk of confusion and lack of co-ordinated action by the whole force.

The French command has already altered its method of fighting in order to meet the German tactics. The French announcement that open warfare will be waged instead of a warfare of position means the French will use methods similar to the Germans.

It is still much too soon to appraise how effective the enemy tactics may be against Allied defences but while there are a few instances reported of enemy columns penetrating far into the Allied lines the columns appear in all cases to have been driven back or immobilized in a pocket.

The latter is almost as satisfactory as a definite repulse for it means the column is unable to deploy or spread out after penetrating the defence lines and so cause serious trouble to the defenders. There are also reports of columns suffering because of inability to get ammunition up to their new positions. This is one of the results of air operations. Allied planes have had some success in bombing transport trucks, smashing up roads and railways and destroying bridges behind the advancing Germans.

COUNTY POLICE COURT

When the name of John Moore was called in County Police Court, held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd at Tweed yesterday, court officials were informed that during his period of being admitted to bail, Moore had been killed when struck by a railway train in Hamilton recently. A charge of attempting to obtain money by fraud was immediately dismissed, at the suggestion of Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C.

Percy Green, was sentenced to serve from three to six months in the Ontario Reformatory after being convicted of breaking and entering a service station in Tweed. On a second charge of the theft of a fog light, Green was given two months, to run concurrently with that of the former conviction.

Wilson Sills, who was convicted of the theft of money, taken from a parked automobile, was given a suspended sentence, after Mr. Donnan pointed out that the offence was Wilson's initial trouble with the law.

"I do not condone this practice of stealing from automobiles and personally feel that an example should be made of parties responsible of such contemptible theft, and this court does not intend that this should be considered as a precedent in such matters," Crown Attorney Donnan added in stern warning.

Several minor L.C.A. cases concluded the proceedings.

At the opening of today's city police court it was announced that Clerk of the Court Chief Kidd was confined to his home through illness, Sergeant Arthur Harman assuming the duties of Chief of Police. Both Magistrate Butler K.C. and Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C. expressed sympathy upon hearing of the Chief's illness

The proceedings were short today, however, three inebriates appearing on charges of intoxication and all pleaded guilty. Only one of the men made comment, a transient, who gave his name as Percy Conway. "This man was quite intoxicated and trespassing on C.N.R. property," Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C. informed His Worship before Conway was sentenced to 14 days in jail. The other two men indicated they would meet the assessed fine if given time to raise the money.

Indian Structural Workers Claim Right to Cross Boundary

Washington, May 16 (AP)—The office of Indian Affairs wasn't the least bit surprised today when it learned a bunch of Indian braves in Brooklyn are in demand as structural steel workers.

"It's not generally known," said an official, "but some the finest workmen on the Sixth Avenue elevated project in New York were Mohawk Indians."

The Brooklyn braves are Iroquois, of Caughnawaga, Que., near Montreal, who hit the trail to Brooklyn to work on skyscrapers, bridges and other buildings, but because entangled in governmental restrictions—they have been unable to qualify for W.P.A. employment.

As they hail from Canada, authorities have ruled that they are not citizens or wards of the United States government. The braves contend an ancient treaty gave them the right to cross into Canada and to come back anytime they wanted to.

Congress has been asked to clarify their status.

L. W. Santasiere of New York, their attorney, recently told a house committee the Indians were in great demand because they have no fear of height and can walk a beam 60 stories high without hesitation.

Nazis Mass Mechanized Divisions On Slovak Border; Balkans Uneasy

Budapest, May 17—(AP)—Germany was reported today to be massing whole divisions of Blitz troops—mechanized and motorized forces—on the Slovak frontier of Hungary and pointed at Rumania 140 miles away.

Unconfirmed advices from Vienna credited indirectly to German army officers there, said that all but the date had been set for a lightning march through Hungary.

The reports plunged the Balkans into new fear. Military observers expressed belief Germany might strike into the Rumanian oil fields to keep her war machine in the west from running out of gas.

(The British Broadcasting Corporation announced that Rumania had decided to cancel army leaves. Rumania is credited with an armed force of 1,600,000 men and holds a guarantee of British-French aid if she has to fight for her independence.

(Hungary has refused Allied promises. She was reported recently to have told Allied representatives that she would decide on what to do about any right-of-way for German troops when the need arose.)

Steady Stream of Troop Trains

A steady stream of troop trains and columns of high speed fighting equipment, replete with artillery, tanks, armoured cars, field kitchens and truck trains was reported, by way of Bratislava, to be moving into eastern Slovakia.

Still other German forces were reported concentrated in the Zistesdorf region, north of Vienna, at the western tip of Slovakia.

The movements in eastern Slovakia were said to have started Monday with Poprad chosen as temporary headquarters.

Hundreds of Nazi warplanes were said to be poised at Vienna and Slovak airports, ready to render "softening" action of the blitzkrieg technique.

Two days before the reported troop movement into eastern Slovakia, oil refineries in the Bohemia-Moravia protectorate (a part of dismembered Czecho-Slovakia) were said to have been advised to transfer all their stocks to warehouses and to work night and day to "meet an urgent demand."

For a week observers at Budapest and elsewhere along the Danube have noted an absence of German barge traffic downriver from Vienna, and some military quarters here said that the craft were being fitted to carry heavy artillery, munitions and supplies toward Rumania.

All Set But the Date

German officers quartered in hotels at Vienna, the capital of old Austria, were reported to have told foreigners that they had orders to march through Hungary but that they had no idea when the jump-off would be ordered.

Military observers, pointing to the fact that Rumanian oil deliveries to Germany are now well over 1,000,000 tons in arrears of the quota agreed upon by the two countries, promptly linked word of the German concentration with what they held to be a growing German need for the engine fuel and lubricants.

They said Germany's particular need is high grade gasoline— to power the planes she has been using by the thousands in the big drive to the west through The Netherlands and Belgium.

These informants held it to be a simple matter of arithmetic. The basis of their figuring was that each of Germany's planes burns an average of 15 gallons of gasoline each hour of every 24.

Not that 15 gallons is sufficient to sustain a bomber or a fighting plane for an hour in the air—150 gallons and 60 gallons, respectively, would be closer to their hourly consumption—but the consumption of the average plane on an around-the-clock basis would be 15 gallons an hour.

360 Gal. Daily Per Plane

Thus the observers arrive at a consumption of 360 gallons a day for the average plane—more than two hours in the air for the average bomber and six for the average fighter.

Multiply this by only 1,000 and you have 360,000 gallons as the daily need for even that number of planes—or about 1,400 tons of high grade gasoline.

To get that amount Germany would have to transport and refine 8,600 tons of crude oil daily, or about twice her present quota from Rumania.

Such figuring does not take into account the Reich's needs for her motorized and mechanized forces, her navy and war industries. Neither, for that matter, does it reckon with the great reserves she is supposed to have had before the war started last September, nor other sources of supply, such as the Russian and Polish fields.

Former Hastings Couple Married 65 Years

New Liskeard, May 17—Married in Hastings County, nearly sixty-five years ago, Mr. and Mrs. John Legrow of Casey Township, fourteen miles from town, have more than 100 living descendants, and they are believed to hold the distinction of being the longest-wed couple in Temiskaming district. Six of their seven children are living, and they have fifty-five grandchildren, and forty-two great-grandchildren.

In good health, except for Mrs. Legrow's eyesight, the elderly couple come of farming stock, and they have lived on the land all their lives. Mr. Legrow is in his eighty-sixth year and his wife, the former Mary Demas, celebrated her eighty-third birthday in January. They have lived in Northern Ontario since 1909, when they moved up from their former farm home near Marmora, and they settled in Casey Township twenty-six years ago, carving a home out of solid bush to duplicate an experience of their early married life in Southern Ontario.

Today, they live on a horseless farm, a tractor constructed at home from an old truck purchased for $75 doing the work formerly requiring equine aid. Twice since settling in Casey Township has their home been threatened by raging bush fires, but in 1916 and again six years later the flames destroyed property all around them, but left untouched their buildings on the banks of Wright Creek, tributary of the Blanche River. Mr. Legrow helped install the plant of the first daily newspaper in Cobalt.

Born in Three Rivers, P.Q., Mr. Legrow moved to Marmora in early life. His wife is a native of Hastings County, and although of French descent, cannot speak a word of that language. The couple were married in the Roman Catholic Church at Marmora on October 3, 1875, by Rev. Father Davis, their attendants being Catherine Darragh, the bride's cousin, and Jerry Legrow, brother of the bridegroom. One son, Thomas, lives in Toronto; other members of the family are in different parts of the North.

Fashion Flashes

DRESS UP YOUR sports and casual costumes with a smart felt hat. A becoming model is green felt with a tall crown saddle stitched at top to form a triangular effect. Quill and ribbon are in brown. Large brim is turned up one side.

Plenty of space for trifles in the huge patch pockets that are a feature of many of the new house dresses. A pretty model is striped percale in Delft blue and French rose with double saddle pockets and an inserted band at the midriff.

It doesn't matter what the thermometer says, women are always interested in fur jackets. A good model is cut on fitted lines with a full, curved rippling peplum. Kidskin dyed a rose beige makes the coat.

There's much work for a hat. It can be smart, becoming, flattering, and make or break an outfit. Ideal for the more mature type is a model with a curved, dipping brim of black novelty straw with a crown of white felt. At back, the crown extends into big gathered loops of the white felt.

A year 'round success should be that of a lovely silk crepe print with a design of the figures of the Zodiac. These are of red and black on a white ground, or in red and white on a black ground. One dress in this print has tiny crescent moon and star buttons.

Cutain going up, and just a moment to snatch a glance at a cap moment to snatch a glance at a cape vertically on the front and in curved formation on the deep cape back.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Distance Lends Enchantment

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I took leave of absence from my job, and got a position in another city for about a year. There I became acquainted with a very pretty girl who worked in the same office with me. We fell in love and became engaged. I've been back at my regular job in my home city for the past few months and correspond with my girl friend.

A short time after I came back, my girl and her mother arrived and have taken a small apartment here. But I find that she bores me now and I want to break off with her. It's funny how much I love her when she's away, but as soon as we get together, I'm bored.

You're in love with love and not with the young lady you met when you were away from home. If you get bored with her after you've been with her for an hour or so, think how much more bored you'd be if you signed up with her for life. I know it's going to be tough, but it's better to make the break now than after the final vows have been made.

The Silent Type

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The young man I'm interested in is 26 and I'm 22. We've been going together for almost a year now. I'm really in love with him and he knows it, but in all this time he has never said he loves me. He is so bound up in his work that he can't seem to talk about anything else. Sometimes I say to him: "Don't you like me, just a wee bit?" And he says: "Of course I do; if I didn't think a great deal of you I wouldn't come over at all."

Well, why doesn't he tell me that without my asking him. It would mean so much to me.

Some men are not demonstrative, and sweethearts and wives have got to make the best of these silent lovers. You ought to get some comfort from what he says. He probably wouldn't come over if he didn't think a lot of you.

I judge your young man is very much wrapped up in his work, and that's a good steady type to which to tie.

Non-Dancer Wants Girl Friend To Give Up Dancing

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going with a girl of 20 for about eight months now, but we're not engaged. I'm 24 years old. I don't approve of dancing and it just about drives me wild to see her dancing with other fellows. I have asked her to quit, but her folks tell her to dance whenever she has a good partner.

I don't dance and don't wish to learn, and I think she is very selfish to dance with other men when I refuse to dance. How can I make her quit? What do you think about it?

Jealous

x x x

I'm afraid my reply is going to disappoint you, but I find myself agreeing with the young lady's family. You are not engaged, you don't dance and don't want to learn. But still you want to keep this young friend from enjoying herself.

You're too young to be so rigid in your point of view. Let me urge you to learn how to dance and surprise the young lady by adding another partner to her list.

A Bride in a New Neighborhood

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Married only recently, I came to this neighborhood as a bride, but my husband has lived here almost all of his life. I'm rather shy, and am puzzled about making acquaintances. Who makes the first gesture when we meet on the street, the neighbors or I? My husband has introduced me to a few but he's not always with me when I meet these friends of his.

In Doubt

x x x

A lady always speaks first to a gentleman. There is no rule about ladies recognizing each other; they speak when they meet. As your husband is well known in the neighborhood, the rule is for his friends to call on you, and then you can return the visits. You must be pleasant and friendly.

As you tell me you are shy, suggest to your husband that he invite in some of his closest friends to meet you. You could have a little party with simple refreshments.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Divorcee's Engagement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it proper for a divorcee to have a formal announcement of her engagement? She has a child about three years of age.

2. Is it proper to have a bridal shower for her?

3. Is it proper for her to have a church wedding?

C.

1. The engagement of a divorcee should be announced as quietly as possible. That is, she and her fiance tell the news to their relatives and close friends, and write notes to those who live too far away to be told by word of mouth.

2. Customarily, showers are not given before a second marriage.

3. The divorcee should talk over with the minister the question of a church wedding. It depends on the denomination of the church, its regulations.

Candlelight Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. At an eight o'clock candlelight wedding, with the bride wearing a white dinner gown (with jacket) and turban, what should the bridegroom wear? The bride is anxious not to have the wedding formal, and she will have but one attendant.

2. Would it be "good manners" for the bridal party to receive in the rear of the church, as no wedding reception would be planned after the weddings?

Interested

1. Under these circumstances, it would be proper for the bridegroom to wear a dinner jacket (Tuxedo.)

2. Yes.

Wedding Etiquette Tip

A formal wedding invitation to the church only—the invitation that "requests the honour of your presence" — does not require an answer. An invitation to the reception or wedding breakfast does require an answer.

Adolescence

Adolescence is a time of life when young persons go through a great deal of stress and strain and it is a wise parent who prepares himself in advance to help the child go through this difficult period.

Being the time when he reproductive organs of a male or female begin to develop and mature, physical change in adolescence is rapid. A child may be placid and amiable up to this time in his or her life, and then suddenly become stubborn rebellious and hard to handle. Some parents get panicky when this happens, because they don't understand it. They think the child is going to the dogs when as a matter of fact the youth's personality is developing without the balancing good judgment and common sense which will appear a little later.

From about the age of seven years, a youngster's strength increases rapidly. During his early teens this increase is even more speedy. Children appear awkward and clumsy then because growth is so rapid that they have to learn by experience how much strength and effort must be put into doing things.

As I have said, the whole phenomenon of adolescence centres around the maturing of the reproductive organs. These begin to mature at from twelve to fifteen years in girls and about two years later in boys. Of course, geographical, living and physical conditions cause quite a variation in these ages.

Just before this time of life, sometimes referred to as the time of puberty, many physical changes take place in the child that signal its coming. Hair begins to grow under the arm pits and in the pubic regions. The voice becomes fuller, and in the boy it is likely to "crack" as it changes to the deeper pitch. The girl begins to appear womanly, her breasts develop, her hips broaden; the boy's face shows the first evidence of whiskers, his shoulders get broader, and he has a more manly aspect.

With all these changes going on in the child's body, it is necessary to give some thought to physical hygiene. Boys will likely show a tremendous increase in appetite. They never seem to get enough to eat, while girls on the other hand, often become finicky, and develop a craving for special dishes. The sudden rate in growth will result in more fatigue and a craving for more and more sleep, as the muscles gain in size and strength. Outdoor exercise will become more desirable. All body activities are increased during this time and that means that there will be an increase in the body's wastes and so good habits of elimination and a good healthy skin condition are very important.

Puberty is really the continuation of a development which began before the child was born, and so there are no special rules of hygiene necessary at this time. But parents must realize that the rules that apply to children become especially important with adolescence.

Hands Off Child's Handedness!

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

IN THE MODERN public school the teacher is instructed not to force a left-handed child to use the right hand.

While I was helping train teachers in New York City and later in Cleveland, I would have my students, as a regular experiment in the laboratory course in psychology, write with the wrong hand. They were told that on signal they would begin writing, with the wrong hand, a certain sentence and would continue without stopping for 15 minutes. After a few minutes they would reveal strain and irritation. Some complained of pain in the arm, neck or back. Some grew very irritable toward the person next to them. All found it an unpleasant experience.

After they would relax I would say: "Now, you can see why you should not force a left-handed child to use the right hand at school. You can also see how such interference with handedness might cause stuttering, since stuttering is chiefly an emotional disorder.

Teacher Forces It

Nevertheless, I receive a good many letters which tell of a teacher forcing a left-handed child to write with the right hand. Let me give one example:

"Dear Dr. Myers—My problem concerns my little girl, Patsy, age six. She is a left-handed child and has been since infancy. As a small child she would always insist on using her left hand. It didn't matter how many times I would change her spoon or toy over to the right one.

"I asked our doctor about this at the time and he said to let her alone, as that was natural for her. He also said if we didn't we would do more harm than good.

"Patsy went to a kindergarten a year ago and enjoyed it very much. Her teacher said she was a smart child. When she started in the first grade this year, she seemed to like it, too. After a few days I noticed a change, and it became worse as the days went on. The teacher is forcing her to use the right hand and she says she can't.

"Noon and night she comes home crying and refuses to go back to school. She says 'Mother, what am I going to do when Miss—makes me use the other hand? She scolds me so when I cry and says I am a big baby.' Patsy used to be a very steady child but she is getting nervous over this matter".

In this instance I happened to know the inspector personally. Knowing of his high-grade training and philosophy, I felt it safe to have the matter called to his attention. My guess was right .The child was "saved".

Solving Parent Problems

Q—Would you teach a boy from early childhood never to hit a girl?

A.—I would not. Rather, I would encourage him in self-defense against any aggressor, girl or boy, especially before the age of 10 or 12, but try to guide him never to be the aggressor in a quarrel or fight.

Q.—How may I cultivate in my nine-year-old son the responsibility for putting a clean handkerchief in his pocket before leaving for school?

A—Quietly remind him for several mornings at a time when he can place the handkerchief with the least trouble and greatest satisfaction. By and by, when he remembers it himself, pay him with your loving smile.

Boston Red Sox Increase Lead Over Yankees in Last Place To 9½ Games by Sheer Power

Joe Cronin's Squad Has Won 18 of 24 Games Played This Season

PLENTY OF POWER

Chicago Cubs Defeat Boston Bees 5-4 Although Outhit by Boston Squad

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Boston Red Sox aren't fooling with those gestures they're making toward the American League pennant.

Without any spectacular strings of victories the Red Sockers have won 18 of 24 games, including eight of the nine played since they took over first place May 6.

They increased their margin over the second-place Cleveland Indians to three full games yesterday by outslugging St. Louis Browns for a 7-5 victory. The same manoeuvre expanded their lead over the last place New York Yankees to 9 1-2 games.

The Yanks haven't had a chance to play for four consecutive days, rain catching them again yesterday at Chicago along with five other major league games. The only other contest that escaped the weather was Chicago Cubs at Boston in the National League, with the Bees losing their sixth successive game 5-4.

The Bees outhit their foes 9-6 and had the benefit of a two-run homer by Al Lopez, but they never quite got going against the slants of big Bill Lee. The Cubs made the most of their blows with Glen Russell hitting a homer and Jim Gleeson a triple with two on.

Impressive Show of Power

The Red Sox rout of the Browns was accomplished with an impressive show of power. Lou Finney made four hits in five times at bat, and got a home run. Jimmie Foxx smashed out his ninth round tripper of the season. Bobby Doerr hit two doubles.

With that kind of onslaught, it was easy for Denny Galehouse to go the route even though he was touched for 12 fairly scattered hits.

Cincinnati Reds and Brooklyn Dodgers attempted to play the deciding game of their series yesterday, but rain halted activities in the fourth inning.

TORONTO LEAFS BEAT BALTIMORE

Carl Fischer Turns in 8-Hitter to Beat Third Place Club 4-1

(By The Asosciated Press)

That was shown in the last three days by the eighth-place Toronto Maple Leafs who took three out of four games from the third-place Baltimore Orioles—on pitching alone.

The Leafs have been notoriously weak at the plate all season and in winning these three got an average of only seven hits a game. So the story of the victories lies in the pitching feats of Jim Reninger, Jim Walkup and Carl Fischer, who turned in three hurling performances equal to any the International League has seen all year.

Reninger and Walkup each came up with six-hit jobs in winning the opening two games of the series and Fischer held the Flock to eight well scattered base-knocks yesterday for a 4-1 triumph, in the only game played in the league. Rain and cold caused postponements of the other three contests.

A HEAVY TRACK FOR KING'S PLATE

Dark Comet, Despite His Soreness, Will be Favored to Win Guineas on Off-Track

Toronto, May 17—(CP)—Despite heavy overnight rain that turned the turf heavy enthusiasm heightened today as the names of the cream of Ontario's three-year-old thoroughbred crop were dropped in the entry box for the 81st running tomorrow of the King's Plate. A field of 12 is expected to start.

Hope of a fast track for the nine furlongs battle for the King's 50 guineas and a $7,500 added purse was dispelled following the overnight downpour. Skies were still overcast and more rain was threatened.

A heavy track will strengthen the chance of G. M. Hendrie's Dark Comet. The gelding pulled up sore after a workout last Saturday, but the injury was not believed to be serious. He showed a decided affection for an off track during his two year old campaign.

Added interest was injected into the race when it was announced that Ronnie Nash, a Toronto jockey riding in the United States would be aboard Miss M. A. Kane's Willie the Kid. Decision to obtain Nash for riding duties was decided upon after Tommy Aimers, wiry Toronto jockey, was injured. Aimers suffered a fractured collar bone after his mount stumbled during a workout Thursday.

COULDN'T STING HIM

An invitation to dinner had been sent to the newly settled physician. In reply, the hostess received an absolutely illegible letter.

"If I were you," suggested her husband, "I should take it to the druggist. Druggists can always read doctors' letters, however badly they are written.

The druggist looked at the slips of note paper, went into his dispensary and returned a few minutes later with a bottle, which he handed over the counter.

"There you are, madam," he said. "That will be 75 cents."—Wall St. Journal.

Ladies' Softball League Adopts 24-Game Schedule

Will Play Games at Armouries Lawn and Collegiate Campus, Opening May 28th.

VIKINGS IN

Reg. Moncrieff Donates Trophy to be Known as "Frontenac Cup"

With the Canadian Department Stores replacing the Lipson entry in the Belleville Mercantile Ladies' Softball League, the official league schedule was drafted and released today by General Chairman T. E. Schwab and Secretary Jack McVeigh. The league schedule includes a single schedule of games, plus an additional three-fifths schedule, giving each team in league eight games throughout the season in a 24-game schedule.

Games will be played on the armouries lawn on Tuesday and Thursday evening with Friday night games being scheduled to be played on the Collegiate campus. Permission to use the armouries lawn was granted by Military District Headquarters No. 3, while the Belleville Board of Education granted the lassies' league the use of the Collegiate campus. The league will open on the evening of May 28th at the armouries lawn diamond with the conventional opening game ceremonies, which are to include civic and military dignities. Mr. Reg Moncrieff, once manager of the champion Frontenac girls' team, donated the fine large trophy, held by his team, as the league cup and for annual competition.

Four Clubs to Qualify

Four of the clubs participating will engage in a post-schedule playoff for the league honors, with the first and fourth placed and second and third placed clubs meeting in a semi-final series and the ultimate winners of these games to clash in a subsequent league final for the championship and the Frontenac trophy. The personnel of the teams competing must be composed one hundred percent from the employees of the firms sponsoring the clubs. Neutral umpires will be named for each game by the league.

In the future the teams will be referred to in the standing as 5 & 10's; Big-Z; Lockmakers; "K-nines"; Vikings and Metros.

The 1940 schedule of the Belleville Mercantile Ladies' Softball League is as follows:

May 28: Woolworths vs. Zellers.

ED. SHOREY IS RE-ELECTED TO HEAD BALL LOOP

South Hastings League Organizes With Same Four Clubs

OPENS JUNE 5

The same four teams which comprised the South Hastings League last year will line up for the starting date on June 5th was the decision arrived at last evening when the annual pre-season conclave of baseball moguls in this popular rural league took place at Cannifton last evening.

In the election of officers for the season most of last year's executive were re-elected with President Ed. Shorey of Cannifton and Secretary-Treasurer Arthur Hall both going in for another term. The only change was for the office of Vice-President with Dr. Eckhardt of Shannonville being elected to fill that position.

Five Present

Representatives from Foxboro, Shannonville, Cannifton, Latta and Melrose were in attendance at the meeting with the first four named places entering teams. The Melrose contingent, which dropped out of the league some years ago, entertained hopes of getting back into the fray this season but apparently there were not enough baseball-minded persons in the eastern village to put the effort across.

It was decided to play a sixteen-game schedule with the first three teams entering a play-off series at the end of the season. The matter of confirming players' lists and the selection of umpires for the season was left over until a future meeting to beheld on, the 28th of May.

Collegiate News

The Glee Club

Although the Glee Club has been silent for some time as far as the "Collegiate News" is concerned, they are still alive and going strong. Last Sunday night we gave three numbers at the "Y" band concert. The operetta, which was to be produced in May, has been postponed until next fall, owing to the fact that we are all settling down to prepare final exams.
K. W.

Upper School final recommendation exams begin next Monday.
And our weary brains trudge on.
Till the long, long night grows grey,
And we learn that Coue wasn't a saint
And that after April comes May.

Stop, Look, Listen

On Tuesday afternoon the Collegiate students spent the last hour of school in the auditorium seeing movies sponsored by the Ontario Safety League.

The operation of traffic signals was disclosed and the movies showed many rules for safe automobile and bicycle riding.

The accidents were so numerous that towards the end, we students could see the humorous aspect of every accident. One where a man goes looking for a gas leak with a lighted match in his hand, and goes up in smoke drew a good share of laughter although everyone realized that in real life such mishaps are deadly serious.

We enjoyed the movies and wish to thank the Safety League.

Girls' Sports

Last Thursday, an exciting game took place between X K and IX G girls, winners in the basketball series of Grades IX and X, to decide the Lower School Championship. Both teams fought with determination and more than once the cheers in the gallery ceased, and a dramatic silence showed that the game hung in the balance. Though IX G put up a great fight, X K proved to be the better team, the game ending with a score of 14-3, in favour of the latter. Congratulations, XK!

But you'd never recognize him now! Shoulders back, arms swinging, eyes bright, he's a different man! And his shoes look like new.

That's what did it in fact—his shoes. Friends told him a lasting shine would make him be somebody. They advised him to just try Nugget Shoe Polish. And Nugget did all they said and more. He's a Nugget man from now on—the best dressed man in town.

Saturday sees the 81st running of the King's Plate at picturesque Woodbine track in Toronto. In 1939 the King's Plate saw its greatest triumph when Their Majesties, King George and Queen Elizabeth were present to witness the 80th running of this classic and later His Majesty personally presented the winner's owner, George McCullough, with the coveted Plate, after his Archworth won handily. The 80th running of the King's Plate in the presence of Their Majesties was doubtless the crowning achievement of the "sport of kings" last year. However, this year, there doesn't seem to be any outstanding favourite like Archworth, Horometer, Goldlure, Sally Fuller and other past winners which dominate the pre-race selections. The King's Plate carries a purse of $7,500, plus 50 guineas, a personal gift from His Majesty and it is the oldest continuously run horse race on the North American continent, if not in the new world. The distance is a mile and a furlong for three-year-olds bred in Ontario.

However, if you are looking for a Plate hunch, try a nag whose name begins with "B" or "S". Horses with names beginning with these letters have split 22 of the previous 80 runnings of the King's Plate for first place and although it may not be exactly orthodox betting, it is a hunch play. Up until this week George Hendrie's Dark Comet was a ranking favourite, along with Dave Garrity's Katie Bud and Frobisher of the Parkwood Stable. Dark Comet is reported slightly lame, but that may be exaggerated. There haven't been too many fillies win the plate, which makes it rather tough for Katie Bud. In 1935 Sally Fuller won the guineas for the Seagram Stable to be the last filly to break through the barrier of champion geldings, so the law of averages are very much against poor Katie. Actually there isn't an odd-on-favourite yet named and about the safest way to make your selection is to place the starters' names in a hat and throw the hat and selections both away.

Do you remember when Man o' War, rated by many experts as the best racehorse ever foaled in the United States, won the Preakness Stakes at Pimlico 20 years ago? In that year the three-year-old created five records. His marks for the 1 3-8 and 1 5-8 routes still stand.

Today's release of the Ladies' Softball League schedule finds a 24-game schedule composed of a single round plus three-fifths of a schedule. This is the first time a portion of a schedule has been tried locally and the league will have to be determined by the percentage system, rather than by points. Leo "Stub" Barrett has been engaged to coach the "K-nines" and only this week a young lady joined the team, after stating she had played with Saskatoon last season. Goodly turn-outs are seen nightly at the girls' practices, and but for the Zeller nine, coaches have been named. The management of the "Big-Z" is in the field for a coach before the season opens on the 28th.

With no formidable opponent in sight for Joe Louis, the fight promoters are beginning to drum up a bout between Maurice (the Angel) Tillet, the French wrestler of renown, and the Brown Bomber. Whenever there is a lull in boxing circles, the old cry of a mixed bout between a wrestler and the boxing champ. goes up. Some years ago it did not take Ray Steele, the wrestler, very many seconds to dispose of Kingfish Levinsky in a free-for all bout between a wrestler and a boxer. Actually the contest is all in favour of the wrestler and the only chance the boxer enjoys is his ability to get in that first punch, before the grappler makes contact. The advantage of the wrestler can be seen when Pedro Valdez, the Mexican, meets Stan Luther, the former "Red Mask" of Montreal, in the main bout of tonight's three-bout wrestling card at the Hume Arena. While watching Luther and Valdez, observe occasionally how quickly these wrestlers can drop to the mat and while in the air gain a punishing hold. What defence would a boxer have against a flying leg-scissors or a Savoldi-drop kick? Luther features leg scissors holds and Valdez is in for a busy evening tonight.

Bloomfield will not be permitted to play in the Belleville City Softball League, but efforts to include the Bloomfield entry in the local Industrial League may be tried, it was announced at last night's softball conclave. With Picton in the fold the local senior softballers felt that with Point Anne and Picton in the picture there wasn't room for any more outside clubs.

A thirty game schedule was adopted by the local softballers last night at an executive meeting that saw two executive members and but two clubs represented. Today, however, we understand three of the clubs in the league are signing a petition suggesting that all league gate receipts be split on a 50 per cent basis, that is to say when the juniors go to Picton they collect one half of the net gate receipts while the same holds good when Picton visits Belleville, etc. This all sounds very good, except to the clubs that enjoy a closed park and derive a goodly take at the gate. With the opening of softball scheduled for next week there does not seem to be any too much enthusiasm along the various "mushball" fronts this year, however.

RACES ON BROKEN LEG.

Fred Lytle, 18-year-old Cleveland high school track star, won the mile and half mile and then ran anchor on the relay team with a fracture in his left leg. Lytle didn't even know how or where he suffered the fracture, but told his coach he had a bruise.

Britain's Method of Searching Ships in Mediterranean, Described

(By G. C. Jordan Associated Press Staff Writer).

Rome, May 16 (AP)—This correspondent has recently seen the British method of halting and searching Mediterranean ships in contraband control, a practice which infuriates the Italians and has put a chronic strain on Rome's relations with the British-French Allies. The search took 45 minutes.

A British sailor told me the incident I witnessed was a typical one.

I was on the Italian liner Egeo bound from Naples for Piraeus, Greece. We were at dinner when we noted the ship had come to a standstill. I heard someone say, "It's a warship. They've stopped us."

A Silician army officer, returning to his post on the island of Rhodes, rushed from the room. I followed him. Gradually other passengers did likewise.

Our ship was standing quite still. We had no idea where we were except that we should have been near Greece. The ship's crew had thrown spotlights on big Italian flags painted on the sides of the vessel.

At first it was hard to see anything but finally we made our ..king at sea. As our eyes became accustomed to darkness we made out a huge form moving silently around our bow. It was a British warship talking with us in code with her twinkling lights.

Searchlight Turned on

The huge shape moved around us slowly. A searchlight was turned on us. The warship made a complete circle, examining us minutely with the searchlight.

By the time she returned to our starboard side a large rowboat reached us. A ladder was thrown over our side and three British officers and a red-haired sailor climbed up.

Italians Ignore Salute

The British saluted the Egeo's officers smartly.

The latter did not return the salute.

The passengers, mostly Italians bound for Rhodes, stood by silently on the narrow neck.

The officers mounted to the captain's cabin on the upper deck. The red-haired sailor kept guard outside. A temporary ribbon around his hat hid the name of his ship.

He asked if there were any Americans aboard and I told him I was an American. He wanted a cigaret, saying they had been at sea so long they were out of American cigarets.

His ship was a light cruiser, one of those which had been hunting the German pocket battleship formerly named the Deutschland. After Christmas the cruiser had been transferred from the North Sea to the Mediterranean.

I asked him if the Italians ever made trouble about having their ships searched and he said no, that only one crew had raised objections to being searched. They were Greeks. He said he had cowed them with his pistol.

Little Benny's Note Book

This morning ma got her prize for her slogan in the Fluffed Oatsies 5000 dollers slogan contest, ma's prize being a check for three dollers, making her all excited and she said to pop, O Willyum this seems like a red banner day, I think I ought to do something perfectly wild and reckless with this money, dont you, Willyum?

Why not, what have you got to lose? pop said. The answer to that is probably 3 dollers, he said, and ma said, Well of course I wouldn't want to go so far as to lose it. That would be a negative pleasure, to say the least. But I mean, considering how close to the budget we've been sailing, and considering how this 3 dollers came rolling in out of nowhere, I'd feel perfectly justified in being abserdly extravagant with it. You know, Willyum, easy come, easy go, just to try out the sensation, she said.

Maybe I can help, pop said. If you get it changed into 3 one doller bills I'll light a cigar with one of them. I've read about playboys doing that sort of thing, and this may be my chance, he said, and ma said, Now Willyum with the world under a terrible economic yoke it's no time to actually throw useful money to the useless winds, any anyway it's my prize and I'm the one to be reckless with it.

Why dont you buy 3 dollers worth of fattening ice cream and gloat over it while it melts harmlessly away and loses its figure while you keep yours? pop said, and ma said, Such an idea. I know what I'll do. There's a stunning cristal desk lamp that I wouldn't dream of buying for myself ordinarily. It costs eleven dollers, so now I'll just add 8 to this 3 and treat myself to it, because if it was as cheap as 8 I'd certainly buy it any time, she said.

It's a womans world, if anybody calls me on business tell them to try the office, pop said.

And he folded his paper and went.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost. ### WALL STREET

New York, May 17—(AP)—Trading nervousness returned to the Stock Market today and an attempt at a follow-through on yesterday's late rally fell flat. Losses of 1 to more than 5 points were posted. Prices stiffened near the fourth hour.

Canadian issues were sluggish. Dome Mines dipped 1-2 while Canada 4s, among Bonds, advanced as much. Canadian Pacific and McIntyre were stationary.

Prominent share losers on the forenoon tumble included Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Lockheed, Sperry, United Aircraft, U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Westinghouse, U.S. Gypsum, J. C. Penney, Montgomery Ward, Loft, Anaconda and American Smelting.

Rails held fairly well, as did Oils, Utilities and Rubbers.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 17 (CP)—Toronto Exchange today drifted into a slump after a strong opening. Trading was slower on the drop and turnover totalled 309,000 shares.

Losses in the industrials ranged up to 2 points. Senior oils, foods papers, aircrafts and steels backed down. Some steels were down 1 to 2 points. Distillers-Seagrams and Walkers Common held strong.

Steep Rock was down to 1.55, off 20 cents. Pend Oreille, Waite-Amulet and other issues weakened with the seniors. Nickel sold at 31, off 1 1-2. Dome dropped to a new low for several years at 18 1-2 and losses of 5 to 15 cents showed for the medium-price golds.

Butter Prices Again Easier

Toronto, May 17 — Prices still sagged for butter under continued slow demand on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Eggs maintained a steady undertone.

The butter market held well in the face of prevailing quiet dealings until near the close, when a few sales of first grade Ontario creamery solids went through at fractionally lower prices. Buyers refused to budge from their cautious attitude now that production is showing the seasonal increase and fresh supplies are available in ample quantities to satisfy daily requirements. The market closed at 22 1-2c to 22 3-4c per pound for the top grade Ontario product.

There was good inquiry for storage packed lots on the egg market. Prices were unchanged from the previous day, however, with receipts arriving in sufficient volume for the demand. Government inspected shipments remained at 1-2 cent per dozen premium.

Montreal, May 17 (CP).—Produce market prices here, as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 24 1-4c to 24 1-2c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 23 3-4c to 24c.

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases, selling price, A-large, 23 1-2c to 24c; A-medium, 21 1-2c to 22c; A-pullets, 19c; B, 21 1-2c; C, 18 1-2c. (Government inspected lots 1-2 cent higher.) Receipts: 6,069 cases.

GERMANY'S CLAIM COLOGNE BOMBED IS NOT CONFIRMED

Berlin, May 17—(CP)—German authorities today claimed Allied aircraft had bombed Cologne, but did not indicate what damage they had done.

(There was no confirmation in London that the German city, situated on the west bank of the Rhine about 40 miles from the Belgian border, had been bombed, although the British Air Ministry announced yesterday that the Royal Air Force, launching its heaviest attack of the war, had bombed German communication and military objectives east of the Rhine.)

Pressure Exerted By Allied Forces Holds Advantage

Operation of Bottling Up Germans Carried Out in "Satisfactory Manner," Says French Spokesman —Battle Raging Fiercely in Sedan Area

CONDITIONS GOOD

Paris Military District Made Part of the Army Zone—Government of France Still in Paris Despite Rumors to the Contrary

(By Axel De Holstein)
(Havas Staff Writer)

Paris, May 17.— (CP-Havas) — Powerful German armoured divisions attacked at dawn today against reinforced Allied troops holding them in a huge pocket driven well into northeastern France and against British and Belgian forces holding the line north of Namur in Belgium.

Pouring more men and tanks into the northern defence line, the Allied forces yesterday succeeded in bottling up the Germans in the pocket they had formed. In the north the pocket was bounded by the Sambre River, in the south by a line running from a point north of Rethel, France, to the Sedan area. The operation, according to a French military spokesman, was carried out in "a satisfactory manner".

South of the Sambre the Germans were in a pocket running from the left bank of the Meuse southward to a point north of Rethel. From there the line of the pocket ran eastward to join the first front created immediately east of Sedan, where a violent battle raged all yesterday.

Rethel On Aisne River

Rethel is on the Aisne River 23 miles southwest of Mezieres on the Meuse. One road goes down from Mezieres to Rethel, from where the road runs southwestward 23 miles to Reims. Other roads branch out from Rethel northwestward and southeastward.

The military spokesman said that from a strategic and tactical viewpoint the conditions were good. The military situation at the end of yesterday was "relatively satisfactory," he said.

Hard fighting was going on south of Sedan which had resulted in "no appreciable change."

From Sedan eastward and along the Maginot Line proper down to the Swiss border there were no developments of great importance.

The main German attacks north of Namur against British and Belgian forces were in the Louvain and Malines area.

This morning's official communique of the French High Command said:—

Combats Less Violent in Belgium

"The battle continued yesterday and during the night between the Sambre River and the region north of Rethel, as well as south of Sedan. Combats were less violent in Belgium. Nothing to report in Lorraine and Alsace."

A decree was published today in the official Gazette making the Paris military district—the departments of the Seine, Seine-et-Oise and Seine-et-Marine—part of the army zone. The same action was taken in regard to the third military district—the department of the lower Seine, the Andelys Arrondissement and the Eure department.

Alarmist rumors of a speedy German push toward the heart of France were categorically denied by Premier Reynaud, however, in a broadcast to the nation last night. "The government is and remains in Paris," he said, denying rumors the Germans had reached Reims or Meaux.

General Picture Given

A general picture of the fighting was given by the military spokesman as follows:

Yesterday was employed by the Allied high command, under General Marie-Gustave Gamelin, in carrying out regrouping operations necessitated by penetration of the German Pan-Zerdivisionen into the region west of the course of the Meuse. It was in this region the Allied and German forces clashed Wednesday in tremendous battles at the passages over the river.

In addition, the new Allied forces were poured in to close the German pocket. Movements of the reinforcements took place in excellent condition.

Germans Counter-Attack

Meanwhile the Germans also regrouped and at dawn today attacked in the pocket between Rethel and the Sambre as well as north of the Sambre, where the Belgians and British troops were fighting side by side.

While the regrouping operations were taking place yesterday the battle continued to rage in the Sedan area, where French infantry —powerfully supported by planes, tanks and artillery — repulsed all German attacks, which were made by considerable forces.

During this defensive battle, fighting was extremely violent and some villages and woods changed hands five or six times.

A German bomber flew over Mantes, on the Seine 36 miles northwest of Paris, at about midnight and French anti - aircraft batteries opened up. The German plane fled, dropping its bombs. There were no casualties.

NEXT SIX MONTHS

Will Win in End

"We will win in the end. But there is no doubt the next six months will test our courage and endurance to the limit. We have met dark days before. We can do so again."

Mr. Rogers said that from what he saw in England and France, "I am confident that the spirit of the Allied countries cannot be broken."

"In that unconquerable spirit we have the assurance of our final victory."

Officers and men of the Canadian Overseas Forces were in excellent health and spirits when he saw them in England, the Defence Minister said.

He added that "by our overseas forces I mean the First Canadian Division and ancillary units and the Army Co-operation Squadron of the Royal Canadian Air Force."

"They were all ready and eager for whatever call of service might come to them. I am sure they will prove equal to every demand that is made of them. They have created a splendid impression in England during their period of training."

Mr. Rogers caught an early morning train for Montreal and from there planned to continue to Ottawa to take his seat in the House of Commons this afternoon.

HUSBAND KILLS FOUR OF FAMILY,

From his investigation, Provincial Constable Ben Milligan, High Constable of Middlesex County, expressed the belief that financial worries drove Hunt to the point of sudden insanity, and provoked his deed.

Coroner Is Called.

Dr. J. F. G. Colling, coroner, of Lambeth, said that no inquest would be held.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hunt were born in the Lambeth district and had lived there all their lives. They operated a small farm.

William Scott, a neighbor farmer, heard the shots and ran out of his home in time to see Hunt chase his wife across the yard and shoot her as she tried to escape over a hedge.

Fearing that Hunt would turn the rifle on him, Scott called authorities at Lambeth before going to the Hunt farm, but in the meantime Hunt had taken his own life.

Bodies of the son and daughter were found in their upstairs bedrooms. Each had been shot through the head. The body of Mrs. Warren was in a downstairs bedroom. It was believed that the father killed his daughter first, and the son, hearing the noise, put up a brief struggle as the father entered his room, as the furniture was disarrayed. But young John Hunt was overpowered and his body lay sprawled across the bed.

After shooting his mother-in-law, Hunt went after his wife, but by that time Mrs. Hunt had ran out of the house across the yard. The husband caught up with her and shot her in the back as she made a futile attempt to climb over a hedge into a field.

R.C.A.F. MACHINE

Reeve Elmer Harnden of Haldimand Township, Constable Carl Lockwood of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police at Cobourg and two newspapermen were first to reach the plane. Harnden guided the party through the dense swamp bramble.

Almost Struck Buildings

The entire countryside at Eddystone was awakened shortly after midnight by the roar of a low-flying plane which almost struck some farm buildings.

Nelson Usher said "something was wrong with it." Henry Chatterson, another farmer, said the machine was flying "very low and it made an awful roar."

"It headed towards the swamp. I heard the engine stop and I heard a crash. Then something lit up like fire for a minute or so."

George Moreland, Andrew Harnden and Elmer Harnden also heard the plane as it skimmed tree tops.

"It woke me up," Andrew Harnden said. "I heard it as it circled around real close and then it went south by the swamp. After a short time there was a terrible crash."

Police at Cobourg were notified and Constables Lockwood and Duncan of the R.C.M.P. went to Eddystone with Provincial Constable A. L. Mennie. They met the main search party of farmers on a road about three miles east of the village.

They spread out and combed both sides of the road without success. Reeve Harnden, however, deduced the location of the plane by checking on the reports of the farmers who heard the crash. The plane was found within 20 minutes.

GERMANS DRIVEN FROM OUTSKIRTS OF LOUVAIN CITY

Air Raids Over Germany Show Results of Long Months of Preparation by Reconnaissance

RAIDS BY MOONLIGHT

Second Contingent of Australian Force Arrives at Alexandria and Sent to Palestine

London, May 17 (CP)—Britain called today for 250,000 home guards, felt satisfaction over reports that the Royal Air Force had dealt terrific blows behind the German lines in France and Belgium and noted historical records of the last attempt at invading her shores.

The last foreign raider to set foot on British shores was John Paul Jones, American privateer in the War of Independence, a Scotsman by birth.

Jones attack, an effort of 32 men carrying only candles, went ashore April 22, 1778 and called for little repelling force, but the Ministry of Home Security realized that any possible landing of German parachutists, armed with modern weapons, would.

Amidst home-front preparations Britons read that their air force had wrecked considerable havoc in Germany, blasting factories and communications, including the strategic Autobahnen (motor speedways.)

Dispatches from the front showed British troops drove the Germans from the outskirts of the Belgian city of Louvain, but there were reports today that the Germans had launched a counter-attack and that the fight was still in progress.

Along the Meuse Valley from Namur, Belgium, to Sedan, France, that battle appeared to be continuing furiously.

50 Enemy Planes Downed

Giant bombers, Whitlys, Wellington and Hampdens roared into the Reich and attacked military objectives. With cooperation of fighter planes they knocked down 50 enemy machines, started numerous fires, blasted railway lines and blew great craters in the Autobahnen.

The raid, conducted by moonlight, also resulted in extensive damage to a German military encampment.

The expedition, largest of its kind in history, started night before last, and was conducted by moonlight. It showed the value of the long months of reconnaissance work, carried out almost since the start of the war.

Pilots were equipped with complete information concerning their projected targets and few failed to find them with comparative ease.

No German defence aircraft were encountered, air force officials said, but anti-aircraft fire from the ground was intense.

One Whitly machine scored hits on a railroad and a main highway while another blasted a mechanized column "two miles long."

Only one of the British raiders failed to return, but two light Blenheim bombers were lost in daytime raids on unspecified targets.

In the midst of these successes, British historians, seeking the last attempted invasion of Britain, found the record of Jones.

Choose Remote Part

Some experts believed the Nazis might follow the American's strategy in one respect—choose a remote part of the country for their landing.

Jones landed on the bleak, rocky Cumberland coast on April 22, 1778. Leaving his ship, the Ranger, off Whitehaven, Jones landed a band of 32 men "armed" with candles.

They surprised two forts commanding the harbor and spiked the guns, and then set out to try to destroy shipping in the harbor. That attempt failed, however, because the invaders' candles burned out.

Jones sent a man to a house to ask for a light. The raiders then set fire to one large ship before guns of the other ships compelled them to retreat.

In the present crisis the British public is being warned to beware of charming strangers making any kind of request, whether it's for a match or merely the distance to the next town.

British fighting men reported they had checked the German drive on Brussels but expected a fresh onslaught soon and the Empire strengthened her army in the Near East.

More Australians Arrive

A War Office communique announced the arrival of a second contingent of the second Australian force, which is "proceeding to its specified areas in Palestine."

Great Britain's army moves in the Near East came as the Germans, eager for Rumania's oil for her war machine, were reported concentrating mechanized forces on the Slovak-Hungarian frontier, perhaps for a drive through Hungary, and Italy's war intentions remained in doubt.

"At this critical hour your arrival brings up all encouragement and is a very welcome demonstration that Australia will be there," said Lord Caldecote, Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs, in a message to the Australian troops.

British satisfaction that the Tommies had slowed up the Nazis in the Belgian sector, where there attacks on Louvain were repulsed, was marred by the report that German reinforcements were moving down from The Netherlands provinces aleady conquered.

Fighting Near Waterloo

A report picked up from the German-controlled radio station at Holversum said the German high command now was able to withdraw large formations from The Netherlands to reinforce contingents attacking further south.

Louvain controls approaches to Brussels, 16 miles away.

Fighting was reported in progress near the famous Waterloo battlefield.

The British Air Ministry declared that in western front air operations Allied craft are downing Nazi planes "more than three to one in our favor."

Expanding its precautions against an attack on Britain itself, the Ministry of Home Security warned "there now is a risk that enemy parachutists may attempt to land in this country." Motorists were urged to lock up their cars in garages and remove spark plugs, from dawn to dusk, to keep them out of German hands.

Situation Well in Hand

London military commentators expressed the belief the military situation in Belgium was fairly well in hand at the present but they said the greatest danger to Allied forces existed on the French front in the Sedan sector where mechanized columns broke through.

Some newspapers in Britain called for British aircraft to bomb German cities in retaliation for savage attacks on Belgian and Dutch open towns in which an undetermined number of civilians were killed and wounded.

Yesterday's Standard, Lord Beaverbrook's evening paper, printed a half-page map of Germany, overlined by the caption: "Here are the places to bomb." The map marked for especial attention 14 German cities, including Essen, Cologne, Cassel, Coblents and Frankfort, the nearest to the western front.

BELGIAN LINER

The Canadians killed were David Dunn, about 53, of Peter street, Hamilton, Ont., and Daniel Duffy, 50, formerly of Montreal.

Dunn, first assistant engineer, was believed to have been overcome by fumes from the bomb explosions as he did not appear on deck when the time came to abandon ship.

Duffy died in a hospital twenty-four hours later. He had been ill for several days before the ship was attacked.

Gibson related the attack as follows: "We left Antwerp at 4 a.m. Shortly after 6 a.m. a Nazi plane flew overhead and when about 200 yards away let go with machine-guns. Fortunately all passengers were below deck and no one was hurt.

Bomb Blows Side Out of Ship.

"About an hour later three bombers appeared and one swooped down to a height of about 150 feet and let go a bomb. It hit us aft, went through, and exploded in the side of the ship, blowing it out.

"Three of the crew down below were killed and a fourth died later in hospital from shock. The steel bulkhead by the ship's hospital protected the passengers' quarters and they were unhurt.

"The passengers, all women except five, behaved extraordinarily well and after the first shock calmed down and mustered for roll call on deck."

Harold Kelland, 36, ship's carpenter from Toronto, said the torpedo was dropped from about 100 feet.

Alex Robinson, 23, wireless operator from London, Ont., said "apparently they were trying to hit us then."

Explosion Described

Albert Moore, 28, of Cowansville, Que., a watertender, was in the boiler room at the time of the attack. He said the explosion seemed to lift the ship almost out of the water but "the boys remained remarkably cool."

Most of the Canadian crew members lived in Montreal and suburbs. It is believed they were signed on at New York.

Reporters watched the men being paid off in the basement of a little Bloomsbury hotel but were not permitted interviews. It is expected that they will remain in London for several days.

Blow to U.S. Pocketbooks

While she was technically owned by a Belgian firm, loss of the former President Harding was a blow to United States pocketbooks.

When the United States lines sold eight ships to the Societe Maritime Anversoise it obtained a 40 per cent interest in the company. The United States line set itself up as American agents for the Belgian firm.

The eight ships have ferried thousands of tons of war materials to the Allies, including planes, munitions, trucks, copper and other metals.

Belleville Boy with Crew

A Belleville young man, Donald Moynes, 29, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Moynes, 31 Bridge Street, west, is believed to be a member of the crew of the Ville de Bruges as there were 62 Canadians on the ship. The local young man went to Montreal about the first of March and there signed up with the crew and joined the ship at New York, it is said.

An early despatch in a morning paper when full details were not available naturally caused concern to Mr. and Mrs. Moynes for the safety of their son and Mr. Moynes this morning telegraphed to Montreal for further details and for information.

The contents of the above despatch when read to Mrs. Moynes allayed her anxiety and reassured her that Donald was safe.

almost approached the pitch of early New Deal days in 1933. Leaders set for themselves the goal of having the President's recommendations voted in two weeks' time.

Mr. Roosevelt's sombre references to "ominous days", voiced in his surprise address to Congress yesterday, were still fresh as the legislative wheels began to turn.

Slinging into action as soon as the President concluded speaking, House and Senate committees pointed to a short cut to start work on a program which included a recommendation for a 50,000-plane air force. Such a sky armada would surpass the reported strength of any foreign belligerent.

The contemplated short cut was to incorporate virtually all the President's emergency plans in the regular army and navy bills now pending for the year beginning July 1. This would obviate the need for the usual protracted committee hearings and would expedite a vote in both Houses.

Huge Funds Asked For

To add to the regular army and navy funds totalling $1,971,000,000, Mr. Roosevelt asked $722,000,000 for the army and $250,000,000 for the navy. Besides this, he requested $200,000,000 to be placed at his discretion for use, if necessary, in event of emergencies affecting the national security and for contract obligations related to defence needs.

Analysing the special defence message, Congressmen saw this broad program:

Army—an increase in the present strength of the regular army and national guard, backed by a vastly enlarged military arsenal capable of supplying a force of 1,000,000 men with the most modern equipment.

Navy—Acceleration of the warship building now under way, with the goal of having a fleet "in being" of 500 vessels.

Aircraft—More planes to swell the combined army-navy strength above the current level of 5,000. Tremendous expansion of replacement production capable of turning out 50,000 planes annually.

Anti-air defence—Acquisition of a number of anti-aircraft batteries, detector and other equipment to go with them, and the training of anti-air personnel.

Coast defence and bases—Modernize and strengthen both.

Munitions—Get the nation industry ready through educational orders and government co-planning, for the tremendous expansion of capacity necessary to supply the armed forces in case of attack.

One thing quickly became apparent—the defence boost was likely to give the United States the largest peacetime budget in its history.

London Gratified

London, May 17—(CP)— The British press today splashed accounts of President Roosevelt's messages to Congress under such headlines as: "United States prepares for war."

The newspapers expressed gratification that the United States' armament efforts—according to the President's expressed wish — would not curtail Allied buying of warplanes in America.

The London Daily Mail's commentator, G. Ward Price, writing under a four-column headline, "Will America enter the war?" declared:—

"Britain and France are fighting desperately to defend the vital interests—even the existence of every Democratic nation in the world, including the United States. In that struggle we may be sure that America will not stand idly by to see us defeated and destroyed."

In a leading editorial, the London Daily Telegraph said:—

"Mr. Roosevelt has faced the position with a realistic policy. Recognizing that this is no longer merely a European war but in its issues closely involves American interests, he sees clearly that only the strength of the British and French Empires now stands between Hitler and world dominion. Therefore he calls his people to arms. They cannot be blind to the truth and the need."

The News Chronicle's comment: "We need every plane we can get and the American contribution is valuable. But planes which America can send during the next few weeks will be only a small factor in the battle.

"The prospect is that pressure on the Allies will become much greater in the near future through the entry of Italy into the war and the only way America could give the Allies effective help at this moment would be to warn Italy that such a move would find the United States at the Allies' side."

BRUSSELS FIREMEN EXTINGUISH INCENDIARY BOMB FIRES

Fires started in the Belgian city of Brussels by exploding enemy bombs are quickly and efficiently brought under control by trained firemen. The Belgian capital has been subjected to many aerial bombardments since the start of the German attack on the Lowlands. No estimate has yet been made of the number of civilian deaths. In this cabled picture, Belgian firemen are shown as they speedily pour water from hose lines on the flames.

BRITISH LINE REMAINS INTACT

British Force Awaits Outcome of Battle at Sedan and General Gamelin's Decision

With the British Expeditionary Force in Belgium, May 17—(CP-Reuters)—No official information is available about the latest developments in the situation as far as the British front is concerned but there appears to have been little change in the last 24 hours.

The British line east of Brussels, including Louvain, apparently remains intact. The question whether the British forces will do everything possible to hold the present line or withdraw to another position westward must be governed by the action of the Allies on the right, that is, to the south.

General Gamelin, the Allied Commander-in-Chief, no doubt has his plan for dealing with the German wedge but he is not the sort of man to do things in a hurry.

Although certain measures have been taken by the French to enable them to meet the German thrust with greater effectiveness, it would seem that General Gamelin is choosing his moment for a main counter-attack.

What Will Be German Plan?

The main point he has to consider, of course, is whether the Germans will try to roll up the Allied line north of the wedge or south, that is, to the main defences of the Maginot Line proper.

The British force as merely a part of the whole must therefore await the outcome of the present battle in the region of Sedan and General Gamelin's decision as to his next step.

Jamie Clark Appointed Piper H. & P. E. Regt.

In the future, recruits and other troops of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regimental Depot at Picton will swing down the street on their regular route marches to the stirring strains of the bagpipes.

"Wee" Jamie Clark, seventy-three-year-old veteran of the skirling pibrochs, and an ex-member of the famous Belleville Kilties band that toured the world at the beginning of the century, has been appointed piper of the unit, and will begin his musical duties on Monday.

Member of a party of Imperial veterans of this city who inspected the quarters of the regiment a few weeks ago, Piper Clarke took his pipes along, and regaled officers and men of the unit with the blood-stirring marches of Auld Scotia. He marched at the head of a company through the main streets of the town and so popular did he become that officers of the unit decided to make "Jamie" a temporary member, at least, of the details of the unit.

"Do you think you can stand the unusual activity that your new job will demand," he was asked last night.

The smile indicative of the sunny disposition of the veteran, for which he is justly famous, flashed across his face. "It'll be a mere detail" he said, "I'll be glad to be back wi' the laddies agin. It still makes my blood stir to hear the tramp of the boys marchin' behind me."

Swiss General Staff Assures Citizens Frontier Defended

Berne, May 17—(CP-Havas)—The Swiss general staff today assured worried citizens that defence in the interior of the country and along its frontiers is fully assured.

"Events of recent days", said a staff communique, "and especially the large-scale use of parachutists caused uneasiness in the entire country. The army command is receiving many letters, telegrams, and telephonic appeals from citizens, demanding that measures of security be taken against the air infantry and the internal enemy.

"Let them be reassured: our internal defence is organized. Many detachments, among them some motorized, are on guard over the whole country, ready to intervene rapidly. Strategic points are being closely watched. Organization of local guards, road barriers, and traffic control is strengthening the system of security still further. Let all remain calm and cool and confident".

Belgium Recalls Mottoes of 1914

Paris, May 17 —(CP-Havas)—The Brussels radio station today broadcast the following message:

"Belgian compatriots in 1914 we underwent the attack of barbarism. We knew sombre hours and even defeats, but we were finally victorious.

"Let us today recall the motto given by King Albert—'A people that defends itself cannot die.'

"What was true in 1914-1918 will be equally true in 1940. Memories of the last war also give us another motto, uttered years ago by Cardinal Mercier: 'Patriotism and endurance.'

"This slogan we ought to repeat without ceasing and engrave it in our hearts so as to bring new will and national action for victory.

"Long live the King! Long live Belgium!"

GUARD AGAINST DESERT REVOLT

Bedouins Back Allied Troops Along Oil Lines in Near East

London, May 17—(CP)—Great Britain's trump card against possible German-backed revolt in the Near East is an Englishman with a scar on his chin and a host of Bedouin fighters at his back.

Desert revolt would be a direct threat to the lifeline of Britain's Mediterranean fleet—the pipeline that carries Britain's chief oil supply from Iraq to Haifa.

On the records in London the man with the scar on his chin is listed as Major John Blubb, organizer of the Desert Patrol of the Arab Legion; but among the burning hills of Transjordan, tribesmen with fighting on their minds shout his name proudly as Abou Heineik—the man with the jaw, the uncrowned prince of Arabia.

While the major holds in check any German attempt to stir tribal uprisings in the interior, Australian, New Zealand, French, British, Indian, Turkish and Egyptian troops stand guard along Arabia's coasts.

The Arabs call him a great fighter—a reputation he won when he co-ordinated Iraq and Bedouin tribes in 1924 and led them against marauding bands of Saudi Arabia to the south.

Major Blubb is backed by Emir Abdullah Ben Hussein, ruler of Transjordan, and camel herdsmen are heard to say Emir Abdullah has sworn by the Koran that the blood of his men will flow with that of Englishmen to keep Germans out of the hills.

Trenton Council Hesitates to Support Chamber's Proposal

Trenton, May 17 (Special) — Trenton Council hesitated to support the proposal of the Chamber of Commerce of that town to erect within Trenton a village of packing box houses for the one hundred R.C.A.F. mechanics and their families coming to the district in connection with the work of servicing the planes in seven newly erected hangars at the R.C.A.F. station. While promising full co-operation in providing waterworks and sewage accommodations for such a village, the council felt that the undertaking should be financed by the Dominion Government under the War Measures Act, an expenditure of several thousand dollars being involved.

The plan of the Chamber of Commerce was that a community of dwellings be constructed from the large boxes in which planes are brought to the station. Sites on the east and west sides of the river have been already suggested. It is thought, that many of the mechanics soon to arrive will be accompanied by their families, a total of at least five hundred people being expected. At present, without any further additions to the population, there is an immediate need of one hundred dwelling places to accommodate the flyers recently added to the station.

Council appointed Councillors Kenneth Couch and Richard Woodley to meet with Wing Commander J. A. S[illegible]lly to discuss the matter fully before any action is taken.

YOUTH WANTED IN TORONTO, HELD

Edward Gow, Arrested in Peterborough, Hunted for Some Months

Peterborough, Ont., May 17—(CP)—Edward Gow, 21, wanted by York County police for armed robbery with violence and theft from rural mail boxes, was held today for officers from Toronto. Arrested late yesterday, he is said to be one of a trio who entered a York County home last November and robbed and beat an elderly man.

The other pair were arrested some months ago, but Gow was not located until this week. He had been working on the William Speers farm near Bethany. Police say he is also wanted in Toronto on an automobile theft charge.

Soldiers Make Demonstration In Regina Streets

Regina, May 17—(CP)—Demonstrating soldiers paraded through Regina streets last night, smashing windows and causing other damage at five establishments. There was no personal violence and the men dispersed when military authorities induced them to return to barracks.

A group of about 100 soldiers paraded in downtown Regina and were joined by others until at one time as many as 400 were reported in the demonstration.

One of the demonstrators told newspapermen the men had learned of plans for a pro-Nazi rally but the only gathering in evidence was at the Ukrainian hall where a bazaar had started.

Picton

Picton, May 17—(Special)—The Comrade Club of Tabernacle United Church, Belleville, scored a decided hit on Wednesday evening, when they presented their three-act comedy "Sophronia's Wedding" in the Parish Hall, under the auspices of Group II, of St. Mary Magdalene's Church. A packed house enjoyed the performance to the fullest.

The plot concerned the activities of the Picton Uplift Society in 1890 and many a laugh was caused by references to prominent Picton people of today. The costumes, manners and customs of that period were very faithfully portrayed and caused many smiles. The solo by the President of the Uplift Society and also the quartette by four of the members were excellent. In the intermission periods, two piano solos and two vocal solos were also greatly enjoyed.

Ministerial Association Entertained

The Prince Edward County Ministerial Association was entertained for their May meeting at the United Church parsonage, Northport, guests of Rev. and Mrs. A. R. Cragg. The feature of the program was an address on religious education by Rev. J. B. Creeggan, rector of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, Picton.

Rev. Creeggan explained the rules and regulations concerning the teaching of religion in the public schools. The school boards with the consent of the Ontario Department of Education, can set the hours for such teaching.

In his address the speaker said that education should do more than look after the body and mind but the heart and soul as well. He said that the only antidote for the teaching of those totalitarian states was that of religious teaching. If the heart and soul are neglected in education, man is open to the ravages of secularism and atheism, said Rev. Creeggan.

The Reycraft Juveniles met Wednesday evening at the home of Miss Jean Kerr with a splendid attendance. Rev. J. F. Reycraft gave the members a review of the events leading up to the present struggle. Miss Phyllis Newman sang a solo. As it was the birthday of Mr. Reycraft, the members presented him with a birthday cake and a bouquet of flowers. A scavenger hunt provided much amusement, the winners being Betty Anne Scott and Woodrow Blakely. During the social hour, Mrs. Oscar Kerr was assisted by Mrs. Reycraft and Miss Mildred Caughey.

Miss Olga Ellsworth, whose marriage is to take place in the near future, was guest of honor at a party Wednesday night at the home of Mrs. Ola Devers. Twenty-five friends gathered and spent a social time. The gifts presented were enamelware with enough to entirely supply the kitchen. Miss Ellsworth suitably expressed her thanks. # Canadian Wartime Fliers

Air Commodore L. S. Breadner, Air Member for Staff on the Air Council

(By The Canadian Press)

In every large organization suddenly called upon for redoubled production there must be someone thoroughly familiar with all details who can direct machinery of expansion while others chart the course. Big, hearty Air Commodore Lloyd S. Breadner, handles a mass of organization detail for the mush-rooming Royal Canadian Air Force under wartime conditions.

Familiar with every phase of air force activity because he flew himself in the First Great War and has been associated with Canada's aviation ever since, Air Commodore Breadner works in R.C.A.F. headquarters here day and night to keep pace with organization work incidental to raising the strength from peacetime's 2,000 officers and men to the nearly 10,000 of today.

His official position now is Air Member for Air Staff on the Air Council, but he has filled every other important post, including that of acting director of the entire air force.

The "A.M.A.S." is built for hard work. He has the frame and brawn of a star fullback, and was something of a football star himself before work cut down his leisure. His six feet of health and vigor bulges a uniform with decorations, including the Distinguished Service Cross he won over French battlefields in the First Great War. A ruddy face breaks easily into a friendly grin for the hundreds of friends he has made in nearly 20 years of association with the force.

With Naval Air Arm

Air Commodore Breadner was born near Ottawa at Carleton Place, Ont. in 1894, and was educated in the capital. In 1915, he joined the Royal Naval Air Service and flew as a fleet air arm pilot. His distinguished conduct as a fighter pilot in France won him his decoration in 1917, and following the armistice he returned to Canada.

Satisfied with a flier's' life, he joined the youthful Canadian Air Force in October, 1920, and has been with Canada's military flying ever since. His first post was that of certificate examiner under the air board. In 1922 he became squadron leader and controller of civil aviation. He returned to the air force active list in 1924 as officer commanding the Royal Canadian Air Force station at Camp Borden, Ont.

In 1926 he was sent to Great Britain to take the course at the Royal Air Force Staff College at Andover, returning to National Defence Headquarters here with the rank of wing commander. He was successively assistant director and then acting director of the R.C.A.F. from 1928 until 1932. As commanding officer of the important air force base at Trenton, Ont. from 1932 to 1936 he was responsible for much of the development on the No. 1 training station there.

After another trip to England to attend the Imperial Defence College in 1936, he was appointed air staff officer at defence headquarters here.

Shortly after war broke out last autumn, Air Commodore Breadner went to England as technical advisor to Hon. T. A. Crerar to participate in discussions on Canada's part in the war effort. While abroad the Air Commodore took the opportunity to familiarize himself with Royal Air Force technical developments and general policies, so that he could aid in development of the R.C.A.F. on a sound basis.

In particular, Air Commodore Breadner studied latest training methods so that preparations for the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan in Canada could be the more effective.

He brought back to Canada a wealth of technical information for the air council here. While Air Commodore G. O. Johnson went to England to familiarize himself with training plans, Air Commodore Breadner took over his duties as Air Member for Organization and Training, and accomplished much of the preliminary preparation for putting the air training plan into operation.

Wartime Diet In Great Britain Is Envisaged

London, May 17 (CP)—Evolution of a scientific wartime diet to meet the possible "drastic changes" in Britain's food supply was envisaged today by the government committee investigating national expenditure.

A committee statement warned that the country might be forced to "make full use of every ounce of available resources." Immediate formation of a body of "scientists and practical men" to draft the basic future food policy was urged.

The report forecast that the government would lose an estimated £20,500,000 ($91,225,000) annually on its meat subsidy and said a rise in Canadian prices had increased the

Remove Evacuated Children to Wales

London, May 17 (CP).—The authorities today announced that children who had been removed from London to Suffolk County, on the east coast, would be moved again Sunday to Wales, in western Britain.

The order affects thousands who were taken out of London at the start of the war to save them from air raids.

No reason was given, and one official said: "It came as a bombshell to us."

SUPPLY OF PIANO WIRE CUT OFF

Local piano dealers and piano tuners learned today that the supply of piano wire from Norway has been cut off. This is used for restringing pianos, as leaders in making fish baits, such as June bugs and for many other purposes. Canadian steel manufacturers are making a substitute which will be plated and it is expected that the new product will meet the needs.

TWO NEW CARS AT $1.00 EACH TO BE SOLD AT FAIR

Fair Board Decides to Offer the Cars as One of the Attractions at Belleville Fair

NEW CATTLE SHED

As an added attraction to the already high-class program laid down by the committees in charge, two brand new motor vehicles will be sold for one dollar each at the 1940 edition of the Belleville Fair, members of the Fair Board decided last night at a regular meeting.

In the event of a farmer being one of the lucky winner, he will have the option of selecting an automobile or a tractor, the board decided.

Pending the approval of the City Park Commission, the Board will erect a new cattle shed, twenty-two feet wide by two hundred feet in length. The new building which will be of all steel construction, will augment the wooden sheds now in use. The new shed, it was felt, will fill a long-felt want, as the increased number of entries in live-stock during the past few years, has seen both exhibitors and members of the board at a disadvantage.

Midway attractions and afternoon and evening entertainment which will be featured all three days of the fair has been arranged for, and the chairman in charge stated that it will compare favorably if not more than that with previous attractions.

A committee was appointed to wait on the Hastings County Council at its June session, to interview that body and apply for the usual county grant given to the Board.

H. L. Fair, County Agricultural Representative addressed the Board briefly on the Standing Field Crop Competition. He said that a large number of entries had already been received and indications pointed toward a fine competition. Farmers already entered in the competition which embraces the raising of oats and barley include, Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, Ralph Campbell, J. Hollinger, L. J. Ketcheson, all of Foxboro; C. H. Ketcheson, Belleville 2; M. J. Carl, Stirling; D. A. Thrasher, Belleville 2; Geo. Sutherland, Belleville 5; P. Treverton, Plainfield; James Robinson, Belleville 7; E. E. Alexander, J. Alexander, F. Talcott, H. Matthie, all of Bloomfield, Ont., Sam Danford, Consecon; E. E. Bonter, Carrying Place.

President E. E. Bonter was in the chair.

ALL AFRIKANERS ARE STIRRED UP

Reports Say Hertzogites and Malanites Are Joining Smuts Party

London, May 17 (CP).—The invasion of Holland has profoundly disturbed all sections of the Afrikaners and has thrown the opposition rank and file into complete turmoil, according to the Daily Telegraph's Cape Town correspondent.

He adds that the Nationalist leaders, General J. B. M. Hertzog and Dr. D. F. Malan, are still insisting on complete neutrality but that this has merely tended to shock many of their own moderates—evidenced by bitter letters in the Nationalist press.

"Parliament ended Tuesday before open signs of party disintegration could declare themselves," the correspondent says, "but reports coming in daily indicate that throughout the country Hertzogites and Malanites are jettisoning neutrality and even joining the Smuts party.

Recruiting Stimulated.

"The invasion has given recruiting the biggest stimulus, men flocking to the colors."

The correspondent concludes that General Jan Smuts "today is in an unassailable position."

(General Smuts became prime minister a few days after the outbreak of the war last September when the neutrality policy of General Hertzog, then prime minister, was defeated in the House of Assembly. South Africa, under General Smuts, then declared war on Germany and undertook to provide troops to defend any part of the African continent.

(The Afrikaners, of Dutch descent and speaking a Dutch dialect, have maintained close ties with Holland.)

Two inebriates ran afoul of the law last night and were taken into custody on charges of intoxication. They shared the cell block with 19 transients, who were given warm and dry sleeping accommodations.

London, May 18 (CP).—An authoritative spokesman declared today that the situation of the Allied troops on the western front "is very serious but certainly no worse and possibly a little bit better" than yesterday.

The German advance in "the battle of the bulge" in northern France, he said, "has very much slackened, perhaps only temporarily, but exhaustion of German units taking part in the operations is apparent."

The British and Belgian lines in Belgium, he asserted, had to go back in order to conform to movements southward.

He emphasized, however, that "there was no question of a break through or of troops retiring in confusion."

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

The mystery of the cyclone! Before the days of rapid communication, cyclones (whirling storm areas) were not understood or even recognized, and even today scientists are working hard for a better understanding of them. There are a few basic facts which have been observed over and over again. The cyclone is a whirling storm, sometimes nearly circular but more often elliptical in form, and from one to two thousand miles in diameter. The air pressure is lowest at the centre and increases outward in all directions. The winds at the surface blow spirally inward with velocities greatest near the centre. The temperatures are higher in the eastern than in the western half. Cyclones are more frequent and active in winter than in summer.

Failure to Get Mastery in Air May Defeat Nazis

PARIS, May 18 (C.P.-Havas)—The Paris morning press analysed the military situation today from the point of view of mechanical material, and concluded that the German blitzkrieg had failed to prove the German tanks and other equipment as good as those of the Allies.

Genevieve Tabouis, commentator of L'Oeuvre, said: "Foreign observers in Berlin point out that German military circles are inclined to pessimism," since they have found that up to now "encounters between Allied and German tanks prove the inferiority of the German." She said the Germans have been losing far more tanks than the Allies.

Mme. Tabouis also said air ministry experts declare that the "whole German offensive is in danger because Marshal Herman Goering failed to establish absolute mastery of the air in time."

L'Epoque said that the German surprise tank, an 80-ton monster which it is admitted does not fear the French anti-tank artillery, "has found its match" in the French 75's which pierce its thick armour.

L'Epoque added: "The German tactics never vary. They attack, always attack, indifferent to the losses of men and material which are immense.

"Several of their armored divisions may be considered as definitely annihilated. Their air force daily loses more of the advantage it had at the beginning of the action. Nowhere does it control the air."

FRENCH ENGINEER ON CANAL DIES

Philippe Bunau-Varilla, 80, Participant in Construction of Panama Canal, Lived in Paris

Paris, May 18 (CP). — Philippe Bunal-Varilla, 80, noted French engineer, associate of Count Louis de Lesseps and participant in the construction of the Panama Canal, died today. Bunal-Varilla suffered injuries in the first great war which necessitated the amputation of his right leg.

Although the company with which he was associated in the first Panama Canal venture proved a failure, Bunal-Varilla had a hand in the negotiations which eventually led to the completion of "The Big Ditch" by the United States.

He was credited with helping to start the revolution which separated Panama from Colombia and later was appointed Panama's ambassador to negotiate the treaty which turned the Canal Zone over to the United States government.

Paris, May 18 (CP-Havas)—The German high command today threw between 2,500 and 3,000 tanks into a tremendous smash against Allied lines between the Sambre River and Sedan.

A French military spokesman, describing the German drive, said it seemed the Nazis were trying to deliver a "coup re ping" American" (knuckle-duster). He said more than half of the tanks possessed by the German army had been hurled into the offensive.

Tons of Bombs Poured on Enemy

Allied bombers and artillery supporting French ground troops standing on their own soil to "conquer or die," poured thousands of tons of bombs and shells into the enemy armored columns.

Despite the fury of the Nazi assault in two main areas—around Hirson and Avesnes towards the upper reaches of the Sambre River, and in the Vervins sector towards the river Oise—the Germans made only slight progress, a military spokesman said.

"General officers, officers, petty officers, quartermasters and sailors, for more than eight months you have fought with tenacity, courage and success. From the tropics to the Arctic Ocean you have given proof of the highest seafaring and combat qualities. You witness to my satisfaction.

"Now, with the war entering a new and decisive phase, I know that I can count on you to see to it that the French navy, faithful to its ancient traditions of courage and patriotism, and in collaboration with the British fleet, assures the success of our forces at sea, and, in cooperation with the Allied armies, brings victory to our cause which is that of civilization.

Ten 'Junkers 87' Bombers Destroyed by 9 Hurricane Bombers

London, May 18 (CP).—The Air Ministry announced today ten German "Junkers 87" bombers were shot down by nine Hurricane fighters in a single battle over France yesterday.

A statement said the Hurricanes rushed to attack twenty enemy bombers when they were seen circling over a wood. The squadron leader shot down three planes, four Hurricane pilots got one bomber each and the patrol jointly shot down three others. The remaining ten fled.

No British planes were lost in this action.

Another section of three Hurricanes over Belgium attacked more than twenty Nazi dive bombers and downed one, the ministry announced.

A British Spitfire patrolling off the Dutch coast went after a "Junker 88", Germany's newest type twin engine bomber. The Nazi bomber dived from 14,000 feet to 30 feet at 400 miles per hour in a vain effort to shake off the British plane but two bursts from the eight guns on the Spitfire disabled the engines and the bomber crashed into a break-

Mussolini is Warned Army Has Supplies For Only Six Months

Diplomatic Correspondent of Edinburgh Evening News States Il Duce Wants to Fight on Germany's Side Even Though Public Opinion is Against it—Generals Say Six Months Absolute Limit but Lack of Essential War Materials Will be Felt in Three Months

GERMAN VICTORY NOT ASSURED

Edinburgh, May 18 (CP). — The Edinburgh Evening News today published the following by its diplomatic correspondent:

"From Rome I have received information of considerable importance. It deals with the question whether Mussolini is going to war now or whether Italy' saction will again be postponed.

"My informant confirms Mussolini's decision to fight on the side of the Germans, even though public opinion in Italy is far from favorable to that adventure.

"If, and when, the Germans start their expected move through Swit-Italian press as a tremendous victaneously. He will give orders to his army to occupy the Canton of Ticino (on the Italian side of the Alps).

"If the Germans put off their attempt to force a passage through Swiss territory, Mussolini may still go to war, but he is held back by one major consideration. The Italian army does not possess supplies sufficient for more than six months of modern warfare on a large scale.

"His generals have told Mussolini that six months will be the limit, but that after three months the army will already be lacking in essential war materials. Mussolini's problem, therefore, is to make sure that Italy comes into the war at the moment when Hitler's victory seems assured within the time limit indicated.

"The invasion of Holland and Belgium, although advertised in the zerland, Mussolini will move simultory for Hitler, does not appear like that in the eyes of Marshals Badoglio and Graziani, the leaders of Italy's armed forces.

"If Hitler by now held Belgium in his grip, the impression in Rome would have been different. But the lightning stroke in the north, although heavy enough and not yet defeated, does not give the impression that a German victory is only a few months distant. Therefore Mussolini hesitates still."

Press Calls Upon Britons "To Keep Their Chins Up" In Face of Grave War News

London, May 18—(CP Cable) — The press today called on Britons, who did not need much of a pep talk in the face of the grave war news, to keep their chins up. No effort was made to minimize the situation and all newspapers played up on their front pages reports of German penetration in Belgium and France.

Heading its editorial "back to the wall," The Daily Express reprinted Lord Haig's immortal message of April 12, 1918, adding that "in 1940 as in 1918 the same Allies stand ready to fight through terror to triumph."

The order issued by Lord Haig was:

"Every position must be held to the last man. There must be no retirement. With our backs to the wall, and believing in the justice of our cause, each one of us must fight to the end."

The paper declared that "every person in this country who passes on rumor, who opens his ears to hear defeatist stories and opens his mouth to speak them is helping Hitler's cause."

THE NEWS-CHRONICLE said: "Our message to the British people at this time: Be of good heart. These are dark days but also great days. The future of mankind is being moulded."

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH: "France and Britain were proved years ago in the fire of a German menace as fierce as that which has blazed across the Meuse, and were not found wanting. They will not fail now."

THE DAILY MAIL: "We must not blind ourselves to the possibility of a reverse. There is evidence that the Germans have worked out new and brilliant tactics. Such tactics cannot be countered in an hour. That is the worst. Our people never feared to face the worst and it is good to remember we have always overcome."

Describing Germany's desperate venture, the Daily Mail said that even if the Nazis win they have not won the war because the main mass of the Allied armies are intact, the navy holds the seas, the Royal Air Force will yet be masters in the air. It called upon the people to go about with cool resolution and work as never before.

Historic Brussels, Belgian capital reported entered Friday night by Nazi German troops after 8 days of fighting, fell to invading forces of Imperial Germany on the 17th. day of the invasion in 1914.

It was there the Germans executed Nurse Edith Cavell.

Occupation of Brussels started on August 20, 1914, and the city was re-occupied by the Belgian army on November 18, 1918, a week after the armistice was signed. King Albert and his queen made a state entry four days later.

Police said their investigation showed Konkin shot the girl to death yesterday in her bedroom and then, after telling her father, Paul Chickmoroff, what he had done, turned the revolver on himself. Police said frustrated love apparently was the motive.

Bucharest, May 18 (AP).—Italians in Rumania were caught today in the scurrying of foreigners for cover from war clouds over the Balkans. They were advised by their legation to go home.

Almost concurrently, the Rumanian ministry of interior—presumably intensifying efforts to stamp out "fifth columnists"—ordered all foreigners without work permits to leave the country and cancelled permits issued before May 1.

At least 10,000 aliens were affected. Those not departing at once were to be interned in a concentration camp opened last night.

Regina Soldiers Incensed at Rumor Nazi Sympathizers Might Celebrate

WINDOWS SMASHED

Regina, May 18—(CP)—Between 100 and 200 soldiers and civilians, parading through Regina streets for the second successive night, were partially frustrated last night in their attempts to carry out a series of raids on business places here.

The demonstrations were similar to those of Thursday night when several thousand dollars damage was caused. A rumor that Nazi sympathizers planned to celebrate Germany's conquest of The Netherlands apparently led to the disturbance. Investigations have been started by military authorities with a promise that the "necessary disciplinary action will be taken."

The raids last night were undertaken despite heavy patrols of military and city police and members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

BELIEVED THREE KILLED IN CAR

Police Have No Identification of Occupants of Car Which Plunged Into Canal

Ottawa, May 18.—(CP)—Three persons were believed killed early today when a speeding car plunged through the railing of the Chaudiere Bridge between here and Hull, Que.

Police had no information on the identity of the occupants of the car. According to Privates A. and W. Tomka of the Canadian Active Service force, only witnesses, the driver seemed to lose control. The automobile zig-zagged across the road and, failing to make a slight curve in the bridge, skidded through the railing.

The car entered the water engine first a point called the "Devil's Hole". Water at that point was about 30 feet deep, and the car sank with a swirling motion.

Refugees From Holland Cross N. Sea In 16-Foot Boat and Outboard Motor

London, May 18—(CP-Cable)—Two refugees from Holland—one a young Dutch actress and the other a 46-year-old Briton who lost a leg in the last war—arrived here yesterday after crossing the treacherous North Sea in an open, 16-foot boat powered by an outboard motor.

The pair — Ilona Ricardo and Ernest Judd—said they were machine-gunned by a German warplane during the 125-mile crossing, but escaped by "playing dead." They were picked up by a British collier as they neared the English coast.

Judd was visiting in Ymuiden when the Germans invaded Holland. Fearing he would be sent to a concentration camp if captured by the Germans, he commandeered a tiny boat—intended for use on the Dutch canals—and put out to sea with eight gallons of gas and a pocket compass. Miss Ricardo decided at the last minute to go with him.

"No sooner had we got into the open sea," Judd said "than a German plane began to machine-gun us. I stopped the engine and lay down in the bottom of the boat, shamming death.

"The German must have thought he'd finished us off, for he circled the boat once and flew away. One bullet just grazed a finger on my right hand. I re-started the motor and set a course which I hoped would bring us to the English coast.

"The sea got much rougher and the waves kept breaking over us. By this time, Miss Ricardo was terribly ill, but she kept baling out and so saved us, or we never would have got across."

American Republics Denounce Nazi Germany's Invasions

Montevideo, Uruguay, May 18 — (AP)—The United States and the other American Republics have gone on record with an official denunciation of Nazi Germany's invasions of neutral countries.

Uruguay drafted the declaration. It was sent to all the other Republics by Foreign Minister Alberto Guani and last night Chile and Nicaragua sent in unreserved approvals to make it unanimous.

Montevideo had a man-in-the-street country's sentiment when demonstrators marched through the streets last night, shouting, "Down with Nazism!...... Down with Hitler!"

Mounted Police Hurt

Several mounted police were hurt by stones when they sought to disperse the demonstrators. Several shots were fired into the air. A German-owned cafe was stoned.

In Buenos Aires, at about the same time, there was an anti-Allied demonstration.

German sympathizers shouted "Down with England", "Down with France." Four noise bombs were exploded, doing negligible damage to the tracks of the British-owned street car company.

Police said the demonstrations in the Argentine capital were by "Nationalist elements" demanding the resignation of Foreign Minister Jose Maria Cantilo, who had advocated abandonment of Pan-American neutrality for "non-belligerency."

British Government Seeks More Friendly Relations With Soviet

London, May 18—(CP)—Informed persons reported today that the British Government, reinforced by inclusion of Labor and Liberal elements, was seeking a "new and more friendly approach" to improving its relations with Russia.

Ivan Maisky, Russia's Ambassador, saw Foreign Minister Viscount Halifax on Thursday and the two discussed problems raised by the British Contraband Control, chiefly shipping delays and means of reducing them.

It was hinted that this discussion might open the way for trade negotiations on a broader basis, and ultimately lead to an improvement in political relations between the two countries.

A few days before Winston Churchill took office as Prime Minister May 10, Russian circles here said that Britain's entire attitude toward reaching a trade agreement with the Soviet was regarded as "unsatisfactory."

John Welch, 303 McDonald avenue reported the theft of his bicycle to the police last night. The 'bike' had been left parked at the upper end of the main street while the lad attended a nearby theatre.

Mrs. C. J. Fisher, 302 Charles street, complained to police that the family lawn mower had been stolen from her residence sometime this week. The lawn mower was known to have been resting in a rear shed earlier in the week, but its loss was not discovered until last evening.

Following complaints regarding a door-to-door canvass along Baldwin street yesterday Constables Ellis and Arnott apprehended two Toronto brothers who gave their names as J. H. Pustil and Irving Pustil. The men were attempting to sell woollen sweaters and sox. After questioning at the police station the men were instructed to "get out of town", as they possessed no transient traders' licence.

Only six transients put in an appearance seeking shelter at the police station last night, the lowest number to be registered this month.

Raymond Zufelt Elected President Conservative Assoc.

Unanimous endorsation of a resolution demanding immediate action on the part of the Federal Government in the furtherance of its war activities, featured the annual meeting of the Belleville Men's Conservative Association in their Front Street Club Rooms last night.

Copies of the resolution will be forwarded to George H. Stokes, M.P. Hastings South and Hon. R. B. Hanson, acting leader of the Opposition in the House. The resolution was moved by George A. Reid and seconded by Harry B. Rollins.

Raymond Zufelt was elected president of the association in the election of officers that followed brief addresses by Mr. Stokes, R. D. Arnott, M.P.P., Frank Cushing and others. The new first vice-president is Arthur Burke; second vice, Frank Cushing; treasurer, Frank Bird; secretary, Harold Armstrong; auditors, C. L. Hyde and Fred Panter.

Shearing of Sheep Now Being Done

Farmers of Hastings County are now reaping one of the richest harvests of the year's efforts—wool from their flocks of sheep. The price this year on a flat basis of 20 to 22 cents per pound is exactly double that of last year.

Many farmers now have power clippers with which to shear their flocks but the old hand clippers are still used and in using them it requires several days to clip a flock of forty to fifty sheep. The clipping is well along however with operations complete on many farms. On the average sheep there are seven to eight pounds of wool.

Grade for grade, Canadian wool, well shorn, well rolled, tied and properly graded will sell successfully in competition with wool of the same grade anywhere in the world.

Farmers depend on their sheep for important revenue in Spring and Fall. It is estimated that the wool crop may bring the average sheep raiser thirty to forty dollars this Spring while in the Fall the disposal of lambs also nets the farmer considerable income.

Air Commodore Robt. Leckie, Senior Officer, R.A.F. In Canada

By The Canadian Press

A Scotsman who helped father Canadian aviation, Air Commodore Robert Leckie of the Royal Air Force is now aiding in the forging of air warriors from raw young Canadian recruits. He might not be on this job had it not been for a strong-winged pigeon that once flew 50 miles over storm-tossed seas to bring rescue in 1917 to the 49-year-old Air Commodore.

For four days Leckie and his crew in a flying boat of the Royal Naval Air Service tossed about on the sea 50 miles off the British coast after having been forced down. They released a carrier pigeon with word of their predicament and a boat put out to rescue them.

Air Commodore Leckie's connection with Canadian aviation goes back to his youth in Toronto where he paid for his own tuition in flying. Born in Scotland, he went to Toronto as a boy and entered his uncle's business when he had finished school.

He completed his air education with the Royal Naval Air Service and by the time he was 27 he had taken part in 10 forays against German zeppelins and had brought down two himself. He was decorated with the Distinguished Service Order, the Distinguished Service Cross and the Distinguished Flying Cross.

Like Coming Home

Leckie's assignment as senior officer of 71 officers and 200 airmen of the R. A. F. who came to Canada to participate in the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan was something in the nature of a homecoming for the air commodore.

Not only did he learn to fly in the Dominion but, just after the First Great War, the Canadian government appointed him to the Air Board in charge of civil flying operations. At that post he was instrumental in formation of the original Canadian Air Force in 1920.

Three years later he was recalled to the R. A. F. in England and stationed at various bases. He attended the Royal Naval staff college, commanded the Mediterranean air arm and served in the China station with the aircraft carrier, H.M.S. Hermes.

Before he left Canada, however, he and six other airmen completed the first "transcontinental" flight. They started from Halifax Oct. 7, 1920, and 10 days later, with an actual flying time of 49 hours, seven minutes, they set their plane down in Vancouver.

In England Leckie became aide-de-camp to three sovereigns—King George V, Edward VIII and King George VI—a long step from his youthful occupation of selling fishing nets in Toronto and the Muskoka Lake region of Ontario.

During the first Great War he commanded many of the Canadians who served in the British air arm and, on taking over his new post in the Dominion, said the young men from Canada, now with the R.A.F. are every bit as good as their predecessors.

Capable Canadians

"Many Canadians served with me on the Mediterranean command and were very capable officers indeed," said Air Commodore Leckie.

This British officer is proud of the present system of training which has progressed a long way since the days when he earned his wings.

"In my opinion," he said, "the training to be given under the air plan is the best in the world. Many casualties of the last war were due to inexperience and under the present set-up, built up since the last war and based on the central flying school system of instruction, no pilot will fly his squadron aircraft until he has a minimum of 150 hours of flying of which 50 hours will be dual instruction."

The air commodore married an American girl he met aboard ship while returning from China. They have two sons, the elder of which has more yen for the navy than the air force. So it should be. The boy was christened aboard the now-sunken aircraft carrier H.M.S. Courageous and they used the ship's bell as the font.

MR. CHURCHILL'S RINGING WORDS

The words of Prime Minister Churchill ring throughout the Empire—"What is our policy? I say it is to wage war by land, sea and air. War with all our might and with all the strength God has given us, and to wage war against a monstrous tyranny never surpassed in the dark and lamentable catalogue of human crime. That is our policy.

"You ask, what is our aim? I can answer in one word. It is victory. Victory at all costs—victory in spite of all terrors—victory, however long and hard the road may be, for without victory there is no survival. Let that be realized. No survival for the British Empire, no survival for all that the British Empire has stood for, no survival for the urge, the impulse of the ages, that mankind shall move forward towards his goal.

"I take up my task in buoyancy and hope. I feel sure that our cause will not be suffered to fail among men."

This realization of the stern task and the assurance of victory at the end of the struggle nerve the arm of the British peoples. They war for the preservation of all that is best in the world and in the nature of things right must triumph.

Mr. Churchill's words will not be forgotten in these days when the Allies are engaged in a great battle with the enemy in which the Allies carry the standard of civilization against "the monstrous tyranny" of Hitler and Nazi Germany.

BATTLE OF THE TANKS

The news the other day contained one of the most romantic stories of modern warfare. It concerned the struggle of Allied and Nazi tanks, in something of the manner of attacks of cavalry and of knights in the olden days. Cavalry which used to be one of the main arms of an army almost disappeared in the First German War but has been revived with tanks, those strange-looking creations of man which look much like the prehistoric monsters which trod the earth before civilization.

These modern mechanized cavalry machines look more like the horses which bore the knight weighted down with armor, for the charger was itself protected with plate though tanks naturally are without the color and glitter of shining armor of the heroes who rode into battle in the old day with maces and battle-axes.

These moving forts—for that is what they are—carry the greatest array of equipment, machine-guns and light artillery.

The news of this tank battle must have struck the public with surprise for few realized that tanks would move as a squadron of cavalry. But this is one of the developments of war as demonstrated in today's struggle. The tank falls very effectively into the machinery of modern warfare for it can be built of any size and weight and can be equipped with every sort of device for causing destruction.

Human imagination pictures the scene on that field at Tirlemont, but even the most fervent imagination could not have realized what the horrors of such a battle with elephantine moving forts deploying and charging like knights of old. What would a motion picture executive not give for a picture of this first battle of the "giants!"

But this is not the only use of the tank. The French, who have evolved a monster weapon of this kind, can cut their way through forests, trenches, houses, walls—in fact they can go anywhere. They will as they have been built in large numbers by the nations at war be counted upon to change the phase of war into one of movement. It can easily be seen how it can be used to smash a line for some of the Allied tanks are reported to throw off even the heaviest shells of artillery.

Modern war looks grotesque in so many ways: the gas mask which has the look of a skeleton's face, the mammoth tank which can scamper over a plain at great speed, ride through hollows and buildings and walls, guns firing on targets they do not see, except by long distance devices.

That tank battle must have been the noisiest and grimmest battle in history to date.

THE VALUE OF CLEANING UP

The present time is an opportunity for banishing the tarnish of winter and beautifying; it is also the ideal time to check over property for hazards that may affect the cost of fire insurance, says the Canadian Underwriters' Association.

As an institution, Clean-Up Week everywhere has proven of inestimable benefit in inspiring property-holders to concentrated drives on the rubbish that inevitably accumulates after the closed season. Garbage and incineration departments do bumper business in collecting rubbish that has cluttered cellars, attics, closets, shelves, garages and odd corners during the winter months. But the Underwriters point out that the process of rooting out and disposing of litter can be dangerous. For instance: the naked flame of match or candle in the clothes closet, the oily rags in the cupboard under the stairs, the untended bonfire of garden rubbish, or the rusty can with "just a little" gasoline left in the garage can cause a fire and do tremendous damage to property. Due caution, even in the enthusiasm of Clean-Up Week, therefore is suggested by the Underwriters.

"Board" Insurance companies have found that Clean-Up Week often serves to eliminate hazards from home or business property. Statistics show that most fires are still caused by faulty heating arrangements by being placed too near wooden partitions or walls, by flames escaping from pierced and rusty stove-pipes, dirty flues and ducts.

Underwriters and "Board" insurance companies both stand squarely behind "Clean-Up Week" as an aide to brighter and better homes, business premises and factories. They see the health values that accrue from community effort in that direction. They also suggest that Clean-Up should not only satisfy because it beautifies, but, if generally applied, it should reduce fire losses which have a direct bearing on insurance rates.

Into the Fire

Germany's invasion of Denmark has had one tragic effect which has gone unnoticed in the press of greater news.

It has wrecked one of the most active and promising movements for the relief of Jewish refugees, has thrown a huge number of them back into the hands of the Nazis.

The relief work was being done by the Danish section of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. The league is unusually strong in Denmark and it has taken thousands of Jewish refugees under its wing.

A big co-operative association has been formed. New industries were started, whole villages taken over. Jews who had lived in cities all their lives were learning how to be farmers on land bought by the co-op.

Suddenness of the invasion gave officers of the movement no time to destroy their files, with the result that the whole business has fallen into Nazi hands. Many of the Jews are already on the way to concentration camps. —Calgary Albertan.

The Medical Treatment of Severe Goitre—Graves Disease

If a physician gives his whole attention to the diseases of one organ for over thirty years, during which time he sees 16,000 cases in private and public practice, it is only to be expected that his knowledge, gained thus at first hand, would be worth much to patients and to other physicians.

I am referring to Dr. Israel Bram, Philadelphia, and goitre and thyroid gland disease.

In the treatment of the severe form of goitre—Grave's disease or exopthalmic goitre—symptoms of which are bulging eyes, rapid heart beat, trembling, and nervousness, Dr. Bram, In Medical World, speaks of what is called the "medical" treatment.

In most quarters the medical treatment of Grave's disease is rest and use of iodine. That this treatment is not sufficient nor effective is shown by the many chronic cases encountered and the justifiable complaints of surgeons who see these so-called "medical" failures when they are almost too late for other methods of treatment.

Dr. Bram points out that the failure of medical treatment for goitre is because more than rest and iodine should be used; that by proper medical treatment of Grave's disease is meant the use of an all round system or regime of treatment including the removal of any infection—teeth, tonsils, gall bladder, sinus—a rest program suited to the patient's needs, suitable diet, quieting of fear and anxiety, "and other measures based on the clinical observation that treatment for exopthalmic goitre is not treatment for a lump in the neck".

If the patient is given too much rest in bed, she gets too much time to think inwardly. It is often helpful to get her away from home or get family or relatives away from her. The average patient may rest comfortably and feel more contented in an arm chair a few hours a day. The daily schedule suggested for patients with good heart reserve is a 12-hour daily rest program. To bed 9 p.m., arise 7 a.m., with breakfast in bed; to bed 2 p.m. arise 4 p.m. At least 9 hours should be spent in sleep; the remaining hours in bed spent in relaxation. This rest program should be continued until heart rate is down nearly to normal. It is following this schedule of rest that gives results.

In regard to diet, bread butter, dairy products, fruits and vegetables should be eaten in abundant quantities.

I am not mentioning the drug treatment suggested by Dr. Bram. It is this "proper' way to rest that is the important factor in making it unnecessary to operate in many cases.

Blockade

Paris (CP)—The Soir points out the word "Blockade" came from "blockhaus" or the "blokhuis" (Dutch) but has an older origin and significance. In the 16th century it was associated with the idea of a barrier—but in the sense of a fortress. In the 17th century it took on its modern significance of siege by land or sea.

Men and Machines

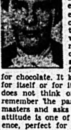
PARIS, MAY 16.

The machine has neither blood to spill nor eyes to weep; it has no heart to break. Is it not a wonderful thing—a machine? It does not lie awake in the night and speculate why this and why that. It is not finicky about its food, except the proper ration of oil or coal it needs that it may work, but it does not taste the differences in apples nor yearn for beefsteak or for chocolate. It knows no anxiety, for itself or for its own kind. It does not think of the future nor remember the past. It obeys its masters and asks no questions. Its attitude is one of sublime indifference, perfect for its function. It has no interest in perfection. It dies without torment, to be melted again to make another machine.



Regard your work, oh man! Is what you produced not superior to yourself? If you tickle it it does not laugh; if you prick it it does not bleed; if you offend it it takes no revenge. It is conscienceless, tireless, precise.

x x x

There is a hierarchy of machines. The master-machine is the machine tool, the machine that produces machines.

"Man is something that must be surpassed," said Nietzsche. Does not the machine tool surpass him? Should it not supplant him? Can man not drain himself of heart and blood and drill himself into the rhythms of the rod and the piston, breed into himself the indifferent hardness of steel, the indifferent harshness of emery, the indifferent brightness of aluminum?

The machine will conquer the world and rid it of that leftover of the past, that unclean, inefficent living and dying, uncertain of its function that uniform, badly cast variant of the pattern—Man.

x x x

"England is a commercial nation." Trading things—silks and copper, hemp and cocoa; goods for goods; cotton for coal; ideas for ideas.

"So were the men of Athens." "Who were the men of Athens?" "Traders and Talkers."

Tomorrow belongs to the machine.

The French are 50 per cent peasant. They plant poplars to protect cabbages against the wind. They eat delicately a thousand foods of a hundred regions. They are given over to the love of books, of the theatre of quality materials and quality foods.

Planters and eaters, lovers and talkers.

Tomorrow belongs to the machine.

x x x

"The most highly industrialized nation will win the next war, which will determine the pattern of human life for centuries."

Either men will win the war for the machine, or the machine will win the war for man.

The machines are coming across and coming over.

"They were thick over Belgium like flies. One whipped down where the children were playing football on the field and let out a hail of explosive bullets. Paul fell on his face. He got five of them. Do you want to see?"

Paul was twelve years old. He was laid out in the best parlor. His face looked amazed, not frightened.

"I guess they just had one round left. They were flying back home." From a high altitude men look like insects crawling along on the earth.

"The bottoms of the planes simply opened and dumped the parachuters out. They were in Dutch uniforms and dressed as Protestant pastors, priests and even nuns. We could not tell who was one of us and who was one of them.

"It was a droll incident—the machine hatched a brood that looked just like men, and suddenly they fell upon us."

x x x

"We have mobilized every man between twenty and forty-eight. The old men and the women must work at the machines. We need machine tools desperately. We ordered 20,000 from America but only 2,000 have come."

"We are fighting. Everything is all right, only we need machines!"

"The machines keep rolling over—over the earth and over men. Work for us!"

x x x

The garage mechanic straightens up and wipes the sweat out of his eyes. "I guess he'll go all right now," he says. "I see you're from California. I was there once. I went in a 1926 flivver and sold it there for twenty dollars more than it cost. American motors are the best in the world."

New roads, new states, new visions—with machines.

My kid is in Arizona. I could only get out for the week end from New York. I left at night and was there in the morning. "Hello, honey!"

"We don't need soldiers. Forgive me; but we are better at that than you are. Two of you would get killed to one of us. Americans are too damn brave for war. But we need machines."

x x x

American machine tools made the machines that produced the machines that are rolling free blood into the earth; that produced the airplanes that are dropping bombs on China; that produced the shells that are falling over Norway, Belgium, over France.

American rationalization was the pattern for German rationalization, undertaken with the help of American loans. Not for this purpose, but machines know no purpose. Only men have a purpose.

"There are millions of unemployed in the United States."

"Don't send men, send machines. Thousands of tons of American aluminum, to bleed for the rights of man where the idea of the rights of man was born."

And the machine shall become again a tool of men.

Nazi Psychology

It is hard to understand the workings of the Nazi mind. The latest German edict about parachute troops only adds to the mystery.

Berlin says that if the Dutch, Belgians, British or French put to death parachutists, then for every parachute trooper slain, the Nazis will take 10 prisoners of war and execute them.

In effect the Germans say: You can't shoot our soldiers, but we can shoot your civilians.

And, the strange part of it all is that the Nazis see no incongruity in their position.

Of course, the whole affairs boils down to the fact that the German is essentially a bully. He lives by threats of force and he tries to evade retribution by threatening even more force, if anyone dares to cross his will.

The Germans have been dropping parachute troops on undefended cities in The Netherlands, especially. These individuals have been shooting down civilians and women and children. Anyone crossing their path gets the benefit of a rifle or a grenade.

Worst of all, some of these parachute troops have been dressed as Dutch soldiers, as postmen or firemen, as priests and even as women. Under these disguises they seek to penetrate to vulnerable positions, before disclosing their real identity. And, the appearance of parachute invaders has been accompanied by the appearance of Germans, who have been living in The Netherlands as peaceful visitors, but who now turn out to be German agents, who have been waiting the call to take up arms and fight against the people among whom they have been trying to disguise themselves as friendly neighbors.

Faced with invaders of this sordid type, the Dutch have announced that summary execution is to be meted out to all caught in such unmilitary acts. Fighting fire with fire, the Dutch have decided that soldiers disguised as priests or women or in any other garb will be shot out of hand. That is in keeping with the old international law of executing francstireurs.

Berlin is annoyed by this show of determination against the Nazi troops. So, in an effort to divert the Dutch, the Germans say they will execute prisoners of war.

There is only one answer to that. If the Germans start to execute prisoners of war, two can play at the same game and German prisoners of war can fall before a firing squad just as easily as Allied prisoners can fall before a Nazi squad.

The German mind is so hard to understand. And, the only language that makes any impression on the German mind is the language of force. The Nazi have been asking for it. Now is the time to let them have it.—Windsor Star.

Alaska's McKinley Park

(By Temple Manning)

A vast wilderness with ice-capped peaks, grinding glaciers, foothills sweeping down to forests of spruce in the valleys, the whole area crowned by the greatest mountain on the North American continent — that's Mount McKinley National Park, glory of south-central Alaska. If you want to study nature and wildlife, then trek to this most fabulous of national parks. The first glimpse of the majestic mountain, its snow-covered head high in the clouds, reaching an altitude of 20,000 feet above sea-level, will repay the traveler for the time and effort expended on his journey to this part of Alaska. Like satellites clustering around it are other mountains, all much over 10,000 feet above sea-level.

Crowned by Two Peaks

Mount McKinley is crowned by two peaks, and two-thirds of the way down from its summit is cloaked in snow the year 'round. But always it is beautiful. All of the northward-flowing glaciers of the Alaska range rise on the ice-covered slopes of Mount McKinley and Mount Foraker, stupendous glaciers, that lend beauty to the majestic scene.

As a park attraction, the animal life of the region is surpassed only by the great mountain itself. Rangers told us that 112 kinds of birds and 34 species of animals have been definitely identified within the boundaries of the reservation. Thousands of caribou graze within McKinley Park, and it is part of the fun to try and locate them. Word spreads that a herd of hundreds has been glimpsed in one valley on a certain day, but by the next day there's not a trace of them.

Biggest Animals

Along the willow thickets high up in the mountain passes are the Alaska moose, largest animals in the park. But for amusement and fun, there's nothing like a glimpse of the pride and joy of Mount McKinley Park, the Toklat grizzly bear. They spend hours sliding down the steep snow slopes at the higher elevations. The cubs are especially enchanting, and their brown, tan or black curly coats show up beautifully in the snow. Wolves, wolverines, lynx and red fox are at home in all sections of the park. The red fox are especially handsome, much brighter red than their relatives in the United States proper.

Mt. McKinley Park, Alaska.

Ideal Vacation Spot

Mount McKinley National Park is an ideal spot for a summer vacation, for during the summer months there are over 18 hours of sunshine a day. On June 21, the longest day of the year, the sun is visible from the mountain tops at midnight, and it is a field day for the photographers. The rays of the sun, as they shine over this part of Alaska, paint a picture of riotous colors, a scene that would be extremely difficult to reproduce on canvas, however talented a painter may be. The giant snowy peaks seem transformed into domes of fire.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

While fighting to stop the Germans on their push into France through Belgium the Allies must be alert on other fronts. German concentrations on the German-Swiss border and the menacing attitude of Italy present the prospect of an offensive on France from the southeast.

Occupation of the greater part of Holland in addition to Denmark and Norway makes the problem of home defence for the United Kingdom an urgent one. The Balkan nations are another danger spot.

Germany's plan may well be to drive on in France and Belgium and draw as many Allied troops as possible into that area in the hope that a smash in another quarter, with or without the support of Italy, would meet with speedy success.

The traditional German fear of fighting on two fronts which prompted the alliance with Soviet Russia may not prevent a quick dash through Hungary at the Rumanian oil fields if a Rumanian "fifth column," after the fashion of the fifth columns in Norway and Holland, can give reasonable assurance the oil fields will not be wrecked.

Germans attributed the loss of the First Great War largely to the fact they were compelled to fight on two fronts, the French and the Russian.

Had it not been for the Russian front they could have thrown all their forces into the first drive on France and perhaps won a speedy victory. This time, apparently, they are going to test out the Western Front thoroughly before opening up another front.

WEED INSPECTORS HASTINGS COUNTY HOLD MEETING

C. C. Tennant, District Weed Inspector and Pat O'Keefe, Local Inspector, Discuss Question

WARDEN CHAIRMAN

The annual Weed Inspectors' Meeting for Hastings County took place in the Shire Hall at Belleville on Friday, May 17th, being featured by lectures and addresses by Mr. C. C. Tennant, District Weed Inspector, and Mr. Pat O'Keefe, Dominion Seed Inspector, who gave an address on the Canada Seeds Act and the advantages to be derived from the sowing of good seeds.

Mr. O'Keefe stated that the loss from weeds in Ontario amounted to millions of dollars annually and cited water, wind, and animals as three very important weed carriers while the sowing of weed seeds with the crop also ranked high in this respect. In a survey of grain taken from 79 seed boxes, it was found that a total of 289 weed seeds per pound existed including 53 noxious weed seeds to the pound of seed, he said.

With the world conditions such as they are and the price of grain not too encouraging, it was essential, Mr. O'Keefe said, that the greatest yield possible per acre be obtained. This necessitated taking into consideration the various grains, which are adopted to certain localities as grains which would do well in one locality may prove almost a failure in others. The care used by pure-bred cattle-raisers in selecting their herd sires was a good analogy to be used, when comparing the importance of selecting good seed, he concluded.

Discussion Led by Warden

Discussion on the foregoing topic was led by Mr. J. L. Churcher, Warden of Hastings County, who acted as chairman for the afternoon. Following this discussion Col. Roscoe Vanderwater spoke briefly on the work being done by the Hastings County Crop Improvement Association giving special reference to the benefit derived from the use of test plots.

The Weed Control Act was very thoroughly discussed by Mr. C. C. Tennant, who advised all newly appointed weed inspectors to thoroughly acquaint themselves with the Weed Act. Conditions now prevailing were such he said, that a more rigid enforcement of the act was being sought.

Referring to the small amount of work being done by certain weed inspectors throughout the county, Mr. Tennant expressed the opinion that that lack of uniformity in the rate of wages paid to inspectors was responsible for the laxity in the enforcement of the Weeds Act. "Many Inspectors were not paid enough to warrant them doing anything," he said.

When weed conditions warranted the cutting of a farmer's crop before maturity, Mr. Tennant recommended that disinterested parties, such as, possibly the District Weed Inspector, be called in to decide upon the destruction of such weed infested crop. This would eliminate any grudge being held against the local Inspector, he said.

In conclusion Mr. Tennant said that threshing machines were responsible for much weed carrying and held that it was the duty of the thresher to thoroughly clean his machine after each job before he went on the road.

Advises Use of Chemicals

W. L. Langlois, Road Superintendent for Hastings, said that he would like to see the day when the County could afford the use of chemicals as a weed killer. The county had nearly three hundred miles of road on which they had to cut brush and weeds, he said, and that after cutting the brush it was necessary to skip much of the weed cutting in order to stay within the appropriation of money allowed for this purpose.

Mr. Addison Coulter, of Foxboro, in talking on "the threshers' part in weed control", re-iterated Mr. Tennant's thought that threshing machines were responsible for much weed carrying and mentioned numerous cases where clover seed had been rejected as No. 1 seed because of its containing weed seeds which farmers declared were not on their farms. This definitely proved that threshing machines were responsible, said Mr. Coulter, and, in closing advocated manufacturers provide more clean-out facilities when building thrseheing machines. Discussion of the foregoing topic was led by Mr. Charles Rush of Stoco.

Used With Success

Discussion of chemical weed killer by Mr. Tennant revealed that more than 200,000 pounds had been used in Ontario last year with considerable success. So effective had it proved that in many cases spraying equipment could be put away as there was no need for further spraying. Chemical weed killers were not recommended where eradication of weeds could be accomplished by cultivation as the chemical often made the ground sterile for a number of years. Mr. Tennant said, that chemicals were also used for killing brush along highways but that a much stronger solution was necessary than for ordinary weed control. Cost of such weed control along highways varied between fifteen and twenty-five dollars per mile for both sides of the road.

Following a weed inspectors' report, Mr. H. L. Fair, Agricultural Representative for Hastings, gave a detailed report of the work accomplished during the past two years by the Hastings County Crop Improvement Association. The addition of different grasses being sowed with alfalfa to make for better pasture lands was highly recommended while a discussion on the use of test plots as a proving ground for the different types of grain and hybrid corn ended the afternoon's program.

Ottawa, May 18 — (CP) — It's a grimly resolute parliament which has started off the session and it augurs well for swift and competent consideration of the government's program for Canada At War.

Outstanding impression of the opening days has been evidence on the part of the legislators of firm determination of purpose to meet the great crises of the conflict. Run the gamut of House members from 26-year-old Rene Jutras (Lib. Provencher), youngest in the House, to the 71-year-old veteran, A. W. Neill (Ind. Comox-Alberni), the oldest and the war and efficient action by Parliament to cope with emergencies is the universal concern.

Most observers on Parliament Hill predict a fast-moving session, free for the most part from inter-party squabbles, with a Democratic Parliament striving to prove it can move at high speed when the need is imperative.

Corridor cuff-notes: Seventy-eight and still an active parliamentary leader, Hon. Dandurand apparently has been persuaded to remain for at least this session as Government Chief in the Senate—he has wanted to retire for some time ... chief diversion now is writing his memoirs of an eventful life in Canada and abroad...

The ban on kilts for Highland regiments raises the Scottish ire of Tom Reid (Lib. New Westminster). "If I get the chance I'm going to ask some questions about that in the House," he says. His non-Scottish friends maintain the demise of the kilt accounts for the sad pibroch notes of the bagpipes that waft these nights from his office up by the eaves of the centre block ... but he's no mean piper at that ...

When Hon. R. B. Hanson, new temporary Conservative House leader, conferred with the Prime Minister before the session started, it was the first time he ever met the government leader .... a member for many years before 1935, Mr. Hanson explains: "You see I was never very close to the Grits."

A half-dozen new M. P.'s, gray-haired or bald, visited the Commons chamber the day before parliament tourist-fashion and forgot their parliamentary dignity as they tried out their new seats ... laughing and pounding their desks like schoolboys....

Some farmer-members from the west may make it hot for the government on agricultural questions. They want complete explanations of huge surpluses in some products and there is some dissent among prairie representatives concerning working of the acreage bonus....

Clare Moyer, Clerk of the Senate, and Senator Arthur Beaubien (Lib. Manitoba) apparently see eye to eye. When the new Senator was signing the roll in the chamber opening day, he fumbled for his glasses and found he had forgotten them ... Clerk Moyer whipped off his own spectacles which Mr. Beaubien squinted through as he scrawled his name....

East Block jottings: The one show the Prime Minister saw when in New York at the tag end of his southern holiday was Robert Sherwood's "There Shall be no Night," acclaimed by American critics ... no steady patron of the drama, Mr. Mackenzie King was "much impressed" by the play about the Russian-Finnish war....

Under the Peace Tower

Wartime precautions keep most photographers out of the centre block ... but camera men from the office of the Director of Public Information have the run of the place ... it was a complete surprise to Hon. J. A. MacKinnon of Edmonton when he was named Trade Minister ... he thought he was going to the mines and resources department in the cabinet shuffle... Hon. R. J. Manion has no particular plans for the immediate future ... but it is almost certain he will not dust off the little black bag and go back to the practise of medicine.

His private secretary, R. A. Bell, a University of Toronto and Osgoode Hall graduate, carries on in the same capacity with Mr. Hanson ... with about 45 writers on the list, the parliamentary press gallery is the largest on record.

Board of Education Requests Earlier Closing of Beverage Rooms For Duration of War

Members Agree Dominion Must Conserve All Resources in Order to Win War

GRANTS DISCUSSED

Protest to be Sent in to Toronto Against Decrease in Grants for Schools

Legislation protesting to the Ontario Government regarding the reduction of educational grants in this province and also a motion proposing the earlier closing of beverage rooms in Ontario for the duration of the war were passed at last night's monthly meeting of the Board of Education held in the Board Room.

The motion suggesting the earlier closing of beverage rooms was presented by Chas. L. Hyde and seconded by H. B. Fetterly and read: "That whereas our Empire is passing through the most critical period of our history, and realizing the necessity to conserve all our resources, for the duration of the war, with the one purpose of saving our civilization, we hereby place ourselves on record as in favor of a much earlier closing of the beverage rooms of Ontario and also move that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Liquor Control Board of Ontario, also the Premier and R. D. Arnott, M.P.P., and Dr. H. Welsh, M.P.P."

Original Motion Changed.

The motion passed unanimously after some discussion and a slight changing of the original motion, which suggested to close the beverage rooms at 8 p.m. This was deleted, however.

In introducing his motion Mr. Hyde stated: "Twelve o'clock is too late for any person's son or daughter to be in a beer hall. It is no place for them at such an hour. It is time the province as a whole rose up in protest."

"I know they have limited hours for public houses in England during the war, but I wonder if this is the place for such discussions or motions? We are interested in the welfare of our chiluden, but is this within our jurisdiction?" Rev. A. B. Payne stated when asked by Dr. Locke regarding the procedure pertaining to such practices during war time in England. "Too early closing will breed bootleggers and dives that might be worse than the present condition," prompted Chairman Reg. Moncrieff, speaking before the mover deleted the phrase suggesting 8 p.m. as a possible early closing of provincial beverage rooms.

When in committee as a whole the Belleville Board of Education officially protested regarding the reduction of educational grants by the Ontario Government. In speaking on the matter C. L. Hyde said: "At the request of the City Council we set our estimates early, but the government reduced its grant this year by some $1,700.00 and there are indications of more drastic reductions, which means we won't be able to meet our operating costs. This is the second time in recent years our government grants have been cut."

Protest Useless?

"You can't expect too much from a government when the electorate is not acquainted with the true facts. This school and collegiate might not have been built if it had been foreseen that certain grants were to be decreased without warning and at random. Personally I don't think this protest will be of any use, but the ratepayers of Belleville should be informed of what's going on and why," stated Dr. Kinnear in speaking on the reduction of educational grants by the Ontario government.

"In 1934, or was it in '35? No matter, we received a cut of $4,000 and the only restoration was a paltry $500. This year we expect another cut of a few thousand dollars which means a reduction of between four and five thousand dollars out of an original $12,000 grant. The ratepayers should know it's not the fault of this Board, that taxes are soaring. Every Board in the province should protest, but unfortunately there is not enough publicity given these matters and the press is falling down when it does not acquaint the public with the whole picture," concluded Dr. Kinnear.

"It will do no harm to send the protest in," urged Rev. Payne.

"By all means, let's send it in and find out what the department's plans are for the future so we can adjust our own budget, concluded Chairman Reg. Moncrieff.

Auditorium for "Y" Work

Deviating somewhat from their regular provisions under regulations the Board voted the use of the Collegiate Auditorium to the use of the Y.M.C.A. 'War Service Committee' for the purpose of holding four Sunday evening concerts, after church hours, with all proceeds to go to the Y.M.C.A. "War Service Funds". Messrs. M. P. Duff, J. E. Shortt and President Newton Thompson acted as a delegation supporting the recommendation.

"Our Y.M.C.A. here is open at all times to the boys in uniform and we are trying to take care of all children whose relatives are in the army. While only recently the "Y" supplied sports equipment for the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment", pointed out President Thompson. "We have to deviate from usual practices and regulations in order to prosecute this war to a victorious end and we must stand behind our boys and make sacrifices at home", added Mr. Duff. The request was immediately granted.

General Business

Under the heading of general business the Advisory Vocational Committee account for $477.68 was passed. At the request of the Women's Activities of the Canadian National Exhibition a team of three girl students will be sent from the Belleville Collegiate, under Miss Grout, to compete in the exhibits of Home Economics at a cost not to exceed $10.00.

The School Management Committee recommended the need of a Health Clinic or Survey in the public schools as suggested by Miss E. A. Earshman, public health nurse and to be tried as an experiment at King George School, where the teachers have qualified in advanced Hygiene.

All applications for teachers were ordered filed, while a letter from J. L. Shiels, reporting a shortage of cadet uniforms for the Collegiate was left in abeyance until after Cadet Inspection. The Board will request the principals of the city schools to co-operate with the Belleville Ministerial Association in the matter of a half hour of religious training during school hours.

Purchase a Fence

The School Property Committee reported the purchase of a fence, to be erected between Queen Mary Grounds and the property of Mr. Black at a cost of $44.70 while 28 tables and 35 chairs were purchased for the Commercial rooms of the B.C.I. The Board passed a motion to tender for renovation work necessary in all schools during the summer vacation period, and also the purchase of a sander for the Woodworking Department of the Vocational School. The Supply Committee's account of $663.36 was passed as was the Finance Committee's account of $1,663.55.

In his monthly report Principal P. C. MacLaurin stated that the average attendance for the Collegiate and Vocational School for April was 95.3 per cent., while his request for a five-boy team, representing the Collegiate at the Agricultural Field Day held at the Kemptville Agricultural College on June 8th was passed. Permission for leave of absence, from June 19th to the 29th., was granted George Laughlin, boys' physical director at the Collegiate, in order that he may attend a "refresher course" being provided by the Ontario Athletic Commission.

School Nurse's Report

The school nurses report as submitted by Miss E. A. Earshman for the period from April 22nd to May 17th., was as follows—number of inspections 1,154; special physical inspections 71; vision test 19; home visits 48 and the report stated there were only a few cases of communicable diseases in our schools.

The Belleville General Hospital was granted permission to use the Collegiate Auditorium for their annual graduation exercises on June 24th next, and the local Ki-Y softball groups were permitted the use of the public school grounds providing they assume the responsibility of resulting damages.

WEDDINGS

RUSSELL—SEENEY

The home of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Leavitt adorned with a profusion of Spring flowers was the scene of a pretty wedding at four o'clock this afternoon when their daughter Miss Madeline E. Seeney, became the bride of Mr. Harold W. Russell, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Russell of Toronto. Rev. James Semple officiated.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father, wore a graceful gown of sheer white crepe, with shoulder length veil and carried a bouquet of Talisman roses and sweet peas.

She was attended by Miss Evelyn Thrasher who was attired in powder blue sheer with matching hat, and carried a bouquet of sweet peas.

Mr. Gordon A. Russell of Toronto, brother of the groom, was groomsman.

Following the ceremony a buffet luncheon was served, Mrs. Leavitt, in royal blue, and Mrs. Russell, wearing printed crepe, receiving with the bride and groom.

Later, Mr. and Mrs. Russell left for western points, the bride travelling in gaiety blue dress with gray accessories.

Sterling. Beatrice Macfarlane read the Scripture lesson. The Missionary Convener, Mrs. Bruce McKinney then took charge. Mrs. Fred Jeffrey gave a very interesting topic on "Grenfell of Labrador" followed by a piano selection by Audrey Demill. Lillie Weese gave a reading entitled "Can a man forget his ma". Marie Badgley played a piano selection "Dance of the Bears" and Frances Macfarlane gave a comical recitation, "Neighbors." The president took charge of the business period and plans were made for the Young People's annual picnic. Collection was received. The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

PRESENTATION

The evening was spent in dancing to music furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Grantly Burleigh and Mr. MacWilliams. About 11.30 the honored couple were asked to take seats on the platform. An address, read by Mrs. Roy Vance was signed on behalf of friends by Clarence Kincaid and Albert Alford.

Annie and Louis both in well chosen words expressed their thanks for the lovely gifts and invited everyone to visit them in their home. All joined in singing "For they are jolly good fellows". A dainty lunch was served by the young ladies.

LADIES' NIGHT CLOSES SEASON

Baptist Brotherhood of Victoria Avenue Church Elects Officers for Next Term

One of the most successful seasons enjoyed by the Baptist Brotherhood of Victoria Ave. Church came to a close Friday evening when the annual Ladies' Night banquet was held in the church parlors.

The guest speaker for the occasion was Mr. Alec Gordon, who graphically described his trip to South America by tramp steamer last summer, Motion pictures of the trip were exhibited by Mr. Gordon and these showed scenes at the ports of call at several islands of the West Indies, also in British and Dutch Guiana. The highly educative and interesting lecture was deeply appreciated by the audience. The guest speaker was introduced by Mr. Alan Haw.

Mr. Chas. Franklin, President of the Brotherhood, proposed the toast to the King. A toast to the church was proposed by Mr. J. Blackburn, to which the Rev. C. T. Olmstead responded. Mr. John Jury, with wit and gallantry, toasted the ladies and this was responded to by Miss Edith Looker.

A sing-song of favorite choruses was led by Mr. Arthur Wynne, after which a period of devotion was conducted by Mr. G. L. Gerow. Mr. Arthur Wynne sang "A Perfect Day," with Mr. Alec Gordon accompanying at the piano. Two humorous readings were contributed by Miss Anna Hogle and were received with much enthusiasm by her listeners.

With Mr. Chas. Franklin presiding, several items of business were disposed of and certain new projects discussed. A slate of officers for the ensuing year was recommended by the nominating committee and unanimously accepted. Following are the officers elected for the coming year:

Honorary Pres., Rev. C. T. Olmstead; President, Chas. Franklin; Vice-Pres., G. L. Gerow; Treasurer, A. Wessels; Secretary, Fred Fox; Chairman Membership Committee, W. Neal; Chairman Program Committee, John Jury; Chairman Calendar Committee, A. E. Haw; Song Leader, Art. Wynne; Pianist, John Jury.

Dulling Nose Finish

By HELEN FOLLETT

NOW COMES the season when the girl with the shining nose nearly goes dotty. The old powder pad is working full time and the dull finish is never present. Very discouraging!

Sebaceous glands are on a rampage and perspiration is putting on its little shine. It is believed that a diet containing too much fat makes the glands mad, so cut down on butter, cream and pastries.

After using soap and warm water, rinse the surface of the skin with cold water, dry, apply witch hazel freely and then frisk an ice cube over the flesh. That'll fix 'em.

Women with top-heavy figures—broad shoulders, large bust, narrow hips and short legs—can create an appearance of better proportions by following certain rules of line and color. One indulgence they cannot enjoy, and that is the snug fit. Gives the observer the impression that the gown is too full of girl. Loose fit and long lines are effective figure disguises.

Let this lady seek out an expert corsetiere who will provide her with a two-in-one foundation garment that will mold and tighten the lines of the breasts and give more length to the torso. It should be well boned, but not so rigid that it does not permit easy movements of the body. It is necessary that the abdomen be bound, but not too such an extend that flesh is pushed up into a roll beneath the bust.

Tiny shoes with spiked heels are not for this type of woman; they are out of proportion to the rest of her body. The high hairdress is a help, making her neck appear more slender and giving her a little extra height. Flat, brimmed hats will take off inches, and she needs all she has. If the face is full the muffin hat won't do. The happy choice is a chapeau of medium size, preferably with a small, upturned brim.

A FORMIDABLE BREW

An appeal by a regional food controller for weaker tea, in the interests of health and war-time economy, would probably have been scoffed at by that poet, parson, and tea-drinker Robert Hawker, of Morwenstow. To the young housewives who crowded his drawing-room on summer afternoons Hawker dispensed tea made according to his own recipe, which he was always urging them to adopt. "I tell you, my dears, how to make tea." he would say. "Fill the pot with leaves to the top, and pour the water into the cracks."—Manchester Guardian.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Should Invitation Include Fiancee to-be?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My boy friend and I have been going "steady" for a year and a half. His married brothers and sisters know of it, but his guardian doesn't. The mother of one of his sisters-in-law is having a dinner, to which my boy friend is invited and I am not. She knows we go together, and I think I should have been asked, but my boy friend says it isn't necessary that I am invited, because our engagement has not been announced. Am I wrong?

B. B. O.

x x x

Strictly speaking, as long as your engagement has not been announced, it was not obligatory to invite you to the dinner. But as the family knew you have been going together with the idea of marriage in view, it would have been a courteous gesture on the part of the hostess to ask you.

To Pet or Not to Pet

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Why is it that girls are considered flat tires if they don't pet, and "fast" if they do? How can a girl lead her own ideal life in this age, unless she leads a lonely one?

I'm 22 years of age, and so far haven't met a man I could call ideal, and I have no intention of leading a gay life just to be popular. I'm not a prude and enjoy the company of men. I like sports and am an all-round good fellow up to a certain point—and then I'm accused of being cold and a heartbreaker. Of course, some of these men are honorable and want to become engaged and marry, but I haven't met the right one.

How should a young girl act to retain the friendship and respect of young men as good pals? This has puzzled me for many a weary month.

x x x

Right now I'm reminded of a very charming girl who is now happily married. She told me she made her "non-petting platform" clear in the beginning of a friendship. She drove her own car, could swim and hike farther than a good many boys, and as she was also very pretty, she made her own rules.

She too was opposed to petting, and in a good-natured way, without a touch of prudery, made it plain to all admirers that she wasn't like "an old library book picked up, to be returned dog-eared, thumb-marked." And she got away with her "platform" and married a highly intelligent man, and so far they're radiantly happy.

Platonic Friendship

About a year ago I met a girl in the course of my business, and since we have been seeing each other at lunch once or twice a week. Our friendship has been the finest thing I have ever known. No word of love has ever been spoken, and I haven't as much as held her hand.

But this may seem funny to you. I am happily married and in love with my wife. The girl is engaged to a young man she loves dearly.

These meetings between us are secret and thats' what bothers me. She is not the type who would go out with a married man. From the beginning it was understood that these meetings were to be purely friendly and nothing else, and it has always been just that.

I know if I ever mentioned a word of love to her she would never see me again, and that's why I like her so much Do you think there is anything wrong with a friendship of this kind?

Wondering

x x x

You bring up that old question of platonic friendship The ability to keep them platonic is largely a question of age and temperament.

When two young people have an agreeable impersonal friendship, it is not unlikely that it will slip into a love affair But there's always a danger You say that your meetings are, of course, a secret, and that's what bothers you. Isn't that, in itself, a danger signal?

Temptations Invite Dishonesty in Home

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

"DEAR Dr. Myers: I have a very serious and grave problem before me in the matter of training my children. An ex-school teacher, a lover of children and of child-training, I have had very little difficulty with my family of eight bright, healthy boys and girls, all at school but one baby. My heart is breaking as I tell you I have found deceit and dishonesty in my family.

"I have never punished a child when he admitted truthfully a wrongdoing. I have so much emphasized the truth that this comes as an awful shock to me.

"Six years ago we had perhaps the best business in town, but lost it and had to cut down in our living. The children were always fed, but perhaps they were hungry for the little extras we were used to . . . ."

Then she tells of the neighbor who informed her that one of her boys had bought bananas and had them charged to this neighbour; that another neighbour woman reported another boy who took a bottle of pop from the kitchen as he was delivering a message. "He denied it before her, but she was so sure I took down a strap and then he admitted it. I was sick all night. He had also charged groceries and used the money for candy. Then came a carnival or child's fair. I missed change constantly from my purse (which I leave around purposely), and one night this child didn't come home till 11 o'clock—a child of 11. We were all frantic and found he had been spending freely and enjoying himself. It was three weeks before he admitted taking my money. . . . . .

Can't Resist Pantry

". . . The whole family seems to lack resistance around the pantry. I simply can't keep a cake or pie and with so many I never get the culprit. And how I grieve over it. I am not sure of any of them. They'll all steal from the pantry, and I've even left a cake in the middle of the table and dared them to touch it. It would be touched all right and I'd never find out—not even a blush".

Then she states that the father often interferes when she checks on the stealing by those children and says before them, "Well, didn't you steal cookies when you were their age?' "

You and I cannot honestly question this mother's motives. Few, perhaps, are more conscientious than she is. Only the methods she employed would we challenge.

Like thousands of other conscientious mothers, she vainly puts her trust in the child's forced confession to make him true and honest. She would even expose her boys to temptations to steal when she well knew they could not withstand them, in order, as she hoped, to exercise them in admitting their guilt.

Shift Her Methods

As kindly and sympathetically as I could, I wrote this mother, begging her to shift her methods and not only to cease to tempt her children but, on the contrary, to save them from as many temptations as possible .Temptations to which one falls always weaken one's will power. Only as one is able to resist victoriously is one strengthened for having been tempted.

I begged her, moreover, to quit trying to force her children to confess and to put them on the witness stand never again but, instead, to try to make each feel himself a worthy, well-loved member of the family whose name he wishes to enjoy and uphold.

What could I add about her husband except words of sympathy? She hardly can hope to change him much save by means very indirect.

Fashion Flashes

Come one, come all, and wear the large hats shown by every designer this season. A beauty of white milan straw has a wreath of white chiffon roses around is tall crown and a cluster under the brim in back.

You'll be piqued unless you have a pique evening frock this summer. An original model has a full skirt with red and white allover eyelet embroidery for simple bodice and skirt hem.

Why not a black lace blouse as a change from the usual? A beauty is a short-sleeved model of fine black Chantilly type lace with a ruff cascade of self-fabric held by little jet buttons.

Everywhere we roam we notice the taffeta suit. A smart model in black taffeta has a very full but short skirt and a short fitted jacket with rounded, flat lapels triangular button closing and sleeves cuffed below the elbow.

Just one casual coat, if well cut, can do things for your wardrobe. Nice over sports things, evening frocks or daytime prints, is a hiplength coat of red chinchilla wool with self saddle stitching making borders at the lapels, the big pocket flaps and the front closing.

New charm lurks in the folds of nighties now ready for summer. A pretty voile gown is white with embroidered field flowers at the V neckline which is scalloped with blue. Deep side flounce for hemline.

Glorious Health

Good health is the true basis of beauty, success and happiness. Many have won good health by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

You may think of sleepless nights, of irritability and general failure of the digestive system to do its work and may say "Oh, that is too good to be true."

But it is true and many thousands of people will tell you that time and again they have been restored to health, vigor and happiness by using this restorative of the blood and the nerves.

At this season of the year nearly everybody needs tonic treatment to build up the quality of the blood and tone up the nervous system. It is a grand time to put Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to the test.

Looking Your Best Takes Time

NAN GREY . . . shows the results of careful dressing.

By HELEN FOLLETT

WITH buttons gone into the limbo of forgotten things and zippers ever at hand, dressing is done in a jiffy. Too much of a jiffy, we think. It is the hurried dresser who has stray hairs on her shoulders, powder in patches, collar squeegee.

Take your time, particularly if you are making the big date, want to put the other girls eyes out. Have a warm bath to lull your nervous system to sleep and to untense your muscles. Cream your face beforehand; the cream and the steam in the bathroom will give your complexion freshness and color.

Spare 10 minutes for a complete flop with cold compresses on your eyes. Not stingy little gauze pads, but a heavy washcloth If the flesh around the soul orbs is swollen, cold water will deflate it.

Condition the complexion for make-up. You can use a foundation if you like— there are different forms for dry and oily skins—but be sure to follow directions precisely and exactly. Begin powdering at the collar bones, work upward, include the shoulders and the back of the neck. Use a magnifying mirror when tinting the lips and touching the lashes with mascara. Make-up is a fine art these days. The girl who splashes on the batik is committing a beauty crime.

Don't cut your finger-nails with manicure scissors; they will thicken and grow hard. Use a metal file, run the orange wood stick under the eave, use the beveling file of sandpaper.

Apply cuticle cream every night of your life, no matter how sleepy you may be. Your talons will be delicate and rosy, you'll never have a battle with a hangnail. Friction the nails to stimulate the underlying blood streams that give them coloring.

A nail white pencil is convenient. You can form a fine point by slipping it in your pencil sharpener. Dip it in water, pass it under the nail eaves, forming a clear-cut line.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

No Tongs

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When loaf sugar is passed to you without tongs accompanying the sugar bowl, what is the procedure? Assuming, of course, that the sugar is unwrapped.

2. When sliced lemon is served with tea, what do you do with the lemon slice? Is it left in the cup while drinking the tea, or is it removed from the cup before drinking?

W. W.

x x x

1. If there aren't any sugar tongs, take the lump of sugar with your fingers, being as careful as possible not to touch the other pieces of sugar.

2. Before you start drinking the tea, remove the slice of lemon to the side of the saucer.

Announcements

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

We are going to be married at the rectory, with only the members of our family present. Then we're going to have a wedding dinner, with relatives and a few close friends present.

In this case, is it proper to send out no wedding invitations, and send only wedding announcements to all our relatives and friends?

Bob.

Yes, when so few guests are being invited to the wedding dinner, they may be invited either by word of mouth or by telephone or by notes written either by the bride's mother or the bride. Then the most convenient thing to do is to send wedding announcements, to be mailed directly after the ceremony has been performed.

"Get Well" Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it necessary, after one has been ill in a hospital, to answer all "Get Well" cards?

N. N. J.

If you can find time and strength to do it, it would be gracious to write brief notes of appreciation of these kind messages.

Declining

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My employer's daughter has sent me a formal invitation to her wedding and reception. I am unable to attend. Will you please advise me whether it is necessary for me to write a note declining the invitation?

Reader

Since the invitation is a formal one, your reply must be formal. It is not necessary to write a reply to the invitation to the ceremony, but it is necessary that you write the reply to the reception invitation. On the first page of formal letter-paper—white, double-sheeted—write your "regret" like this, spacing the lines as they are spaced in the invitation:

Miss Gloria Graham
regrets that she is unable to accept
Mr. and Mrs. (Bride's Parents)'s
kind invitation to their daughter's wedding reception on Tuesday, the eighteenth of June

(The hour and place may be repeated in the regret, but this, obviously, is not necessary.)

Tenth Anniversary

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please suggest a gift for a tenth wedding anniversary? It is to be given to someone in the family.

Grace.

If a wedding anniversary party is being planned, it will be a "Tin Wedding", and it would probably be expected that your gift would be of tin. But if your gift isn't for an anniversary party, I suggest that you give anything for the house that you know will be welcome. Something in linen or cotton, silver or other metal, leather, china, glass. If the couple give buffet parties, you might like to give an accessory for this kind of entertaining.

CARMEL Y. P. U.

The weekly meeting of the Carmel Y.P.U. was held on Wednesday, May 8th. The vice president, Mrs. Percy Reynolds, called the meeting to order. Miss Ruby Howes took charge of the program. The worship service opened with a call to worship by Miss Howes. The scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Carl Thompson. Miss Wright gave a story. Miss Margarite Hicks closed the worship service with a prayer. Mr. Jack McCabe favored with a solo. Miss Ruby Howes gave the topic "Forward with Christian youth."

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Pasteurized Milk

I hope I will be pardoned if I seem to propagandize in these columns from time to time for the pasteurization of milk. It is something that I'm for one hundred percent. And I think that ninety percent of the public would be for it too, if they had the facts before them and understood them. I wouldn't go so far as to say that 100 percent of the people would be for it because there are always some persons opposed to anything.

I was surprised when I learned recently that of about 500 cities in the United States, less than fifty have compulsory pasteurization. I was surprised because I thought nearly everyone knew that from fifteen to twenty percent of bone, gland and abdominal tuberculosis in children comes from raw milk. I thought most persons knew that besides tuberculosis, unpasteurized milk has been known to have spread such diseases as typhoid fever, paratyphoid fevers, undulant fever, scarlet fever, septic sore throat, diphtheria, diarrhea, dysentery and others.

I'm supposing it is lack of knowledge on the part of the public that makes it apathetic to the fact that children are exposed to the diseases mentioned above through unpasteurized milk Milk is an incomparable food. Children have to have it to survive. Adults should drink at least a pint of it a day. But it is only a valuable food when it is pure and free from disease.

Of course, I'm aware that pasteurization has opponent. There are persons, some of them doctors, I regret to say, who argue that pasteurization reduces or destroys the value of milk as a food. Well, it is only right and proper that these enemies of pasteurization should have their say, for ours are still free countries, and it may be that they really do the cause of pasteurization more good than harm. They bring up arguments that make us think and as long as we're thinking we won't go too far wrong.

On previous occasions when I have championed pasteurization, I have received a barrage of letters, many criticizing me, a few abusing me for wanting to "destroy" man's greatest food. These show how how much we still have to do toward educating people to the need for the pasteurization of milk.

There was just as strong opposition to vaccination to prevent small pox. It still keeps up to some extent, but only because the public at large has been educated to the point where it realizes that vaccination really means immunity to smallpox.

Fun of Exercising

MARY HOWARD . . . swimming is one of her regular exercises

Speak of exercise to the average woman and she'll look bored enough to pass away. The old alibi is that exercise is tiresome, nothing interesting about it. Make it interesting; consider it fun and your outlook will change. You'll be a livelier, happier young woman. Fresh air rushes into your breathing bellows. Peps you up, puts ginger in your heels.

It isn't fair to have your muscles starving. Blood vessels, when stimulated, bring them nourishment. There is another point to keep in mind; exercise chugs up energy, helps the skin and the digestive organs to function normally.

The housekeeper gets a certain amount of exercise, but the typist and desk worker are sadly in need of it. Without it the meal bag shape may develop in later years and that's no blessing to which one can look forward with joyous anticipation. Have an eye on the future.

If outdoor sports are not possible in a busy life, then have five minutes of bending, twisting and arm swinging every morning. Do deep breathing when you awaken and when you lie down in your little beddy at night.

Want to grow your own blushes instead of dipping them out of the paint pot? It can be done. Vivid skin coloring is dependent upon nourishing food, restful sleep and fresh air.

Stick to a schedule of health habits. Don't be a finicky eater; if you are you won't get your mineral salts, vitamins and other necessary food elements. Spend at least one hour out-of-doors each day.

Use cold water freely. After the warm bath have a cold shower to speed up circulation. Use creamy cosmetics at night, in the morning lave the face with water that comes from the cold water faucet. Pile into bed before you are exhausted; you'll sleep better.

KINGSTON PILOT AWARDED D.F.C.

Acting Flight Lieutenant N. W. Timmerman Gives Chase to Enemy Machine While on Homeward Flight

London, May 18 (CP). — Three Canadians are among a large group of Royal Air Force fliers decorated for outstanding "gallantry and devotion to duty", the Air Ministry announced today.

Distinguished Flying Crosses have been awarded to Flying Officer Gordon Learmouth Raphael of Brantford, Ont., Acting Flight Lieutenant Nelles Woods Timmerman of Kingston, Ont., and Pilot Officer Lawrence Latham Jones of Saskatoon, Sask.

Raphael, who was born at Brantford in 1915, was educated at Quebec High School and the College of Aeronautical Engineers at Chelsea. He enlisted as an Aircraftsman in the R.A.F. Reserve in 1935, was promoted to Sergeant during the same year and given a service commission in 1936. He was promoted to the rank of Flying Officer in 1938 and was mentioned in despatches last February.

Timmerman was the pilot of an aircraft returning to its base when an enemy aircraft was seen to fly past in the opposite direction. Timmerman immediately turned and gave chase. After a salvo of shots from his front gun he shot the enemy down into the sea. Earlier in April he successfully attacked two enemy patrol vessels, destroying at least one of them.

Nazi Invasions Of Small Nations Nets Little Gold

Washington, May 18—The Allies probably gained considerably more in liquid monetary assets than did the German Government as a consequence of the Nazi invasion of Norway, Denmark and the Low Countries, according to the opinion of officials here.

They said that for all practical purposes the gold of these countries, most of which had been transferred to New York or London prior to the invasions, had become part of the Allies' war chest for purposes of financing the conflict.

Latest available figures on the gold reserves of the invaded nations show that Norway had $84,000,000; Denmark, $53,000,000; Belgium, $626,000,000 and The Netherlands, $690,000,000. Heavy transfers of gold from these countries to London and New York have been made in the last year, and have increased in recent months.

From January through March alone The Netherlands shipped $46,878,000 of gold to the United States; Norway, $33,405,000, and Belgium, only $974,000. Sweden sent $115,041,000 of the metal to the United States in that period.

London Reports Recalled

The Financial News of London quoted French sources on April 15 to the effect that all of the gold bullion of Norway had been removed prior to the Nazi invasion.

On March 15 The New Statesman and Nation of London,, anticipating the invasion of Scandinavia, stated that "accounts of the financial loot falling to Germany in Denmark and Norway are probably exaggerated." The article added that "the bulk of Danish gold has been transferred abroad, and if Norway followed the example of Sweden, which shipped the greater part of its (pound sterling) 74,000,000 to the United States some time ago, the Germans will probably not find very much in Oslo."

The evidence seems conclusive, on the basis of information reaching government sources here, that there could have been but a relatively small part of the gold stocks of any of the four nations waiting for German seizure.

Create Organization To Handle Recruiting Of Reinforcements

Ottawa, May 18—(CP)—Creation of an organization to handle recruiting of reinforcements for the Canadian Active Service Force and their allotment to units serving in the field is revealed by the announcement of a series of new military appointments by Defence Minister Rogers.

The names of the officers commanding six holding units, now established in England or, shortly to be established, were announced last night. Reinforcements sent to England from the territorial regiments and depots established for recruiting purposes in Canada will go into the holding units pending their allotment to units of the C.A.S.F. in the field or elsewhere as required.

In addition, the Minister named recruiting officers for three military districts with headquarters at Toronto, Winnipeg and Regina.

An artillery holding unit will look after reinforcements for artillery units sent to England; three holding units will handle reinforcements for infantry (rifle) battalions; one holding unit will handle reinforcements for machine gun battalions; and a general holding unit will take care of reinforcements for engineer, army service corps and other units.

With the time drawing closer for concentration of the 2nd division, now scattered across Canada at unit headquarters, in camps for summer training, some appointments to senior posts in the division were announced.

All the new appointments are in the artillery and others for the infantry brigades and divisional headquarters are expected soon now, that the divisional commander, Major-General Victor W. Odlum, has returned from England.

MUNICH BEER

Sunderland, England (CP)—Munich beer, part of a prize cargo of 640 casks captured by the navy from an enemy vessel en route to America, will be sold in Sunderland "pubs" probably at 9d (18c) a pint.

Impelling drama—enacted by Lionel Atwill, Meda Novara and Conrad Nagel in a scene from "The Mad Empress," which opens at the Capitol next with an added attraction, "All American Chump," starring Stuart Erwin, Robert Armstrong and Betty Furness.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Dark Rapture"

The three star attraction, "Dark Rapture" opens next at the McCarthy Theatre.

"Dark Rapture" is the record of an expedition sponsored by the late King Albert of the Belgians, which penetrated into the mysterious depth of the Belgian Congo and came back with a film record that is amusing, amazing, and several times tremendously exciting. Most travelogs confine themselves to pretty scenery, but "Dark Rapture" has much more than that to recommend it. It records for the first time the strange rites of entrance into manhood practiced in the jungle, it takes you to live and hunt with the pygmies, and share an elephant feast with them, then it takes you on a thrilling jaunt across a range of volcanic mountains, including a trip across the crust of lava in an active crater, in order to visit a strange valley of Giants where average men are seven feet tall.

The finale is an elephant hunt, not one of sissy affairs where they drive a herd into a huge corral, but a hunt where they single out one elephant and rope it. En route home with their captive, the expedition is overhauled by a fierce veldt fire and has to take refuge in a river. A return visit to the pygmies during the building of their native bridge is another exciting sequence. There's plenty of humor, too, in the antics of captive animals, particularly the monkeys, do not miss "Dark Rapture" it is heartily recommended as one of the very superior screen records of life in the Dark Continent.

"Flight at Midnight"

A gay story of the airways, with plenty of thrills, fun, and romance combined, is the second feature "Flight at Midnight" which features Phil Regan, Jean Parker, Col. Roscoe Turner and Noah Berry, Jr. also on the McCarthy Theatre screen with "Dark Rapture" and the latest Fox newsreel, of important World-wide happenings.

"In Old Missouri"

"The Covered Trailer"

The Weaver Brothers and Elviry in their new musical-comedy "In Old Missouri" and also "The Higgins Family in a sixty minute comedy screen "The Covered Trailer" are now showing at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Mad Empress"

In actual locations where the ill-fated history of Archduke Maximilian and his bride, Carlota, was spun in Mexico, Miguel Torres has produced "The Mad Empress" which is released by Vitagraph, coming to the Capitol next.

Transporting over one hundred workers to Mexico, Torres filmed the story of the lives of the unhappy reign of the couple as Mexican monarchs in some of the same buildings and rooms that the couple lived in during their unhappy reign as Mexican Monarchs.

Much of the acting in the picture was done by natives of the areas in which the happenings occurred, and several of the Mexicans who appeared in the picture are descendants of soldiers who fought for or against the Emperor Maximilian in the unsuccessful battle against the Indian President, Juarez.

During the time the camera crew was in Mexico, they traveled over 1,000 miles, following from place to place the course taken sixty-five years ago by Maximilian and his group of military aides, as, badgered by the forces of Mexican Juarists, they retreated and finally took refuge at La Cruz. Scenes of the Hanging Gardens, the headquarters of Juarez at Paso del Norte, the fort at La Cruz, were secured from buildings which are still standing in those places, and through the aid of the Mexican government, film records were secured of the interior of the palace at Chapultepec where the royal couple lived.

The cast is headed by Medea Novara in the stellar role of Carlota, Conrad Nagel and Lionel Atwill.

On the same programme is an all laugh comedy "All American Chump" staring Stuart Erwin, Robert Armstrong and Betty Furness.

AT THE BELLE

"IT ALL CAME TRUE"

"It All Came True", Warner Bros. film version of the famous Louis Bramfield story, is now on the Belle Theatre screen with Ann Sheridan in the starring role, and Jeffrey Lynn, Humphrey Bogart and Zasu Pitts featured with her.

Louis Bromfield, author of such fine novels as, "The Rains Came" and others, now deals with the hopes and disappointments of a group of people living in a New York boarding house. With the intensity of plot and characterization typical of all Bromfield's stories, he shows how these people, content to live in the reveries of their past, are suddenly thrown into a turmoil, when a gangster uses the boarding house as a hideout. The mood and pace change smoothly from the fond old "Gay Nineties" to the disconcerting realities of the present. The songs are a good example of that. Ann Sheridan sings such favorites as "Mr. Dooley", "Oh, You Beautiful Doll" and "Pretty Baby" with the same distinctive quality that she sings the brand new rhumba, "Gaucho Serenade" and the sweet romantic ballad, "Angel in Disguise".

The popular Belle British Newsreel with the latest "Over There" war pictures and other world news events, and a clever comicolor cartoon, "Confederate Honey" will be exhibited on the same program.

BELIEVE GERMANY PLANNING NEW ATTACK ON NARVIK

Stockholm, May 17 (AP)—Indications that the Germans may be planning a new attack against Narvik in northern Norway were seen today in press reports of continued military activity in the Oslo district.

The correspondent of the Stockholm Tidnigen reported trucks, motorcycles and horses were being unloaded at Oslo and that a steady procession of military trains was heading northward.

Reports of fighting in the Narvik area, where Allied forces are besieging an isolated German force, indicated the Germans are losing ground.

A small German patrol was interned by the Swedes after it crossed the Swedish border.

The Norwegian high command, meantime, disclosed in a communique that Allied troops now are cooperating with Norwegian forces in the fighting near Mosjoen, some 180 miles south of Narvik.

The communique said the Allies withdrew at Finneid, 30 miles north of Mosjeon, in accordance with a prearranged plan of operations.

On the wrong side of the door is Humphrey Bogart. Jeffry Linn is the lucky chap on Ann Sheridan's side in the tuneful romantic comedy-drama, "It All Came True," at the Belle Theatre.

WHO demand the greatest Performance, Reliability, Comfort and Economy in a car or truck?

ANSWER:

Commercial firms operating large numbers of cars or trucks—popularly called Fleet Owners!

And what make do Canadian Fleet Owners buy in greater numbers than any other make?

FORD V-8s -by a sweeping margin!

Take a tip from the wise; buy a Ford Car for greater value!

Since 1936, when we started recording sales to large commercial firms, Canadian operators of fleets of cars and trucks have bought more Fords than any other make—by a substantial margin!

That isn't coincidence or "habit" buying. It's the wise judgement of business men who work their cars and trucks hard, pile up big mileages, insist on maximum comfort for their travellers and keep track of every penny's worth of maintenance—who buy Fords because Fords represent greater value!

Take a tip from the wise! Take a look at the Ford V-8 for '40. Drive it—feel how smoothly that quiet V-8 engine performs—experience the Ford's level, stabilized comfort-ride. Look into its remarkable economy—a DeLuxe Ford averaged 29.88 miles per Imperial gallon of gasoline in the 1940 Gilmore-Yosemite Economy Run!

Check all its modern features of convenience, comfort and style. Then ask the Ford-Mercury-Zephyr Dealer about the Ford's low price. Value? You'll say it's real value!

88,000 Canadian workers and dependants benefit because Ford Cars are made in this country. When you buy a Ford Car, more of your money stays in Canada.

Stan Luther, Montreal, Wins Decision Over Local Favorite In Main Wrestling Exhibition

Pedro Valdez Outweighed and Short-Reached Compared to the Winner

GOOD WRESTLING

Nibs Palmer of R.C.A.F. Takes Beamish and Sobul Earns Draw With McLachlan

Carrying too much weight for his somewhat lighter opponent, Stan Luther of Montreal won a rather unpopular decision over an old-time high-ranking favourite of the Belleville wrestling clientele, when he took the best two out of three falls from Pedro Valdez of Mexico as these two lads hooked up in the main attraction in the weekly wrestling card at the Hume Arena last evening.

Valdez demonstrated a world of speed in the first round and his agility stood him in good stead as he turned back-flips to get out of arm locks and wriggled out of head chancerys repeatedly to win the approval of the fans. The fans roared their delight about midway through the first canto when Luther in trying a flying tackle, missed his objective and went completely through the ropes to the floor of the Arena. Finally Valdez got a leg Nelson on his opponent and after throwing him around the mat several times pinned his shoulders to the mat to win the first fall in seventeen minutes of wrestling.

Starting the second round Luther took repeated head chancerys on his lighter opponent and proceeded to wear Valdez's resistance down. This hold eventually won for Luther the second fall as he again took a head lock on Valdez and pinned his shoulders at the 11.00 minute mark.

Favoured Head Lock

Coming out for the final fall on the evening's main card Luther again favoured the head lock which had served him in good stead in the preceding bout and although Pedro vainly strived to extricate himself from the punishing hold, the final fall came just after seven minutes of wrestling when Luther gained a reverse full Nelson to win the bout in two out of three falls.

The second preliminary bout on the evening's card brought together Jim Beamish of Toronto and "Nibs" Palmer of Montreal who is now with the R.C.A.F. at Trenton, with the Air Force lad winning the first and last falls in a best two out of three match. The two big lads indulged in considerable clowning and soon had the crowd calling for action but Beamish still continued to grandstand much to the ire of the fans. After 20.00 minutes of rather slow action however, Palmer took a head lock and tossed Beamish over his head to win the first fall.

Considerably more action was seen in the second round as the two big lads really went to work on each other's anatomy. The roughing tactics continued all through the round until Beamish took a body scissors to take the second fall in ten minutes of wrestling. Coming out for the final fall, the boys hardly got in the ring when Palmer took a head lock on Beamish and after flipping him over his shoulders several times pinned him to the mat in 1.45 minutes.

Sobul Earns Draw

The first preliminary bout brought Eddie Sobul of Hartford, Conn. back in a return engagement hooking up with Don McLachlan of the Trenton R.C.A.F., and after thirty minutes of torrid wrestling the boys were still struggling for an advantage with the bout ending in a draw. Sobul indulged in considerable clowning but never appeared in any danger as he considerably outweighed his opponent. The feature of the bout was when McLachlan tossed Sobul out of the ring with a flying mare and then climbed out between the ropes and tossed him back into the ring again. McLachlan's aggressiveness stood him in good stead and often wriggled out of punishing holds to take a temporary advantage over his heavier opponent.

BALTIMORE WINS OVER JERSEY CITY

Five Pitchers Used in Ten Frames to Subdue Little Giants 6-5

Baltimore Orioles' pitching corps may not be the best in the International Baseball League, but a lot of fans might be pleasantly surprised to learn just how good it is.

Today the flock is firmly established in third place and only one game behind the league-leading Jersey City Giants. A look at the records reveals the rather surprising fact that the flingers have had about as much to do with Baltimore's success as the sluggers.

In the last ten games, of which Baltimore has won six, the hurlers have given up 38 runs and have had 47 scored behind them. That has meant a working margin of only one run a game on the average, and it has required a lot of careful mound work to protect those slim leads.

Yesterday five Baltimore hurlers paraded to the box before the Orioles triumphed over Jersey City, 6-5, in ten innings, yet there wasn't a one that did a really bad job. The quintet held the league leaders to eight hits. Tom Neill and Johnny Dickshot hit for the circuit to account for all Jersey runs.

It took the Orioles until the eighth inning to catch up at a run or two at a time. They won out in the tenth on two errors by Lou Roggino, Jersey shortstop, and a single by Nick Etten.

Rain and cold weather caused the postponement of the Newark-Syracuse and Toronto-Rochester games while the Montreal-Buffalo contest was set back to make a Sunday double-header.

CURWEN, HOOD AND FROBISHER NOW FAVORED

Winter-Book Favorite for King's Plate, Dark Comet, Out With Bowed Tendon

TWELVE TO START

Track Will be on the Heavy Side Due to Rains of Past Week

Toronto, May 18 (CP).—A shrioll bugle note today called twelve horses, best of the Ontario-foaled three-year-old crop, to the post for the 81st running of the King's Plate.

The race, lacking a clear-cut favorite, was expected to develop into a battle among H. C. Hatch's Curwen, Jack McIntyre's Hood and the Parkwood Stable's Frobisher. The trio appeared the best of a mediocre field.

The winter-book favorite, G. M. Hendrie's Dark Comet, was declared yesterday a short time before entries closed for the nine furlongs for the King's 50 Guineas and a $7,500 added purse.

Dark Comet pulled up lame a week ago, but it had been hoped he would improve sufficiently to allow him to start. Later examination, however, showed that he had bowed a tendon in the left foreleg.

Th Hendrie Stable will not lack a representative, however. Hendrie called on Storm Light, a little regarded filly, to take Dark Comet's place. She started four times last year, but failed to win a race.

Other starters are J. E. Browde Seagram's Silvos, F. W. Marrill's Rose Mountain, Erindale Stable's Star Gaiety, Dave Garrity's Katie Bud, Harry Giddings' Ring Wise, and Miss M. A. Kane's Willie the Kid.

Champion Yanks Not Willing To Play Dead Any Longer Against Left Hand Hurling

Blast Edgar Smith of White Sox for 10 Hits and Win 6-1

Signals over! Lefthanded pitching isn't making the world champion New York Yankees lie down and play dead any longer, so the opposing managers in the American Baseball League had better scout out some new strategy quickly.

There was no question that just any kind of southpaw slinging would be fuddle the Yanks during the first month of the season. Of their first 20 games the champions faced lefthanded hurlers in 14 and lost 10 of them.

But things are different now. During the gloomy days the Yankees' batting order had five lefthanded hitters.

Yesterday there were only two and the club crushed the Chicago White Sox 6-1.

The triumph was New York's second straight and raised the Yanks within a half game of seventh place White Sox. Like their previous victory, yesterday's was at the expense of a southpaw, Edgar Smith.

Joe Di Maggio, who returned to action last week, opened with his first homer of the year for two runs in the first inning and in the fourth the team collected four more, two of them on a triple by Colonel (Buster) Mills.

In the day's only other game in the American League Cleveland Indians massacred the Washington Senators 18-14. They piled up 10 runs in the first inning on seven walks and five hits and added more as they went along, with Jeff Heath, the Fort William, Ont., hitting two homers.

The best pitching stunt yesterday was Claude Passeau holding New York Giants to two singles in giving the Chicago Cubs a 4-0 shutout. Passeau himself doubled two runs across.

A home run with the bases loaded in the 11th inning was Ival (Poison Ivy) Goodman's good deed for Cincinnati Reds and helped break up the game with the Phillies 7-2. Boom-boom Beck had the Reds helpless for seven innings, but in the eighth Frank McCormick hit a two-run homer to tie the score.

Brooklyn managed to edge out St. Louis Cardinals 4-3. Whit Wyatt held the Cards to seven hits, including a two-run homer by Don Padgett. Brooklyn got only six hits off three pitchers, but two of them were homers by Babe Phelps and Dolph Camilli for three runs.

NEWEST MEMBERS OF THE LEAFS

Fern Bell, LEFT, and Lester McCrabb, two of the newest members of the Toronto Baseball Club, made a successful debut in the home town as the Leafs split a double-header with Baltimore. Bell had three hits during the afternoon and McCrabb relieved Jim Walkup on the mound to avert a threatened Baltimore rally in the first game of the double-header.

WORMS TO SUIT FISHES' MOODS

Scientific Angler Uses Eugenics to Get Colorful Bait

CHEYENNE, Wyo., May 18 — (CP)—Sooner or later the angle-worm tossing kind of fishermen probably will pin a medal on R. K. Stewart.

Stewart is a worm fisherman himself and six years ago he set out to see if eugenics and scientific feeding possibly couldn't do something toward streamlining worms, or producing bigger and fatter worms or even changing their color to purple, white or pink. And now Mr. Stewart reports success.

Last summer he had purple, green, tan and copper colored worms crawling in a tiny plot of ground that produced the astonishing number of 25,000 wrigglers in one season. He had slim, graceful, wriggly worms, overflowing with life and nervous energy.

"It just goes to show what a scientific diet will do," says says Stewart. "When I first started out I discovered that oatmeal and bran were fine foods for growing big, fat worms. But they were too tender to be much good for angling. They couldn't stand the punishment. Then I figured out a scientific protein diet to mix with fattening food and my super-deluxe, wriggly, tough, appetizing worm is the result."

Stewart is now trying to cross two types of fish worms; one a very active, but small "jumping" variety and the other the better known earth worm, larger but sluggish.

TORONTO, May 18 —(CP) — Fourteen events, two more than in 1939, have been scheduled by the Ontario Golf Association for the 1940 season.

The Ontario Open will be held at Erie Downs, Fort Erie, Aug. 8-9, and the provincial amateur at Summit Golf and Country Club, Toronto, June 20-22. There will be three other championships— the Junior at Toronto Mississauga July 5, the Parent and Child at Toronto Lambton Aug. 30 and the Seniors at Brantford Sept. 18.

In addition, the province will have the Canadian Open at Toronto Mississauga, Sept. 2-6. The Dominion amateur is scheduled for Edmonton July 29-Aug. 3.

The program starts with the spring tournament at Waterloo County Golf and Country Club, Galt, June 1, and is carried along with invitation meets at Kingston Cataraqui, June 8; Weston, June 26; London Sunningdale, July 13; Oshawa, July 20; Peterborough Kawartha, Aug. 3; Toronto Cedar Brae, Aug. 21; and Dundas, Aug. 28. The fall tournament will be held at Hamilton Golf and Country Club, Ancaster, Sept. 14.

Club invitation tournaments are to be held at Erie Downs, June 28-30; London Hunt, June 12; Weston, Aug. 31; Burlington, Sept. 4; Toronto Islington, Sept. 7.

The northern Ontario championship will be staged at Sudbury Aug. 1-3 and the eastern Ontario at Kingston Cataraqui Aug. 5.

ANOTHER COAST STAR

The Pacific coast, prolific producer of great tennis players, has a new threat to the amateur tennis laurels vacated by Don Budge and currently held by Bobby Riggs. He is Ted Schroder, No. 1 singles player of the University of Southern California tennis team, who will start his eastern invasion in the U.S. national intercollegiate matches at Harvard, Penn.

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

The city neighborhood of firm softball loop, which operated at various points throughout the city last season, is seeking executive guidance and it has been proposed that the executive of the Belleville Softball League take this group under its wing, if only to provide the business and executive end. The independent softball teams provide recreation for young men and boys who are not proficient enough to play in the O.A.S.A. On Thursday night a delegation from this minor league presented their difficulties before President Ken Edgecombe. "We have six teams but are sadly lacking in the matter of direction and executive advisors," stated their spokesman. Actually the executive of the Belleville Softball Association should assume all such responsibilities and assist in the operation of all softball legues and groups seeking its assistance. The matter will be brought up at the final association meeting at the "Y" next Tuesday evening.

Primarily we wish to thank Kingston sports scribe Bill Walshe for his recent flowery words directed towards this corner in regards to baseball promotion in this district. However, Scribe Walshe continues to suggest that Kingston baseball interests turn towards the east and endeavour to affiliate their diamond activities in the Ottawa Valley district. From a Kingston standpoint he may be justified, but we happen to have information from a most reliable source which assures us that the Perth-Smith's Falls-et al combination do not want any part of Kingston in their baseball set-up. Kingston seems to be in the same position in baseball that Belleville junior hockey circles are confronted with—namely they are in between and neither the east or west is overanxious to include the Limestone City in a baseball grouping, with the exception of the Bay of Quinte League. The Belleville junior hockey team is not wanted in the east, nor along the Lake Shore area, which makes the local puck set-up about on a par with the Kingston senior baseball picture.

However, Kingston Scribe Kalshe might just as well abandon his "go east ball propaganda" campaign and accept the inevitable. At a meeting of the O.B.A. executive, some months ago, the E.O.B.A. (which includes the Ottawa Valley set-up) definitely assured the O.B.A. they did not want Kingston in their baseball picture, now or ever. The Kingston scribe errors when he suggests the O.B.A. merely wants Kingston back in the fold primarily for the entrance fee gained. Such a fee would amount to but a paltry $6.00 at the most, a figure that no doubt the O.B.A. could manage to function without. Unfortunately the Kingston scribe looks with disfavor upon sports in the Central Ontario zone, but when the time arrives when he finally appreciates the fact that Kingston is O.H.A. territory, then perhaps he will climb aboard the bandwagon and beat the drums in O.B.A. circles, which embraces the same territory as the O.H.A. boundaries are still adhered to in Canada, if not in Europe.

Minus his "red mask", Stan Luther, who was unmasked here last week by the "Masked Marvel" proved he can labor much better in the squared circle when his sight and breathing is not hampered by a heavy woollen hood. Luther beat the people's favourite, Pedro Valdez, the Mexican rubberman, who seems to have lost considerable of his acrobatic prowess of former seasons. But then Pedro is aging as Old Father Time shows no favourites, either inside or outside the wrestling ring. Actually Valdez spotted Luther about 30 pounds last night and the difference in weight doubtless took its customary toll, even though Valdez did manage to eke out initial fall in a three-fall bout. The bout was devoid of the usual rough antics. Two Air Force boys appeared on the card and proved apt exponents of the modern art of wrestling. 'Nibs' Palmer winning over the veteran Jim Beamish.

It has been frequently said that "good hitters never change the model of their bats." This was proven recently when Al Simmons, of the Philadelphia Athletics, visited a bat-manufacturing concern in Louisville. The former American League batting star swung and tested a number of bats and finally selected one that met his favour and fancy. "This is the bat I've been looking for, maybe I can get a hit now," remarked Simmons. The company salesman said nothing, merely smiling to himself because Simmons had picked the model of bat he had been using for years in the American League. The only difference was the fact there was no trade mark stamped on it as yet.

Do you remember when Southpaw Billy Weir, with Toronto Maple Leafs on option from Boston Bees of the National Baseball League, pitched himself back into consideration for a big-league job one year ago with the season's first no-hit, no-run game, beating Baltimore Orioles 8-0. It was the seventh victory in 23 starts for the last-place Leafs. Weir started the 1940 season on the roster of Boston Nationals.

SPORT SPICE — Don't look now, but the Yankees won a game yesterday and Joe DiMaggio slapped his first-round tripper ....Ival Goodman's circuit blow kept the Reds atop of the National League as, the 'Redlegs' scored five in the 11th to win 7-2 over the Phillies........ The maximum number of starters in today's 81st running of the King's Plate will be twelve with Harry Hatch's Curwen as a slight favourite......Dizzy Dean is going to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore for an arm treatment......Royal Mail, winner of the Grand National Steeplechase in 1937, died yesterday at the ripe old horse age of 11......Les Canadiens continue to bolster its roster, having obtained Jimmie O'Neill from Cleveland Barons yesterday...... They traded Bill Summerhill for "Peggy"......We hear the Corbyz A.C. will trot out at least four new faces next week versus the "Oilers" all from the sticks.

Coots and Queens Of Duck Family Can Dive Deeply

South Bay, May 16.—Just to what depth can ducks dive? This is what Point Traverse commercial fishermen are debating about.

Great numbers of non-edible ducks known as Coots and Queens or Old Wives, were found entangled in fishermen's herring nets from a depth of 125 feet of water.

It is believed by fishermen that these ducks known as divers, become entangled in their fishing gear when seeking feed off the bottom of the lake at that great depth.

One fisherman claims to have retrieved his nets from a 200-foot depth of water to find one of these Coots enmeshed in the web of his gear.

A two-pound silver or white bass was netted by a Point Traverse fisherman. These rarely-caught fish, also known by the frequent name of Oswego bass, seldom are taken from these waters. The fish measured 12 inches in length, is white with black markings and belongs to the perch family.

All fog alarms were placed into action as one of the thickest fogs of the month blanketed these waters, retarding all lake traffic as visibility was at a minimum.

Fishing craft were held at their quays during the day.

HOLLAND'S QUEEN CALM IN DANGER

London, May 17—(CP Cable) — A magnetic mine was dropped from a German plane within 40 yards of the British destroyer carrying Queen Wilhelmina to safety in Britain, it was learned today.

A British navy officer, who told the story, said "I have never seen a woman so completely calm in all my life."

The officer, who was in charge of a British destroyer flotilla assisting the Dutch authorities at the hook of Holland, described the Queen as walking unruffled and sedately down the jetty and asking to be taken to Flushing.

When the destroyer pulled away from the dock and started on its way to sea a German plane flew overhead and dropped a magnetic mine ahead. The destroyer swerved. The mine blew up with a terrific explosion when it hit the water but the ship was not damaged.

At sea the Queen decided to go to Britain because of danger on every side in her own country.

MAJOR SHOT HIMSELF

MARSHAL MUSSOLIN I STILL PONDERING

British and United States consular officials in Rome have warned their nationals to leave Italy as soon as possible as Il Duce still continues to teeter on the fence of belligerency. Frequent demonstrations against Britain and France, apparently with consent of the government, in the Italian capital lend strength to the belief that Mussolini will soon throw his lot in with Hitler. Il Duce is shown here, in the uniform of a marshal, with secretary-general of the Fascist party Mutti, LEFT, and Marshal Badoglio, RIGHT, during the Army Day celebrations in Rome on May 8.

The War This Week

(By Don Gilbert Canadian Press Cable Editor).

General Gamelin has ordered his troops to advance or die. From his headquarters in a small town east of Paris the Allied commander brought the 37th week of the war to a close with an order of the day in words similar to those used by Marshal Joffre on the eve of the battle of the Marne in 1914, when the German march on Paris was halted.

On the outcome of the stand now to be made by the French army, General Gamelin declared, depend "the fate of the Fatherland, that of our Allies, and the destiny of the world." The order came as German armored divisions smashed a path through the French Ardennes toward the heart of France after crossing Luxembourg and the southern tip of Belgium.

Brussels Engulfed

To the north, in Belgium, where the British expeditionary force is fighting with the Belgian army under King Leopold, the tide of German conquest engulfed Brussels, the capital, after the Allied forces, which had been holding Louvain and other points east of Brussels, effected a withdrawal to a line southwest of the capital in order not to be outflanked by the main German forces to the south which have hammered the deep bulge into the French line.

The first week of total war, with the Nazi regime staking everything on its powerful thrust through the Low Countries, saw the capitulation of The Netherlands, save for the small southwesternmost island province of Zeeland, where fighting was continued to help Allied defence of the Belgian city of Antwerp. Queen Wilhelmina and the Dutch government moved to London from where administration of Holland's overseas possessions will be carried on.

Britain Steeled For Air Raids

The German gains had widespread repercussions. Britain steeled herself for air raids and a possible invasion by parachute troops. Premier Mussolini, believing, according to all reports, that Germany will win, worked hard to whip up anti-Allied feeling. In the United States, the public experience a severe case of jitters as it realized that America is not so insulated from the rest of the world as was believed.

Switzerland was mobilized. The Balkans, too, rested uneasily as Germany massed armored divisions on the Hungarian border and Italy made bellicose gestures in the direction of Yugoslavia.

Glancing back 25 years: The Allies' spring offensive designd to liberate Lille and the surrounding country gained momentum in the week of May 12-18, 1915. The British and Belgians fought side by side in the Ypres sector and farther south the French gained ground in the Souches area.

A meeting between the tops in U.S., in international banking, and the tops in British diplomacy in the U.S., is one of more than passing interest. British Ambassador Lothian chats with J. P. # Former Director Of Medical Services In Great War, Dies

Wolfville, N.S., May 18—(CP) — Major General Gilbert L. Foster, who directed medical services for the Canadian Expeditionary Force in the First Great War died yesterday. He was 66.

General Foster began his career at the turn of the century as medical officer with Col. Sam Steele's army company in the Yukon. Later he became chief medical officer for the permanent Canadian force at Halifax and then at Toronto.

At the outbreak of the First Great War he went overseas as Assistant Director of the Medical Service of the C.E.F. with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel. A few months later he was promoted Colonel and became the senior medical officer of Canada's army in France.

In 1916 he was promoted Major-General and director of Canadian Medical Overseas Service Headquarters in London. His war services brought him mention in dispatches and he was made a Commander of the Bath by King George V.

After the war he was in charge of medical health services for the Canadian Army Medical Service at Ottawa. He retired in 1921.

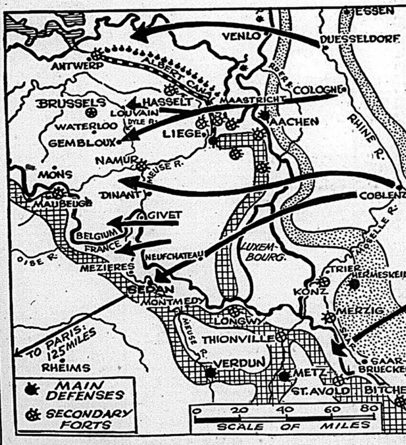
WHERE ALLIED AND NAZI FORCES MEET IN BATTLE



The ABOVE map shows the scene of the fierce battles which are raging in Belgium as Nazi legions launch thrusts at Allied defenders as indicated by the black arrows. The Nazi column in Holland is thrusting toward Antwerp as British troops hurled the Nazis out of Louvain after the Germans had reduced the city to a shambles by heavy artillery fire. The heavy Belgian forts at Liege are reported to be still resisting strongly and inflicting a terrific toll on the German forces. Nazis claim to have crossed the Meuse river between Namur and Sedan as French forces counter-attacked to drive them back.

May Ask Meighen To Return to House of Commons

Ottawa, May 18 (CP)—The Ottawa Evening Journal says it has a report from Parliament Hill of a "movement to bring Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, former Prime Minister, from the Senate to the House of Commons and place him in the post of Conservative house leader."

"Mr. Meighen," said the paper yesterday, "under this plan would resign his seat in the Senate (where he is Conservative leader) and secure election to the House of Commons, possibly in the vacant constituency of Carleton."

The paper added that Mr. Meighen's return to the Commons would not necessarily mean he had become leader of the Conservative party because only a national party convention can select a leader. But he would take over the duties of the opposition leader which Hon. R. B. Hanson (Cons. York-Sunbury) has accepted temporarily "with the probability that he (Meighen) would be chosen later as permanent party leader."

Canada Needs to Get Rid Of Pessimism Says Publisher

Rupert Davies, Pres. of Canadian Press, States Inertia and Pessimism Are the "Fifth Column" in Canada

DARK DAYS AHEAD

Hamilton, Ont., May 18—(CP)—W. Rupert Davies, publisher of the Kingston Whig Standard and the Peterborough Examiner and President of The Canadian Press, said in an address Friday that the fate of world civilization would be decided on the battlefields of Europe within the next two or three months. Aid to Great Britain must come swiftly, he said, for it would be "a sorry day" if the Allies were defeated.

Canada should have a three-month program in rushing its support, not a three-year program, Mr. Davies told the Ontario Women's Liberal Association dinner. The Federal Government should move quickly that the full effect of its help might be realized.

"I tremble when I stop to think of what might happen if Germany broke through France and Belgium," he said. "Germany would then attack Great Britain and what will happen to Canada when Great Britain has been bombed?"

There were dark days ahead; the Allies would take much punishment but they were not going to be defeated.

"We face brute force and it is hard to believe that such conditions can prevail 1940 years after the birth of the Prince of Peace. We face a wild beast of the jungle. While things look dark at the present time, the Nazis will be stopped and conquered too."

Second Stage in Americas

There would be a second stage of the war in North and South America if the Allies were defeated, for Germany desired world domination. The United States could do little to protect Canada because it would face danger from Japan and Russia.

Many persons believed that entrance of the United States into the war on the side of the Allies, would ensure Allied victory. The United States had a good name but only the nucleus of an army and air force.

Pessimism and inertia were a "fifth column" in Canada and were allies of Germany.

"We are fighting the German people, not Hitler," Mr. Davies added. "Ninety-eight per cent of the German people are behind him in everything he is doing. He has perfected a terrific mechanized machine in the last six years."

Mr. Davies did not anticipate Italy's entry into the war. He said that from his experiences in Italy during a visit last year, he was of the impression that Italians were not anxious to fight with Germany.

GERMAN BASES BOMBED DURING NIGHT

Number of Accidents In Area Below Average—Gardner

"Just because there happened to be a couple of small accidents in a short period of time, the cry goes up, 'cut down the speed limit' but generally speaking the number of accidents in this area is below average," Inspector Frank Gardner of District Headquarters No. 8, Ontario Provincial Police, told The Ontario-Intelligencer today after reports had been circulated to the effect that a reduced speed limit might be put into force along Highway No. 2 between Trenton and Belleville.

"We provide a nightly motor patrol along this area and increase it over the week ends. Besides the conventional motorcycle patrolmen we have one or two police cruisers supplementing the patrol work between Marysville and Brighton over the week-ends," added Inspector Gardner, as he denied any knowledge of a restricted area for the speed limit in this area.

News reports that the Department of Highways might cut the speed limit to 30 miles an hour between Trenton and Belleville had been reported in newspaper circles in other sections of the province where it was suggested a 24-hour patrol be inaugurated. "We have been carrying out a motor patrol for practically the entire 48 hours from early Saturday evening until early Monday morning," revealed Inspector Gardner today. However, it was further stated that motorists found exceeding the present speed limit in this area may hope for little consideration if apprehended.

University Women Of This District Elect Officers

Precious, retiring President, who had worked so untiringly in the interests of the new club in Belleville. Miss Farley voiced the feelings of the club in her glowing tribute to Mrs. Precious.

Of special interest was the letter read from the committee of international relations informing the members that Dr. Adamowich, International President of University Women, that being a native of Poland she was unable to leave her country to attend a meeting of officers in Buffalo in March. At that meeting the work for refugees occupied a place of first interest and definite plans were made to aid refugee university women of different war-torn countries.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 18 (CP)—Nervous holders continued to dump stocks today on the Toronto market and prices cracked to new lows for one to eight years. The mining and industrial indices were down 2 to 3 points at the close. Trade was heavy for a Saturday market at about 325,000 shares.

Several senior industrials, including preferred issues, declined many points and interlisted leaders posted losses of fractions. International Petroleum declined a point to 18, a new low. In steels declines of 1 to 2 points were netted by Algoma, Dominion Foundries, Page-Hersey, Steel of Canada and National Steel Car. Massey Harris pfd. weakened 2 points and Walker's common slipped 2 to 34.

New lows spotted Golds and a few sold at half the prices they commanded three months ago. Powell Rouyn dropped 17c to 95, MacLeod-Cockshutt weakened 15 to 1.35 and losses of 5 to 10c were netted by Preston, San Antonio, Hard Rock, Uchi, Central Patricia, East Malartic, Teck Hughes, Macassa and Wright-Hargreaves. Sigma lost 30c and Lamaque 15.

Base Metal shares were uniformly lower. The Seniors, Smelters, Nickel, Noranda and Hudson Bay losing fractions and the cheaper issues 5 to 15 cents.

Sudbury Basin, Ventures, Pend Oreille, Steep Rock and Falconbridge showed losses up to 15c and Sherritt lost 3 to close around 65.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 18 (AP)—Stocks tumbled to new lows for more than two years in today's brief market as war fears persisted in Wall Street. Pivotal issues were down 1 to more than 4 points at the worst. At the close extreme losses were reduced in most cases. Transfers for the two hours were around 1,500,000 shares.

Canadian issues were easy. McIntyre slumped more than a point while Canadian Pacific, Hiram Walker Distillers and Lake Shore Mines dipped fractions. Canada Jrs, among bond, were stationary.

U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, and Republic Steel regained their equilibrium in the final half-hour. United Aircraft got up a point or so. Contesting the trend also were Great Northern, U. S. Rubber, Caterpillar Tractor, Glenn Martin, Sperry and Curtiss-Wright.

Importation of American Pork Curtailed

When the Bacon Board established a price for bacon clearing seaboard on the week ending January 20, 1940, prices paid for hogs were slightly strengthened and remained so throughout the months of February and March. During this period the marketing of Canadian hogs was much heavier than was anticipated and importations of United States product during January and February reached a total of 23,850,000 pounds.

Canadian packers were curing for current weekly shipments of export product, such quantities as would enable the Board to maintain the average minimum of 5,600,000 pounds. Early in the year the Bacon Board on the best advices obtainable from many quarters had assurances that Britain would need quantailed, by the action of the Canamounts as stated in the agreement and, although during the month of February it co-operated with the wish of the British Ministry to curtail shipments such restriction was felt to be only temporary. During this period storage stocks for summer shipment were accumulated thus supporting the hog market by absorbing a heavy percentage of weekly marketings on on export price level. The importation and substitution of American pork for Canadian permitted only a limited distribution of Canadian hogs in the domestic market.

On February 26 the importation of American pork was greatly curtailed, by the action o fthe Canadian government. A bank of product, however had been created and with continued heavy marketings in Canada storage stocks accumulated more quickly and in heavier volume than was the original intention of the Board. The unknown factor that is the stumbling block to the Bacon Board is the number of hogs that the Canadian farmer is going to market. On this one factor the policies of importation, exportation and storage could be definitely established.

Some good lots of hogs marketed out of the Belleville district during the week of May 17th, 1940, are as follows:

Egg Prices Rise Slightly at Toronto

Toronto, May 18—Prices varied but little on the Toronto open produce market during this week. Eggs improved a shade and butter ended unchanged.

Renewed activity in export trade and more inquiry for storage packed lots imparted a firmer tone to the egg market this week. Operations in breaking plants also helped the market, but this may be only temporary, it was pointed out. Although production is running heavier than last year, the increased shipments overseas appear to be absorbing any surplus receipts. The market closed steady yesterday, with government imported eggs commanding ½ cent per dozen premium.

Caution remained the keynote of buyers in the course of the week's trading on the butter market. Prices held up well in spite of the generally quiet demand as sellers were inclined to hold supplies rather than reduce quotations. Friday, buying picked up and the first grade Ontario creamery solids closed at 22¾c per pound.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, May 18—Produce market prices as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Butter— First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 24c to 24¾c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 23½c to 24¼c.

GANGSTER AMBITIONS

Ipswich, England—(CP)—Reformatory for three years was the sentence on four boys calling themselves the "Dead End Kids" who stole bicycles for money to go to America as "real gangsters."

SITUATION SERIOUS

Morale of the Allied troops is very high, he said, and they were indignant at the withdrawals for which they could see no apparent reason.

Warning against German tactics designed to shake the morale of the soldiers and civilians behind the lines, he said a "fifth column" was working differently in France and Belgium than in the Netherlands.

Rumor-mongers, he said, start reports among refugees—such as that the Germans were coming through on the right or left—and thus cause confusion, doubt and mistrust among troops holding the front.

Reported Fanning Out

German mechanized forces, which have penetrated the Allied lines in the vicinity of Charleroi, some 30 miles south of Brussels, were reported to be fanning out, threatening encirclement of British right flank.

Although the situation was confused by the high speed of the action and the widespread use of roving mechanized units on both sides, the new Allied position in the north appeared about as follows:

The left flank of the British forces rests on the west coast of Holland, near the Belgian border. The line extends southeast in front of Antwerp, west of Brussels and then almost due south to the French border near Maubeuge.

From Maubeuge the front follows an irregular line southeast to Rethel about 100 miles from Paris, and then sharply east toward Longwy.

General Giraud In Command.

He said General Giraud, commanding the Allied forces in the "battle of the bulge", is a man of ability and forceful personality who has a great reputation both in France and Britain for a distinguished military career.

The War Office emphatically denied claims in a German communique asserting that the British lines had collapsed.

While the general headquarters issued a reassuring communique saying the British expeditionary forces carried out "successful operations" yesterday the press did not attempt to hide its anxiety over the western front situation and warned the public that reverses should be expected in a battle of such staggering proportions as that being waged in Belgium.

British commentators unreservedly called this the "darkest hour since the spring of 1918" when the German big push came close to crushing the Allies in the first great war.

The German blitzkrieg which started May 10 has taken the Nazis into virtually all of The Netherlands and Luxembourg and about half of Belgium. Today it was trying to strike at the heart of France.

Dutch troops made a last-ditch stand on the left bank of the River Scheldt after abandoning the Islands of Beverland and Walcheren in Zeeland Province which fronts the North Sea.

Destroyed Everything

Before leaving, however, the Dutch soldiers methodically destroyed everything of military and naval importance, including the efficient harbor and dockyard facilities of the port of Flushing and its great gasoline stores.

The Air Ministry brought cheer to Britain with an announcement that careful study had convinced it that the enemy had lost more than 1,000 airplanes since the invasion of the Low Countries and that Royal Air Force bombers had effectively raided western Germany. The announcement specified that the estimate of losses did not consider those suffered in Poland during the early days of the war, nor those in Denmark and Norway during the Scandinavian campaign.

In an intensified drive against enemies in their own country British authorities placed increased military guards on duty around public buildings, erected barbed-wire barricades about some and arrested numerous suspicious persons.

Among the arrested were three men dressed as clergymen, caught photographing aircraft, a German "geologist" who had detailed maps and eight British Fascists.

The withdrawal in Belgium was said in informer circles to have been ordered to frustrate a German attempt to catch the British forces now operating on the northern flank of the Belgian front in a pincer movement.

OVER 2,500 TANKS HURLED BY NAZIS

Less powerful German thrusts in the Sedan area, to the southeast, and against the fortified position of Montmedy—the northern end of the Maginot line proper—were stopped dead.

Vast Allied Strategic Move

In Northern Belgium, the Allies made what was described here as a "vast strategic movement," evacuating the Dyle River line and taking a stand on a line west of Brussels.

The Germans then were able to occupy Louvain and Malines and enter Brussels, evacuated by Belgian authorities.

The military spokesman said the withdrawal "was carried out without having been particularly hampered by the Germans and in conformity with the general strategic plan of the Allied high command, which remains absolute master of its decisions."

While the battle continued in Northern France the French war cabinet met at the foreign ministry under Premier Reynaud. Previously the Premier had conferred with Defence Minister Edouard Daladier, Marshal Henri Petain, the French ambassador to Spain, Colonial Minister Cesar Campinchi, Air Minister Laurent Eynac and Blockade Minister Georges Monnet.

Premier Reynaud will make a broadcast to the nation at 7 p.m. (2 p.m. E.D.T.)

Foe Tries to Crack French Line

The military situation this morning was described here as follows:

The Germans are now attempting an effort which they hope will be decisive. Following their well-known tactics they are trying again to crack the French line with a powerful punch.

In an effort to make a breach at any cost in the region south of the Sambre they hurled forward more than half of their tanks, which attacked in close range.

All day yesterday the German high command threw forward successive waves in two main directions: the Hirson-Avesnes area and the Vervins zone.

In the Hirson-Avesnes region the German Panzerdivisionen, operating across a region dotted with small woods, made slight progress. At some points French troops, now used to tank assaults, counter-attacked and carried off local successes.

In the Vervins region, slightly hilly farm country, the Germans unleashed an even stronger push. The fighting was extremely tough and was going on at the same pace this morning.

French Tanks Wait for Enemy

The German motorized columns made some progress but they ran into a line drawn up by the French command, where French tanks were waiting for them.

New French reinforcements continued to pour into the line.

The advance of the German columns was made extremely difficult by French artillery—far superior in number to that the Germans have been able to bring up. The defending guns in some cases were able to fire point-blank at the tanks.

But above all the Nazi columns were harassed and decimated by Allied aircraft.

French and British planes, concentrated in huge numbers above the triangle formed by Sedan, Rethel, Vervins and Avenes, day and night dropped thousands of tons of bombs, while their machine-gunners turned their weapons on all bridges, railways, fords, roads and crossroads used by the enemy.

Wave upon wave of Allied bombers attacked columns on the march or deploying for the attack.

Chasers tackled German bombers accompanying the ground forces.

To the south, the less powerful attacks in the Sedan area were all halted after hard fighting. In the Montmedy area the Nazis made no progress. There was nothing to report along the whole Maginot Line from Montmedy to the Swiss border.

This morning's high command communique contained no details of the fighting, but indicated that the French had been able through the night to confine the area of battle to the Avenes-Vervins-Rethel-Sedan bulg into France's fortified border region—where runs the advance Maginot positions.

The announcement said that "the battle continues with the same violence in the regions already mentioned in last night's communique."

Enemy Columns Bombed.

The high command said an Allied withdrawal in Belgium westward from Brussels was ordered to "suit the general situation" and added this footnote on the war in the skies:

"During the night our aviation violently bombed columns on the march and points the enemy was obliged to pass."

Unexplained cannonading — presumably anti-aircraft fire — was heard this morning on the outskirts of Paris. It ceased after a few shots.

In do-or-die sorties the French forces lashed out against all Germany sent—and Germany sent tons of steel and bullets, clouds of bombing, strafing airplanes, great fleets of the most powerful and fastest tanks and shock troops.

One Hundred Miles from Paris

France and her Allies faced the Germans between 35 and 40 miles inside the French frontier, within about 100 miles of Paris.

In the wooded ravines and on the open fields of a sector bounded by the towns of Avenes, Vervins, Rethel and Sedan, the battle roared at such a pitch that the French high command, usually precise, called it a "veritable melee."

The Germans strove to fork out from the pocket they dug on the Meuse River front. They sought to capture main highways leading into the heart of France.

Spurred by the order of General Maurice-Gustave Gamelin, Allied commander-in-chief to "conquer or die," the French sought to close in by land and air. Allied warplanes bombed incessantly at the Nazis who advanced away from their supply bases.

80-Ten Land Battleships Used

The newspaper L'Epoque declared that the spearhead of German mechanized attacks was an 80-ton "land battleship" with armor that resisted guns of smaller calibre than the French "75" field pieces.

These giants, said the newspaper, clattered ahead of whippet tanks and armored cars.

The German assault north of the Sedan salient continued, meanwhile, against the British and Belgians defending Brussels.

GREECE TO TRAIN

Informed military observers said the most of the class would be sent to the wild, mountainous border of Italian-occupied Albania, to bolster the already large number of troops manning fortifications against any possible Italian thrusts.

Conferences of Ambassadors.

At the same time Premier John Metaxas of Greece held long conferences with the Yugoslav and Rumanian ambassadors, it was reported from Athens.

The Yugoslav envoy, Alexander Vukecvic, sounded out Metaxas last Tuesday on what assistance Yugoslavia could expect from Greece in the event of an Italian attack.

Greece, Rumania, Yugoslavia and Turkey, are partners in the Balkan entente.

(Possibly connected with the Balkan manoeuvring was the report of a Stockholm newspaper, the Tidningen, under a Moscow date line, of rumors in the Soviet capital that Russia has made representations to Berlin in the interests of preserving Yugoslav neutrality.

(The rumor lacked official confirmation but it said a Yugoslav representative paid a visit yesterday to the Moscow foreign commissariat.

(Thereafter, it was reported, the Kremlin dispatched its note to Berlin. It was even rumored that a second note went to Germany but what it concerned was a mystery.)

CONSERVATIVES PROMISE SUPPORT

Hon. R. B. Hanson Pledged Co-operation of His Party in War Effort

Ottawa, May 18—(CP) — Rallying to the common cause in the war emergency, the official Conservative opposition in the House of Commons has pledged its support to the government in any measure or action the administration deems necessary to meet the serious situation in Europe.

At yesterday's session of the House, with members increasingly conscious of the heavy responsibilities of wartime and aware of German advances in France, Hon. R. B. Hanson, temporary Conservative House Leader, tendered the pledge of co-operation to Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Before adjourning for the week-end, the House heard Hugues Lapointe (Lib. Lotbiniere) and James Sinclair (Lib. Vancouver North) move and second the address in reply to the speech from the throne in which they appealed to the Government and Parliament to speed up the war effort and also provide for post-war problems.

The address debate starts Monday with Mr. Hanson as the first speaker, to be followed by Mr. King.

The Prime Minister will work through the week-end preparing his Monday Commons speech when he is expected to outline the Government's war program and inform the House of the trend of events.

Immediately after the House rose yesterday the war committee of the cabinet met for a four-hour conference. They heard a report from Defence Minister Rogers about the European military situation, gathered during his trip overseas.

MILLIONS IN GOLD AND DIAMONDS TAKEN TO SAFETY

British Officer Taken to Holland by Special Destroyer to Perform Special Duty—Vast Treasure Safely Removed to London

CONSTANTLY BOMBED

By J. F. Sanderson
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 18—(CP Cable) — Millions of pounds worth of gold, foreign securities and diamonds were transferred from Holland to Britain before the country fell into German hands, it became known today.

A young officer of one of the Guards Regiment was sent from Britain in a destroyer to bring back Dutch-owned foreign securities which had been collected. Despite constant bombing by the German air force, spies on every hand and parachutists landing everywhere he succeeded in leaving Ymuiden with millions of pounds in securities.

A Dutch diamond merchant, who had reached one of the coastal ports, volunteered to return to Amsterdam, where most of the world's diamonds are cut. he also succeeded in his mission, arriving in this country with his luggage bulging with diamonds.

The British navy provided the Dutch authorities with ships for the removal of their gold and it is now in vaults in this country.

TROOPS STOPPED

The crowd, composed mostly of soldiers, started their raids at the old Metropole Hotel, a Regina landmark. Windows and furnishings were smashed. The march led to the Regina hotel where the crowd, after smashing windows of the beer parlor and barber shop, were dissuaded by police from entering the building.

A chain of police and detectives frustrated an attempt to raid a drug store. Windows of the Western Printing Association Limited, 100 yards from the city police station, were smashed and the offices were wrecked.

Large New Nazi Tanks, In 3 Divisions, Were Used Against French Near Sedan

Hitler's Hordes Strike Not at Maginot Defences but at Extension of the Line

FRONT NOT WIDE

Waves of Bombers Led Followed by Heavy Tanks and Infantry — French Holding Well in Area

By Sam Robertson

London, May 18 — (CP Cable — In their break through in their Sedan area of France, the German armored divisions used new tanks, larger and more heavily armed than those that rolled through Poland.

A British military source which revealed this estimated that the Nazis used three armored divisions, each having about 400 tanks, in cracking the French defences and pushing into Northern France.

It emphasized that Hitler's hordes did not strike at the Maginot defences but rather at the extension of the line, which is considerably weaker than the main fortifications. The French defenders were described as "surprised by the direction and weight of the blow."

The Germans came through the defence lines on not a very wide, but still considerable, front.

In advance of the column of steel and fire that penetrated into France were waves of dive bombers, raking everything before them. They were followed by heavy tanks and then infantry. Some parachutists also floated to earth behind the French lines.

Sallying after the first unexpected blow, the French forces are said to be holding well in the Sedan area. However, the German main column has separated into smaller "columns of destruction" and the situation elsewhere is fluid with details not yet known.

BELGIAN CAPITAL

North Sea port of Ostend, where the Belgian government has established itself.

Built by the Gallo-Romans centuries ago on islands in the vast marshes of the Senne, the city's name, literally translated, means "Village of the Marshes."

Brussels is famed for its beautiful buildings and its university.

Besides being a centre of culture, Brussels, with a population of 2,250,000, has been a thriving shipping centre for exorts of silver plate, glass, iron, marble, sugar and coal.

It is the eighth capital into which German troops have marched in recent years — Vienna, Austria; Prague, Czecho-Slovakia; Warsaw, Poland; Copenhagen, Denmark; Oslo, Norway; Luxembourg, Duchy of Luxembourg; The Netherlands, Brussels.

son, Walter, and the latter's wife for several minutes before Walter and his wife left for Kamsack. Konkin then went into the house and soon afterward the father and Nick Makaeff, livery man who drove Konkin to the place, heard two shots.

Rushing into the house, Chickmoroff told police he found Konkin in the living room. When Chickmoroff attempted to disarm him, Konkin is alleged to have said, "Stay where you are or I'll kill you."

Chickmoroff said Konkin told him he had killed the girl. He then shot himself through the head.

Only witness of the killing of the girl was nine-year Connie Shutskoff, Una's niece. The child was too hysterical to give a coherent story.

water.

Following is the text of the statement issued by the Air Ministry:

"Nine Hurricane fighters shot down ten German Junkers-87 dive bombers in one engagement over France yesterday (Friday.)

"Twenty enemy bombers were seen circling over a wood. The leading section of Hurricanes dived to the attack, while the other two remained above on guard. When they saw that no escort protected the German bombers they, too, came down to join the fight.

"The squadron leader, who in peacetime was a crack shot, led the first section. He selected his quarry and at once sent him down in flames. Immediately he swung on to the second and sent that crashing into the ground.

"'The Germans,' he reported, 'appeared to be somewhat taken by surprise.'

"By now the engagement was general. German bombers were swooping to within 30 feet of the ground in their frantic efforts to avoid the British fighters.

"Four Hurricane pilots accounted for one enemy each. Three jointly finished off another, bringing the total to seven.

Sent Down in Smoke

"Then the patrol turned to two others, tore the fuselage off one and sent the other down in a column of black smoke.

"Finally the squadron leader another Junker 87 beneath him, dived, put in a long burst and saw the enemy break up as it crashed to the ground.

"The German bombers were utterly routed and the Hurricanes withdrew. One pilot had a bullet through his sleeve, which did not touch his arm, and this was the nearest approach to a British casualty.

"All the Hurricanes returned to their airdrome to refuel and rearm. Then they took off immediately to resume their patrol.

"Another section of three Hurricanes operating over Belgium yesterday attacked a formation of more than 20 dive bombers. One which was sent down crashed through the side of a house and burst into flames. The rear gunner of another was silenced.

Smashed to Smithereens

"Early yesterday morning Spitfires patrolling off the Dutch coast saw a Junker-88. This is Germany's latest type twin-engine dive bomber.

"When attacked the enemy dived from 14,000 feet to 30 feet at 400 miles an hour in a vain attempt to shake off the Spitfire pilot who was idling down behind him in a leisurely glide.

"But when the Junkergall pulled out the Spitfire settled him squarely in his sights and fired two bursts from his eight guns. With both engines disabled the German bomber struck a breakwater at 200 miles an hour and was smashed to smithereens."

ANTWERP ENTERED BY NAZI TROOPS BERLIN CLAIMS

Belgian Port is 28 Miles North of Brussels—Communique Also States 29 Civilians Killed by Allied Air Raids

FIGHTS SOUTH OF SEDAN

Berlin, May 18 —(CP)— The German News Agency claimed today that German forces have entered Antwerp, the Belgian port 28 miles north of Brussels.

(This claim was not confirmed from Allied sources. The Belgian Army's noon communique said enemy attacks had been repulsed in Antwerp Province but did not mention the city.)

The High Command's regular communique claimed that Allied aircraft had attacked Hamburg and Bremen, operating against "non-military objectives." Then, indicating Germany will use this claim as a pretext for reprisals, High Command said it "notes this because of the consequences which will follow."

In this connection the German News Agency, Nazi propaganda outlet, claimed that 29 civilians were killed and 51 injured in the alleged raid on Hamburg.

The communique, with its daily assortment on unsubstantiated claims, follows:—

"The cleaning up of the Zeeland Islands made rapid progress. Only in the south of Walcheren Island, at Flushing, is there still fighting. The Dutch commander offered to surrender.

"On the Islands of Schouwen and Beveland we captured more than 2,000 Dutch and French prisoners. Dutch naval units found in the ports were taken, as well as Dutch coastal batteries.

"In northern Belgium we succeeded in penetrating the outer fortifications at Antwerp at two points. As was announced in a special communique yesterday, Malines and Louvain were taken after hard fights.

Brussels Surrenders.

"Brussels was surrendered to our troops by the Burgomaster without any fighting. The enemy, retreating from the Dyle position, is being pursued. South of Maubeuge, German armored units pierced the fortifications on the French frontier, destroying two enemy divisions, and pursued the enemy across the upper Sambre southward as far as the upper Oise.

"Infantry divisions are following by rapid marches. Many prisoners and much material from destroyed French units were taken.

"We have also conquered territory south of Sedan.

"Both in Belgium and France the air arm principally attacked the liaisons at the rear and troops engaged with many marching columns Under the weight of these attacks the enemy fled at several points.

"During reconnaissance operations on the Dutch coast we sank an enemy destroyer.

"In the Narvik region we fought enemy landings and hit a heavy cruiser and a big transport with a large bomb.

"The enemy lost 108 planes during the day. Of these planes, 53 were shot down in air combats, 11 by anti-aircraft guns, and the rest were destroyed on the ground.

"Twenty-six German planes are missing. The enemy air attacks were directed against various cities on the north coast of Germany.

"These attacks were directed in particular against Hamburg and Bremen and western Germany. As in the past, with the exception of one barracks, they attacked exclusively non-military objectives.

The Stars Say

For Sunday, May 19

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds testimonies of a very interesting and perhaps eventful day, with much pertaining to conventional Sabbath activities under high pressure. New matters pertinent to church and clerical plans are due to succeed despite firm opposition from elders and superiors, as well as group impediments. Perseverance and sound plans win the day, but keep firm control on tongue and temper.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a very lively and enter- r, with the energies and faculties under high tension. New projects of an ambitious nature should move resolutely toward progress and stability in spite of determined opposition and obstacles. Initiative and industry win out. In purely personal relations there may be much festivity and probably romance.

A child born on this day may be energetic, aggressive and ambitious ready to work hard for its objectives and to vanquish stubborn obstacles and possible hostility from high places. It may win popularity and good fortune.

For Monday, May 20

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is a conflicting one, with happy and propitious auguries for all of a personal nature—social, domestic, artistic and affectional. These hold major attention. In other directions, affiliations with groups or influential personages, there may be an open clash or secret undermining. Unless the aims are for public or social benefits, there may be defeat. Seek feminine assistance and develop their plans and ideals.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a very happy and successful year in their private life—social, artistic, domestic and romantic. In other activities there may be lack of co-operation from those in power unless such are animated by lofty feminine ideals and constructive ends. Clubs, groups, fraternities offer opposition unless the aim is lofty and humanitarian.

A child born on this day may have many social graces and talents, possibly devoted to human welfare.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

Sondra felt a pang of regret for the loss of the contentment Kemp's companionship had once brought her. As he knelt before her, his brown eyes were wells of light in his lean blond face. She was conscious of his masculine nearness; of the intimacy of the little cabin with rain beating outside and water lapping the hull. She thought of the way he carried out her every wish, how he made her feel his love and protection everywhere they went together.

Yet, blotting out the reality of Kemp so close, came a sharp vision of Jean Reynall as he had looked just after heading off the Tanya. The assured insolence of his stance on deck. His black hair blowing above his amused eyes. The mockery and power in the curve of his smile. "Confound him!" she surprised herself by speaking aloud. "Kemp! I'm sorry," she cried in quick contrition. I wasn't thinking of you. I—"

"But I want you to think of me, Sondra. None else. Oh, don't change, darling. Don't let me lose you," he went on with passionate eagerness. "A man must have someone in his life who's clean and fine and honest, Sondra. You're that one, for me. You're more than that. You are beauty and happiness. You are home. You're—you're even love of country, Sondra. You are—everything." He pressed her hand hungrily against his cheek. "Without you, there'd be nothing left in life for me. I mean that, Sondra. I mean it."

The sudden leveling of his suave reserve had let her glimpse something infinitely lost and lonely in him. It seemed almost as if he were clinging to her, making her responsible for him in some way. She was profoundly moved, but it was a poignant compassion that stirred her. She placed one hand on his bowed, tawny head. "I haven't changed, Kemp. I'm fond of you. I—"

"I want more than that." He lifted his taut face. "I want you to love me. To marry me. Now, today, darling. We can go up to the Commissioner's, and then—then I'll have the right to take care of you. I'll settle this Reynall row for you in—"

"Kemp, I've told you before how it is. I couldn't bear to marry anyone who—who would take me away from Sitka, from Echo House."

"But I won't take you away, Sondra. At the end of this season my job here will be finished. I'll have all the money I need, too. I like it here away from the turmoil of civilization, I love it, darling, just as you do, and—"

"Miss Sondra!" Hardtack's bawling voice was raised outside. "The fleet's coming in from the fishing grounds!"

Sondra was grateful for the interruption. "Kemp, dear," she said hastily, "I must really get back to the house. I've got to tell Dynamite about that contract, you know."

He came to his feet with a hopeless gesture, then placed his hands on her shoulders. "That's always the way, isn't it? Something always barges in before we get anything settled. But—think about it, won't you, darling?" His hands dropped lingeringly, and he turned to reach for his slicker. "As for that contract, my real opinion is—"

"Kemp!" she sprang up and caught his arm. "I've just remembered something. You know, when I came out of the library last night, shoving that contract down inside my sweater—I was dressed to go out on the Tanya—I thought I heard—or maybe I sort of saw it out of the tail of my eye—someone near the stairway in the reception room. Do you suppose—but no. Even though he—"

"Suppose what, darling?" He was suddenly interested.

"Well, maybe the safe-blower didn't have time to look for what he wanted, before I barged in on him. Maybe he waited and came back after the guests had gone, to see if he could have a second try. Maybe he saw me put that contract inside my sweater, and—"

"Be more explicit, Sondra. Tell me exactly what you saw."

"That's the trouble—I don't know. It was all so vague. And when I looked up, there was no one there. Oh, do you think it could have been Jean Reynall? And later on the fishing grounds, could he have planned to throw the Baltic's stern wave against the Tanya, to make me fall overboard? And take the contract from me while pretending to rescue me? I felt his arms go around me down there under the water and—But, no. I can't believe he'd do a thing like that. Kemp, do you — what do you think about it?"

He stood as if considering the question. Then his eyes, meeting her pleading gaze, grew very tender. "No," he answered generously. "I don't like the fellow, but I'm pretty sure he wouldn't do such a thing. That heavy paper must have softened and torn loose while you were in the water. If saturated, it might not have buoyancy enough to come to the surface."

"But—" Sondra began dubiously.

"Stop worrying your sweet head about it, darling. No doubt it's slowly settling to the bottom of the Pacific right now. If so, it's safe from Reynall. Come, now, I'll take you home. I must get back to the plant before the boats begin unloading their fish."

Far from satisfied with Kemp's theory, Sondra got into her oilskins. When she and Kemp reached Echo House, they found Dynamite with his herring records spread out on the table before him. He looked up cheerfully.

"I've figured out about where that school will re-form under these weather conditions, Starbuck," he said, putting down his pencil. "'Tis either Salisbury Sound or Shelikoff Bay. I'll send Chris to scout tonight before the other boats go out. They're comin' in now, pretty as a picture, one behind the other in the rain.

"They're riding pretty high, sir. Made light hauls, I'm afraid. Confound those whales."

"Don't worry, me boy. One day never made a herring season. Now, Sondy, be after fetchin' me the Bates contract. I'm minded to put it in a place where our burglar will not find it, should he call again."

Sondra made a clean breast of the whole affair then, not omitting her suspicion of a presence in the reception room when she was secreting the documents, or the possibility that Jean Reynall might have secured it from her while disentangling her from the net when she fell overboard. "But neither I nor Kemp really think he would use such methods, Dynamite. We really don't."

She expected her grandfather would go into one of his tantrums; but he heard her in silence that was more ominous than his loudest roar. By the look of his narrowed eyes and jutting jaw, she knew he did believe that Reynall had obtained the document. The silence grew uncomfortable.

Heavy feet sounded in the hall and Chris, without knocking, burst into the room. "Read that!" he shouted, shoving a paper at O'Moore.

The Captain jammed his glasses on his nose and began to read, mumbling phrases aloud. . . . "O'Moore Seiners, Incorporated . . . Sondra O'Moore, owner . . . Captain Daniel O'Moore . . . Um-m-m . . . those certain motor vessels . . . hereby enjoined — By Jupiter, Starbuck!" He looked up fiercely. "Reynall's been to the Commissioner. This is an injunction against our unloading fish at any plant but his during the next three weeks, pending a hearing and decision of the court!"

Kemp spun about, and looked questioningly at the scowling Chris.

"Right," snapped Chris. "The Commissioner sent word he's sorry, but he couldn't avoid issuing the injunction on the strength of the evidence."

"What evidence?" barked the captain.

"That confounded Bates contract."

"Arrgh!" snarled O'Moore, glancing from Sondra to Kemp. "Now what do ye think of the methods of Captain Jean Reynall?"

Kemp stepped forward, frowning. "This is serious, sir. I can't wait three weeks for your catch. The troops in China want fish, and they want them now. There's a penalty clause in our army contract, and—"

"But what can we do?" Chris's face was working as if he were about to burst into tears. "If it comes to a hearing, any court is bound to hold we must deliver to Reynall for the next three weeks. If it doesn't come to a hearing, we're stopped from delivering to anyone else during that time." He flung up both hands and took a quick turn up and down the room. "In one case we're licked. In the other we lose."

The captain was sitting very still, his bushy white brow drawn together in an eagle look of concentration. When he spoke, it was calmly, thoughtfully. "Look, now. Suppose we admit the validity of that bloody Bates contract. Suppose we offer our fish to Reynall and he's unable to take 'em because—well, because he's just had a bit of hard luck with his plant?" He paused significantly.

"By gar!" Chris's face lighted hopefully. "Then we could deliver them to Starbuck, or whoever could take 'em!"

"Eggs-actly." The captain screwed one eye shut and twisted his pursed lips in a wry smile. During a moment's silence a volley of wind-driven rain hit the windows. Chris cocked a listening ear. "A nor'-easter blowing up strong, Cap'n," he said, with seeming irrelevance. "And tonight's the highest tide of the month. . . . Wouldn't it be awful, now, if that floating cannery of Reynall's should slip her moorings and go aground tonight. Yes, it would. She'd be stuck, careened over on her beam for thirty days until the big tide. . . . Thirty days. And unable to can a fish or take a delivery." He fixed an innocent, bland look on Captain O'Moore, who stared back at him, saying nothing.

The atmosphere grew tense.

Finally the Captain shook his head. "No, Chris. 'Tis the Glory, remember. I wouldn't take chances on anything happening to the Glory. We'll have to think up something else. Go down now, lad, to the boats. Have the men pack their fish in ice for twenty-four hours. Then come back, and we'll scheme a bit."

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

As darkness deepened, the storm increased. Sondra following her custom, turned on the cupola light before she went up to her room. Although she had not slept the night before, she lay awake in her ivory-and-gold bed, a victim of her troubled thoughts.

Liane had sent word that she wouldn't be back. Her mother needed her, and would Sondra please pack her things and send them over.

Sondra wondered about that as she lay tossing. Affection for her mother was something new in Liane. . . . Was her sudden thoughtfulness a result of her visit to Miss Jacqueline? Or had Jean. . . . To break this line of thought she sprang out of bed and went to the window. Outside, the gray, wind-torn world was emerging in the leaden light that precedes the dawn. It had stopped raining, but the wind came shrieking down off the wooded mountains, battering at the window, trampling trees in the garden, and roaring on to tear the bay into a smother of flying spume. The highest tide of the month was creaming almost on a level with the string-pieces of the shadowy wharves.

The O'Moore trawlers, to escape the full force of the blow, had moved up to join Kemp's smaller vessels on the anchorage above the American Packers' float.

The Baltic was riding to a slipline on the sheltered side of the Bates dock. No lights were showing. No one was visible anywhere on the gray waterfront. Reynall must have returned sometime ago, because his quarters aboard the Glory showed no illumination, either. Naturally—since it was past three in the morning. But — were her eyes playing her tricks again, or was the Glory no longer moored across the face of the wharf? . . . and that strip of water showing between the hull and the piling . . . it looked as if it was widening . . .

She suddenly threw up the window and leaned out into the wind to see better. A low cry broke from her. The Glory was free of her moorings—and moving. With everyone aboard her asleep. Unguided, helpless in the dual grip of wind and tide, the old ship was drifting down and across the channel toward that maze of rocks and islands where the breakers were beating white and high.

Sondra's first impulse was to rouse her grandfather and acquaint him with the Glory's danger. But even as she wheeled toward the door, a disquieting memory halted her. Only a few hours ago Chris Sandvik had said, "Tonight . . . the highest tide of the month . . . wouldn't it be awful now if that floating cannery should slip her moorings and go aground . . ." True, her grandfather had vetoed Chris's suggestion at the time. But maybe, later . . .

She went back to the window.

During her brief absence someone had turned on the Glory's cargo lights, making the deck bright as day. She saw Reynall dart out, naked to the waist, black hair blowing. He shaded his eyes with a hand or an instant's appraisal of his ship's position; then leaped to the scuttle that led down to the crew's quarters. Faintly on the wind came his shout :"A-a-ll hands on deck! Lively, men!" The old ship's bell set up a clangor of alarm. Men boiled up out of the scuttle. Light flashed on board the Baltic; and through hand-cupped mouth, Reynall shouted something to Shady Lane, whose huge shoulders blocked the lighted doorway of the tug's wheelhouse.

"Sondy! Sondy!" A stentorian bellow from her grandfather's bedroom drew Sondra on the run. She found the captain sitting up in bed straining an ear toward the window. "What the devil's busted loose on the waterfront, gurl?"

"It's the Glory, Dynamite. She's gone adrift, and—"

"Adrift in this wind and tide?" He flung off his quilt. "Where's me robe? Me crutches? Here, Sondy! Help me swing this damned cast over the side of the bed. Help me get to that window."

The girl and the old shipmaster leaned from the high open window into the gray dawn.

They looked down, as from a box at the theatre, on the lighted length of the Glory. Broadside and helpless in the narrow channel, she was driving swiftly toward the tide-covered sandspit that jutted out from Stag Islet, directly across from Echo House.

The Baltic, which should already have been speeding to the old ship's aid, still sputtered impotently at the wharf. "Engine trouble! That does cook Reynall's goose." The captain's rasping tones held more of contempt for Reynall than concern for the plight of his old command. "His tug can never get out there now in time to save the Glory from strandin' on the spit."

"Oh - h - h!" moaned Sondra. "Couldn't they stop her by dropping the anchor?"

"No chance. Droppin' the hook there would only swing her heel instead of her head onto the bloody spit. 'Twould but make matters worse, as even Reynall must know."

"Then he can't—nothing can save her from grounding?"

"It might be done—but not by that lily-fingered yachtsman! Look now—the ship's stern is still over deep water, her head swingin' round to strike the spit. A real sailorman would leave a drag over to windward from 'midships, and carry a line from that to the bow. Then, as the tide sets the old girl down channel, he could haul her head up—but, that brass-bound imbecile hasn't sense enough to—hah! Now, what's he . . . well, by the horn-billed jeezwax!"

Men, under Reynall's direction, had hoisted some heavy object to the midship rail and toppled it over, raising a mighty splash.

"A drag!" chortled the captain. He was heart and soul the seaman again, concerned only that his old ship should be kept from stranding. "He's made a drag from his hatch covers! Just what I was tellin' ye, Sondy. See — they're haulin' her head up now to clear the spit." He raised his voice. "That's well, me hearties! Smartly, now—check the swing of her stern! Mm-m-m. Not bad—for a yachtsman . . . Sondy, fly and fetch me night glasses from the sittin' room. Lively, darlin'!"

Sondra brought the glasses and thrust them into his impatient fingers. "Is the Glory—"

"Aye, she's clear of the spit now. She's settin' in toward the outer point of Echo Islet, just below our banya." He turned the glasses on the old ship, drifting stern-first down channel on the racing ebb. Reynall's half-dressed crew flashed about their work in orderly haste. Reynall himself seemed to be everywhere at once — directing, aiding, animating them all with his vital strength and energy. Sondra, momentarily forgetting all else, followed him with her eyes and her heart.

"She'll pass safe by Outer Point," broke in the captain's practical voice. "Then, with room to swing her, he can drop the hook and wait for—oh, the eddy!" He dropped the glasses and turned to Sondra a face suddenly grey with consternation. "The eddy that sets square across channel from Outer Point! Once that grips the Glory's stern, she'll go lurchin' across as if the divil had his towline fast to her keel. And there—" his voice cracked as he lifted a hand to point— "there's where she'll land. On Spearhead Rocks!"

Through the gray light, Sondra could see the semicircle of spume that marked those sunken rocks. "That mustn't happen! It mustn't!" Sondra thought passionately.

Beside her, the captain leaned far out and lifted his voice in a mighty roar of command. "Aboard the Glory! Mind the eddy off Outer Point! Break out your jib, and stand by to club-haul when her stern swings off!"

On board the Glory not a head lifted. Not even the famed O'Moore bellow could carry across a quarter-mile of screaming wind and pounding sea.

"They can't hear you, lamb. But look! Those men up forward are unrolling something — canvas, I think—"

A groan from the captain cut her off. "The eddy has caught her now! It's drivin' her straight for the rocks and she helpless—no spars, no yards, no sails."

"Oh, can't we do something? Get out our boats—"

"No time, Sondy. There's but one chance now for the Glory, and that only if the man on her bridge were a true master of sail." He banged a fist impotently against the window sill. "Steamin' shoals! Why can't I be down there on her now to—ha!" He broke off, tensely watching, as men erupted in a fever of activity over the Glory's forecastle head. "Those lads there on the bow." . . . Aye, by the good saints, 'tis a jib they have! . . . That's the ticket, bullies!" His voice boomed out approvingly, while the full force of the wind stood his silver thatch on end. "Rig that jib and spin her round! Lively, men!"

Sondra's eyes followed Reynall, but with a swift vision of the boy he used to be. That eager, dark playmate of hers, manoeuvring a toy ship on the tide pool below the old stone causeway, and dreaming of the day when he would have a real command. . . . Tenderness for the boy, compassion for the man, swept her. He was splendid and gallant . . . and pitiful tonight, fighting against odds to save his ship.

Her grandfather's sudden passionately profane plea to heaven told her the fight had reached some crisis. From the Glory's bow came the ringing whink, whink, whink of metal striking metal. An anchor dropped with a tremendous splash, but no rumble of chain. The jib sail crawling up the forestay filled with a crashing report and, while the Glory's stern held as if nailed to the spot, her head swung sharply off before the wind.

"Smartly done, by thunder!" roared the captain. His tone told Sondra that Reynall must have performed some miracle of seamanship.

"By the horn-billed jeezwax," the captain was bellowing delightedly, "that's one trick ye never learned in your navigation school, me boy! Now, do ye be holdin' her bow up with the jib whilst ye ease her ahead a bit, ladeen."

His commands, which no one but Sondra could hear, came more quietly now, as if he knew his expert advice would be anticipated by Reynall, even if unheard. And to Sondra's amazement this was so. As her grandfather ordered and gestured, Reynall on the Glory invariably made similar gestures which sent his men running to carry out the commands.

The manoeuvring ended with the Glory riding to her stern anchor just inside the semicircle of the Spearheads. "Phew!" The captain expelled a gusty breath. "She's that close a boy could spit from her starboard rail to the nearest rock. But 'tis the best he can do. I could do no more, meself. Barring williwaws, she'll hold safe there until his tug—ah, 'tis comin' now!"

The Baltic was rushing past below, her blunt bow battering spray from the choppy seas. Sondra watched the gap shorten between the tug and the Glory her hands clenched in a tense mental effort to hold off the williwaws—the "wind devils" of the Thlingets—until the Baltic could get a line on the helpless ship.

Two men on the Glory made one end of a hawser fast while the Baltic, rounding to off the port rail, took the hawser's other end. Then Reynall's arm went up in a quick circling motion, and the Baltic roared as she threw the full power of her engines against the rigid towline. The Glory, with a rush and a mighty explosion of spray, plunged into deep water and was rolling heavily.

Faint above the howl of the cheated elements came the triumphant tooting of the Baltic's whistle, the exultant yells of the Glory's crew. Sondra was dancing up and down in a delirium of joy. But the captain, once he saw the Glory afloat, turned slowly from the window and sank into a chair. "She's safe," he said softly. "Aye, safe she is."

Then, as if stating a fact accomplished but utterly incredible, he added, "And may I be an unwashed Eskimo, if it wasn't a Reynall who pulled the trick that saved her!"

BRIDGE STREET W.M.S.

At a well represented meeting on Wednesday evening, Miss Clazie, of Tokio gave an illustrated address, sponsored by the W.M.S. of Bridge Street Church.

In describing life and conditions in Japan, Miss Clazie said that new laws, much more favourable to Christianity are being passed and that people are looking more and more to Christian people instead of Communists to supply their needs. She told of the grief of Christian Japanese over the slaughter of Chinese and of their willingness to co-operate for the stability of Eastern Asia.

Japan is a country of huge cities and great industries. They are a literate nation with an excellent system of education, patterned after the United States system. Their navy, she said, was patterned after that of England, and their army—Germany. Tremendous strides are being made in introducing social legislation such as health insurance, employment bureaus, old age pensions, etc. Through the force of public opinion licensed prostitution and intemperance are on the decrease. The manufacture of ale, for instance, has been reduced to half, thus conserving the rice supply.

Right now, in Japan, the whole strength of the Christian Church is being mobilized in an aggressive four year evangelistic campaign.

A number of very fine slides were shown. These gave a glimpse of a great nation, striving for power and greatness—even as the rest of the world is striving. They showed beautiful gardens, happy children, in schools and kindergartens, with very efficient teachers. These pictures gave a very happy impression of Japan where dominated by the Christian people.

The appreciation of the audience was expressed by Mrs. Osborne and Mrs. Ross. Miss Lazelle Brown presided and the music was in charge of Miss B. Handley and Alec Gordon assisted by Miss Leona Riggs, Mrs. Bird and Miss Doris Houston.

NAZI'S 50-TON MONSTERS ROUTED IN GIGANTIC TANK BATTLE

Surpassing in ferocity and terror anything which might be imagined was the terrific battle which took place May 13th when an estimated 2,000 tanks—land battleships—met in head-on conflict in the heart of Belgium. French officers who took part in the gigantic battle, between St. Trond and Tirlemont in the Liege area—said the roar of the metal monsters, the cavalry of modern war, could be heard for miles, and the dust rose high in the Belgian sunlight. Rushing at high speed to halt the mechanized German advance. French tanks such as these won a decisive victory over the tanks which had rolled through Poland, leaving the field dotted with overturned and burning Nazi behemoths.

Many Could be Saved

Some striking statistics are to be found in a brochure written by George Hoadley, former Alberta Minister of Health.

He draws attention to the heavy mortality rate among Canadian children. He compares the total of 60,000 young Canadians who were killed or died of wounds in the four years of the Great War with the total of 70,000 Canadian babies under one year of age who died in a similar four-year period between 1931 and 1935.

The claim is made, and apparently on excellent ground, that a large proportion of these young lives could have been saved if more practical attention had been paid to the various phases of public health conservation and protection. Mr. Hoadley points out that of the $193,000,000 spent in Canada in 1931 in fees to doctors, nurses, dentists and hospitals, in drugs, in Government grants to hospitals, plus public health and sanitation, and industry and philanthropy only six per cent. was spent on public health and sanitation, or, in other words, on prevention. He describes this as a shortsighted policy.

On an average, according to his records, Canada is losing 54 children under five years every day, 42 children under one year every day, three mothers every day and 24 children who live less than 24 hours every day.—Calgary Herald.

(By J. F. Sanderson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 20—(CP-Cable)—"Holes are being plugged," it was stated here today, while the German advances in the Sedan area showed a tendency to slacken.

"The situation today is undoubtedly pretty grim," it was stated by a military spokesman. "There is no use pretending that geographically it is any better, but morally I think it is.

"The bulge in the French line has been widened slightly but it has not been driven much deeper. The general direction of the German movement now is northwest."

In Belgium, he said, every time the Germans attacked the British Expeditionary Force "they got a bloody nose."

"There has never been a dent in the British lines in this long sector and the withdrawal has been dictated by strategy, not necessity," it was added.

The French 75s, firing over open sights, have been "extraordinarily effective," against the big German tanks. Thousands of these famous guns which when operated by a Weather prophecy! An individual would prosper enormously if he could foretell the weather one year in advance. And if such information were broadcast the farmers would be benefited and other activities would gain in efficiency. But at present rather shorter forecasts, for only 5 to 10 days, are attempted. Even this work is proceeding slowly. It takes a long time to unlock the secrets of nature. The best forecasts are those for 24 to 48 hours issued by various weather organizations. At many places these forecasts are available to the public by simply calling the right number on the telephone.

SUB COMMITTEE STUDIES PROBLEM

Members Will Consider Whole Situation of War-time Wheat-Marketing

Ottawa, May 20 —(CP)— A sub-committee of the Dominion Cabinet, headed by Trade Minister MacKinnon and concerned with wheat, meets today with members of the Dominion Wheat Board to consider the whole situation of war-time wheat-marketing. It was learned that important decisions might be made that would affect Dominion wheat marketing for the duration of the war.

Already wheat has been pegged at Winnipeg at Friday's closing levels of 70 3-8 cents for May, 71 3-8 for July and 73 5-8 for October future and it was believed consideration might be given at today's meeting to stopping trading in futures on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

The peg was placed in the market following Friday's 10-cent plunge in the wake of a week of easing prices and United States markets followed a similar course, using Saturday's close as the peg-mark.

The fixed price went into effect on the Winnipeg market at the request of the Dominion Government and here it was said the peg would remain pending a review of the situation.

(By Alex De Holstein Havas Staff Writer.)

Paris, May 20—(CP)—A War Ministry spokesman said today that the Germans are in parts of St. Quentin but added that see-saw fighting leaves the fate of the city—80 miles northeast of Paris—in doubt.

The situation there is confused, the spokesman said, with charges and counter - charges between French and German columns of tanks.

"Fighting was particularly heavy in the western suburbs of St. Quentin yesterday," he added.

The French also faced an enemy "push" north of St. Quentin. Military advices said an extreme advance German motorcycle squad reached Peronne—15 miles northwest of St. Quentin—yesterday but withdrew at nightfall to avoid being cut off.

The spokesman reported other German columns attacking heavily east of Cambrai, which is 25 miles north of St. Quentin.

More Than 100,000 Persons Killed In Rotterdam by Nazi Bombers

Systematic Destruction is Carried Out, Dutch Communique Charges

HUGE BOMBS DROPPED

Paris, May 20 (AP). — German bombers killed more than 100,000 persons in systematic bombing of Rotterdam in the Nazi conquest of the Netherlands, the Netherlands Legation charged in a communique.

To subdue the port city's citizens, the legation said in its statement issued last night, "German aviation began a systematic destruction of the city of Rotterdam.

"More than one third of the city was demolished by two bombing squadrons which flew over the city in thick formation with wing tips almost touching in a straight line.

"From a height of 1,500 metres (about 4,900 feet) they dropped with great regularity bombs weighing more than 1,000 kilograms (about 2,200 pounds) each, tracing veritable paths of destruction and returning to the place where they started to attack the next strip of land.

"The number of those killed in this operation of monstrous destruction, as horrifying as a nightmare and absolutely without precedent, must certainly be more than 100,000, the population of Rotterdam being 500,000 and the area of devastation representing about a third of the city."

7 CALIFORNIANS KILLED IN QUAKE

100 Also Injured in Tremblor That Shook Imperial Valley on Saturday Night

El Centro, Calif., May 20—(AP)—Seven persons were killed, more than 100 injured and property damage estimated by El Centro police, at $2,000,000 or more was caused by a sharp earthquake that shook the entire Imperial Valley of California Saturday night.

Buildings were demolished, streets and highways ripped open, water systems destroyed, and a portion of one block of business establishments in the border town of Mexicali gutted by a fire that followed the shock.

Six cities in the rich agricultural area bore the brunt of damage of the first heavy earth shock that crumpled walls of scores of buildings. There were scores of after shocks, continuing hours after the first at 8.36 p.m. (12.36 a.m. E.D.T.) Brawley, Imperial, El Centro, Holtville, Calexico and Mexicali all suffered severe damage.

Holtville and Imperial today were without water supply.

Britain Deprives All Aliens Of Right to Possess Firearms

London, May 20—(CP)—Great Britain today deprived all aliens of the right to possess firearms—a further precaution against any "fifth column" of German sympathizers behind the home front.

The Home Office issued the order "prohibiting aliens from possessing firearms, ammuniton or explosives without a special permit from police." Only air rifles and air pistols were excepted.

The order applies to aliens of all nationalities in the United Kingdom. They must surrender such possessions to the police immediately.

ELECTRICAL STORM CUTS WIDE PATH ACROSS ONTARIO

Death and Destruction Left in Wake of Violent Storm

TORONTO HIT HARD

Toronto, May 20—(CP)—Death and destruction were left today in the wake of a short but violent electrical storm that cut a wide path across Central Ontario. The storm, one of the worst in years, caused property damage estimated at hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The death of a youthful pilot and a female companion in a plane crash near St. Catharines, Ont., was attributed to the storm, which swept out of the west and whipped its way across the province with a 60-mile-an-hour fury, lifting buildings as if they were paper houses.

The two killed in the crash—the second fatal one in three days in the province, were Lawrence Phelan, 20-year-old pilot and Goldie Staples, 22, whose two-seater monoplane plunged into a Grantham township orchard during the height of the storm. Both died later in hospital at St. Catharines.

Toronto appeared to have suffered most from the storm but no injuries were reported there, though buildings were wrecked and trees uprooted and tossed through the air.

Rome, May 20—(AP) — Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano is arranging to go to Albania—Italy's Balkan outpost — tomorrow as a sequel to his advice to Italians yesterday to be ready for a call from Premier Mussolini to gain the nation's aspirations.

Count Ciano, it was said, intends to inspect public works projects now under way in Albania which Italy occupied starting April 7, 1939, but his trip is bound to be watched closely because of Italy's military foothold there in the Balkan peninsula between Yugoslavia and Greece.

Italian schools were ordered to close May 31, a fortnight earlier than had been intended but still there were no definite signs of imminent Italian entry into the war.

Rumors that a mass meeting has been called for an important announcement by Mussolini were dispelled when authoritative quar-

Lindbergh Called 'Ignorant', 'Blind' If He Believes His Own Words

New York Times Assails Views Broadcast by Col. Lindbergh

U.S. PAPERS OUTSPOKEN

New York, May 20 (CP).—Summing up an editorial on Colonel Charles Lindbergh's broadcast speech last night, the New York Times said today:

"Colonel Lindbergh remains a great flier."

Lindbergh advised the American people to "stop this silly chatter of calamity and invasion that has been running rife these last few days".

"The 'silly chatter' is the talk that the democracies of France and Great Britain stand in imminent danger of defeat by Germany," the Times said.

"Colonel Lindbergh is a peculiar young man if he can contemplate this possibility in any other light than as a calamity for the American people," the editorial added. "He is an ignorant youn man if he trusts his own premise that it makes no difference to us whether we are deprived of the historic defence of British sea power in the Atlantic Ocean. He is a blind youn man if he really believes that we can live on terms of equal peace and happiness 'regardless of which side wins this war' in Europe."

It Would Not Be Easy.

The Herald Tribune said Lindbergh is still confident that "we could continue to mind our business" if Hitler won, and the paper's editorial added: "But unless we were willing to shut our gates, censor our press to Hitler's demand and conform our foreign policy to Nazi requirements, it would not be easy."

"A world in which France and Britain had gone down to defeat under the Nazi war machine would be so totally different from anything any of us has ever known that it is still difficult to wrap the mind around the possibility," the Herald-Tribune said. "But it is time for Americans to do so, as clearly as they can."

Premature Evacuation of Towns Forbidden by French Government

Paris, May 20 (CP-Havas).—Premier Reynaud's office today issued a special communique warning the population to be on guard against "German manoeuvres, which by the propagation of false reports attempt to provoke disorganization of the industrial centres of the country which are threatened by no danger."

The communique warned that if need be the government will take severe measures against any individual moves relating to premature evacuation of towns and cities.

The civil and military authorities, it stressed, are the only ones qualified to take measures for evacuation.

British-Belgian Force Massing in Valenciennes Region to Assist in Pincer Movement to Sew Up Pocket Caused by Nazi Bulge in Line

ARMORED CARS MASSED

German Westward Drive Almost an Invite for Counter-Offensive French Military Observers Declare

Basel, Switzerland, May 20 (AP).—General Maxime Weygand, the new Allied commander, apparently is shaping a powerful pincers counter-offensive from the Valenciennes and Rethel areas, it was reported here today.

Reports reaching Switzerland indicate that a powerful British-Belgian force, supported by French motorized units, is massing in the Valenciennes region and still more powerful French concentrations are assembling at Reims and Rethel, behind the Aisne River.

Valenciennes is just across the Belgian frontier in France along the northern flank of the Allies' western front. Rethel is on the south side of the German "bulge" into northern France.

Attempt to Sew Up Nazi Pocket.

General Weygand, who succeeded General Gamelin yesterday as the Allied commander in chief, is said to envisage a counter thrust from these two sides aimed at sewing up the German pocket, which has reached a point about 80 miles north east of Paris.

Such a manoeuvre would re-establish the French along the Ardennes through Mons to Ghent.

Heavy French concentrations south of Rethel were reported to include large tank and armored car divisions and to be ready to move

Churchill Quotes Words of Maccabeus 'Arm Yourselves'

London, May 20—(CP)—A pre-reformation Biblical quotation was used by Prime Minister Churchill yesterday in closing his broadcast address with an appeal to "arm yourselves" and "be in readiness for the conflict."

The quotation refers to preparations of his people by Judas MacAbeus for battle against the mighty armies of King Antiochus which came out of Syria. It is further related that Antiochus' armies were routed.

Mr. Churchill used these words in giving the quotation:

"Arm yourselves and be ye men of valor, and be in readiness for the conflict, for it is better for us to perish in battle than to look upon the outrage of our nation and our altars. As the will of God is in Heaven, even so let Him do."

SWEDEN REFUSES TROOP TRANSIT ACROSS COUNTRY

Germany Will Not be Able to Lift Siege of Narvik by Crossing Sweden

SURRENDER IMMINENT

Stockhalm, May 20 (CP).—Usually well informed circles declared themselves convinced today Sweden had made plain to Germany that she could not permit transit of Nazi troops and supplies across this nation to help lift the Allied siege against German-held Narvik, Norwegian ore port.

Authoritative quarters, however, denied rumors that formal demands for transit facilities had been received.

The rumors coincided with reports indicating that surrender of the small German force at Narvik was imminent and that only by quick reinforcements could Germany now hope to prevent defeat there.

The Conservative newspaper Nya Dagligt Allehanda reprinted an article from the Berlin Boersen Zeitung which, like the entire German press, gave Sweden "friendly" advice to strengthen its defences against a possible British attack on the Kiruna iron mines.

Two calls, both for chimney fires were answered by the Belleville Fire Department on Saturday afternoon. No damage was reported in either case.

THREE THOUSAND CHEESE SHIPPED

Making her first trip eastward under her new ownership, the package freighter, "Glen Allan," stopped at the Belleville harbor enroute to Montreal on Sunday and this morning dock hands were busily engaged in wheeling aboard some three thousand cheese from the local dock warehouse. The "Glen Allan" is now owned by Mr. W. R. McCreary, local cheese buyer and transport owner, having taken over the boat when she docked in Trenton at the end of her westward run last Saturday.

The only other boat to arrive at the Government Dock over the weekend was an oil tanker out of Sarnia with a load of gasoline.

LIGHTED FIRECRACKER TOSSED INTO HOME

Mischievous lads tossed a lighted firecracker into the home of Mrs. John Ricket, 220 Coleman Street, Saturday evening. The cracker exploded in the hallway of the house. The lighted firecracker had been injected through the mail slot of the front door of the home, dropping to the floor inside, where it exploded. Fortunately Mrs. Rickett was at home and heard the noise as a more serious result, even fire, might have been the ultimate outcome had the house been vacant at the time. Police are endeavouring to ascertain the identity of the youth responsible.

BOY ON BICYCLE COLLIDES WITH CAR

Thirteen-year old Douglas Lovering, 236 1-2 Front Street, sustained painful facial lacerations as the result of a collision with a motor car at the intersection of Octavia and Catherine Streets, yesterday afternoon. Young Lovering was taken to the Belleville General Hospital by F. Hitchon, 138 West Bridge St., the driver of the automobile with which Lovering collided with his bicycle. Dr. R. M. Anderson attended the youth.

Mr. Hitchon told police authorities that young Lovering was riding his bicycle and was turning from Octavia Street onto Catherine, when his bike struck the front of the west bound motor car. Superficial facial lacerations were the only injuries sustained it was learned following an X-ray today.

The St. Michael's School Band will furnish part of the musical program.

Fisherman Recovers Practically New Net

South Bay, May 20 — Several pounds of net, belonging to a Point Traverse fisherman, carried away by floe ice during last Spring's break-up, has been recovered by the owner.

The net was found on Gull Bar, a tiny, gravel sea-holm, near the False Duck Island, by the lighthouse keeper of that station.

Carried by favorable winds, the net was cast upon the small bar in an undamaged condition, and it was a valuable recovery to the owner as the net was new.

Wild Geese

While tending their nets far out in the lake, Point Traverse fishermen reported that several flocks of Canada wild geese, comprised of great numbers of birds, were winging their way skyward in a northerly direction, presumably for small northern lakes.

Duck Fishemen

Main Duck island fishermen also report the netting of large numbers of non-edible ducks in their fishing gear

The ducks become entangled in their nets while feeding off the bottom of the lake in more than one hundred feet of water.

3 lb. 2 oz. Speckled Trout is Caught Near Salmon Lake

At least some fishing records went by the board over the week-end, according to local sportsmen who filtered back into the city last night and today after a week-end in the lakes and streams of the northern part of he district.

Topping the week-end catch was a three-pound two-ounce red speckled trout caught by a fisherman who desires to remain anonymous, in a lake said to be in the vicinity of Salmon Lake. A few days previous the same fisherman added to his "luck" when he hauled a three-pound brown trout from the waters of the Mississippi river near McArthur's Mills.

Grey trout generally, refused to rise to the lures of other Izaak Waltons, who patrolled the waters of variolus lakes. Small catches were reported by the majority of fishermen although a haul of eight one and two-pounders were taken from Lake L'Amable.

Another Church Street fisherman brought home seven brook trout that averaged ten inches in length from Bird's Creek.

DOYLE'S DRUG STORE

Small Boy Steals Purse and Then Treats His Friends

Determined to enjoy himself at the expense of others and entering a life of crime at an early age, a nine-year-old boy of this city stole a lady's purse on Saturday night, rifled the monetary contents and threw the handbag into the Moira River.

Constables Ellis and Arnott took stock of the situation when the matter was reported to the police and proceeded directly to the carnival lot, where the Sim Shows were playing on the Cricket Field, and there they found their quarry in possession of a long strip of tickets and "treating" his youthful friends to a general good time on the rides and at the show places.

All of the cash taken was recovered on the lad's person, except 86c, which had been spent. The boy told the police he had placed a stone in the lady's purse and then tossed it into the Moira River.

Woman Attempts To Set Fire At Police Station

Setting fire to the bed clothing in the women's cell block at the police station last night, an unidentified woman inmate caused considerable excitement. Apprehended on a charge of disturbing the peace, a woman was taken into custody last evening by P.C. Evans, but upon arrival at the police station she refused to divulge her name or identity.

As Sergeant Arthur Booth was searching the woman's purse, she quickly snatched a small piece of paper and placing it in her mouth, swallowed it. After being placed in the woman's cell the inmate threatened to set fire to the premises. The authorities paid little attention at first, having searched her purse and finding no matches. Sergeant Booth later kept a sharp lookout and ultimately smelled an odor of smoke. Rushing into the woman's cell the Sergeant found the woman had set fire to a woollen blanket, which was smouldering on the bed. The blanket was quickly extinguished with the aid of a pail of water, the police doing their own fire-fighting in a most successful manner, although the blanket was destroyed.

Police withheld the name of the woman, who today was charged with intoxication in police court, which was held in camera before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C. Later it was revealed that a fine of ten dollars and costs were assessed, plus an additional $10.00 to cover costs of the damage resulting to the property in the women's cell block during the fire.

Wes. Adams Appointed Supervisor of Garden Plots For Reliefees

Supervision of the one hundred and 50 city garden plots which will be cultivated by reliefees during the coming summer, will be conducted by Mr. Wesley Adams, Mayor Glen E. Thompson announced today.

Plowing of the lots has been started and is proceeding satisfactorily, but actual tilling and preparations for planting will not take place until better weather conditions set in. Free potatoes, seeds and implements will be issued to the reliefees in the near future and will be given out on a date to be specified. All reliefees will receive their seeds and garden utensils at the same time.

Large areas of city property such as that near the Gillen property on Pine Street, where approximately 25 lots will be available, a property on the bay front opposite Albert College which will provide 15 lots, and others, will be divided into garden plots measuring twenty by one hundred feet. Single lots distributed throughout the city will be worked by one man, if the areas are not too large.

Working of the garden plots is compulsory, Mayor Thompson said, not through any action of the city, but in conformance with instructions issued by the Ontario Department of Welfare. All produce raised by the workers becomes their own property.

Reliefees, the Chief Magistrate stated, will at all times be under the jurisdiction of Inspector Adams regarding the work and planting of the garden plots.

U.S. NEED NOT FEAR INVASION SAYS LINDBERGH

Only Through Meddling With Foreign Affairs Abroad Will the Country Become Involved, He Claims

URGES DEFINITE POLICY

Washington, May 20—(AP)—The United States need not fear invasion, in the opinion of Colonel Charles Lindbergh, "unless the American people bring it on through their own quarreling and meddling with affairs aboard."

Declaring that "a definite policy of defence" is the first necessity, the aviator called in a radio broadcast last night for an end to "hysterical chatter of calamity and invasion."

"We are in danger of war today," he said, "not because European people have attempted to interfere with the internal affairs of America, but because American people have attempted to interfere with the internal affairs of Europe."

Lindbergh, an army corps reserve officer, asserted that the United States needs "a greater air force, a greater army and a greater navy," but added:—

"Until we have decided upon a definite policy of defence, the mere construction of large numbers of aircraft will not be adequate for our national safety."

For defence of the nation alone, he continued, the United States would need "large numbers of small bombers and pursuit planes" but this "eventually would leave us as vulnerable to air attack as the nations of Europe are today."

For defence of the western hemisphere, he said the United States would need "longe range bombers capable of attacking a hostile fleet 1,000 miles at sea."

"Let us form with our neighboring nations a clear and definite policy of American defence," he proposed.

"An adequate defence of the western hemisphere necessitates the co-operation of the other nations of this hemisphere. Our military aircraft must have access to their bases. Their foreign policy must have one relationship to ours. We cannot hold this hemisphere free from foreign war if nations which lie within it declare war on foreign powers."

Letters From the Troops

Grateful appreciation of gifts of clothing and other comforts sent to troops now training in Quebec was received recently by Mrs. Harry Grills, president of the Quinte Women's Institute. The following letters speak for themselves:—

Mrs. Harry Grills,
R.R. 6, Belleville.

Dear Mrs. Grills:—

Imagine my surprise, when, on arriving at the Barracks from a hard session of drilling, I was handed a parcel which contained two pairs of socks. The label stated that it was sent by you, so I am taking this opportunity of writing and thanking you for the gift. I don't know how you came to know my name number, and address, but I can consider myself lucky that you did. I expect to be coming up that way on leave on May 1st so I will call in and thank you personally. I make my home at Arnold Portt's, Shannonville, so would you mind phoning Mrs. Portt and tell her I wrote to you. I will give you some idea of our schedule for parades, etc. We get up at 6.30 a.m., make beds, polish our brass, wash and be ready for breakfast at 7.30. Then we parade at 8.30 and drill till 12.00 noon.

Dinner at 12.30. Parade at 1.30, physical training till 2.30 and then more drill till 4.00. Supper at 5.00 and go down town till 10.00 p.m. If we have a midnight pass we can stay out till 12.00 midnight. We go down to the Y.M.C.A. once a week for a shower bath and a swim. They have a dance at the Y every Wednesday night for the boys and they furnish the girls and lunch. Well! I guess I will close, thanking you again for the socks,

I remain,

Dear Members of the Red Cross Department, Quinte Institute:—

I received your parcel today. I am gratefully thankful for everything you sent me.

Like the Red Cross Dept., Quinte Inst., and all the rest of the Red Cross Dept.'s, the soldier boys give their thanks in a million ways.

Clifford McDonald received his parcel two weeks' hence, and the way he has been boasting his sweater, etc., up. I kind of envied him, but now I am on equal basis with him. The rest of the regiment think Clifford and I are well thought of, and believe me we are. Never a mail day goes by but what one of us gets a letter, and I'll tell you it's worth a million to get news from home.

Well, in closing I wish you one and all the best of health, I am,

Sincerely your friend,
Sydney White.

Dear Friends of the Institute:—

I would like to thank you all for the stockings and things that were sent to me some time ago.

When you are a soldier it gives you such a happy feeling to receive boxes of nice things from the community and also from home and also it gives you such a happy feeling to know that you still have friends somewhere,

Bombers and Tanks Used by Nazis To Break Through the French Lines

By H. TAYLOR HENRY

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Paris, May 20.—(AP)—Belief that the extension of lines necessary to supply gasoline to the Nazi war machinery as it plunges deeper into France will slow it down automatically was expressed today by French military men.

They also place reliance on the increasing experience of the French troops in dealing with German methods.

To get a true picture of the fighting, French troops must be visualized in hastily-built individual trenches, perhaps only a yard deep, or crouched behind stones and hidden in clumps of bushes.

They are not, in the present fighting sector, behind long-prepared ramparts.

(The Maginot Line does not extend north of the function of the French and Luxembourg frontiers. So far the fighting has been entirely north and west of the Maginot defences.)

Forced into open warfare by the rapidity of the German advance, French units had to make preliminary resistance in country they had just commenced to fortify. Their line of more or less isolated posts, linked only by the crossing of their machine-gun and rifle fire, was attacked first by dive bombers and then machine-gunned.

Against narrow sections of this line, the Germans sent wave after wave of bombers which opened the action in the early morning so that the sun at their backs would blind defenders until the planes were on them.

The new-type German bomber is a twin-engined Junkers "8", which can dive from 4,000 feet almost straight down to 50 feet at 400 miles an hour. From 300 to 400 bombers dived in successive formations of threes, striking at French positions almost literally from just overhead.

The planes attacked in one wave after the other. By the time the third or fourth wave had dived with its load of bombs, the first wave had wheeled and dived again to spray the line with machine-gun fire.

After the planes came the tank divisions, each division of 300 to 400 heavy tanks

As many as eight to ten divisions were used on a single narrow sector.

They swept over the French lines spurting flames 100 yards ahead of them and raking the ground with fire from automatic weapons.

As the tanks rumbled through, they wheeled and struck the neighboring section of the line from the rear. If it could have been seen from above, the track they made would have looked like and in-and-out curve.

Behind the tanks, Nazi light infantry divisions poured into the holes, rushed up in scout cars and armoured trucks to take over and organize the ground while the planes and tanks went on to strike at ever-widening sides of the pocket.

Through the holes in the lines shock troops raced on motorcycles, mounted with machine-guns, to dash up and down the highways, firing on the re-forming French troops.

The Germans, however, did not have it all their own way even in the initial attack.

When they tried to break through without preliminary bombing, the drive was smashed on many sectors.

One German tank attack that was broken earlier in the week was made against a long, narrow wooden crest just outside the little Belgian town of Gemblux, 15 miles north of Namur.

A fleet of 30 German tanks which had been concealed in an opposite forest suddenly started moving across in two waves of 15 each to attack the French position protected by France's new 47 millimetre anti-tank guns and a battery of famed 75s.

The 75s, firing at point-blank range, knocked out 18 tanks. Anti-tank shells blasted two others apart.

Then a line of French tanks rolled out to meet the Germans, forcing them to turn and run, leaving the French position safe.

W.C.T.U. Notes

The W.C.T.U. held its regular meeting in the "Y" on Friday. Mrs. E. Farnsworth occupied the chair and opened the meeting with "What a Friend We Have In Jesus" followed by prayer. Mrs. E. N. Baker conducted the devotional exercises emphasizing the value of prayer. She quoted "When the church sets itself to prayer as it has set itself to other things then shall the Kingdom of God draw nigh."

The W.C.T.U. was "born of prayer, carried on in prayer and continued by prayer".

During the last war Gen. Haig was asked, "How is it going?" He replied, "Know ye not the battle is the Lord's?"

Mrs. Farley and Miss Reeves gave splendid reports and it was decided to hold a rummage sale Saturday, June 1, at the "Y" and the leaders were asked to solicit donations from their groups.

Mrs. A. Sharpe was appointed delegate to the convention at Picton May 21.

From the Clip Sheet:

"Great Britain has curtailed its output of spirits to one-third of last year for the purpose of conserving foodstuffs."

"Large areas of India are passing prohibition."

"Australia established a fund of $50,000 for dry canteens, the profits to be used for the comforts of the soldiers."

"Out of twelve local option contests, ten were dry and where tests are made the dry vote is 63 per cent."

"Let us pray and study and seek to increase the force of right against wrong."

SIX SOLDIERS HURT AT OTTAWA

MR. CHURCHILL'S BROADCAST

Prime Minister Churchill in his first broadcast to the Empire since he became head of the British Government pointed out the grim realities of the war as it is now being waged on the western front, in Belgium and north eastern France, stating that in the war against Germany the armies must cast away the idea of resisting behind concrete lines or natural obstacles and must realize that mastery can only be regained by furious and unrelenting assault and that this spirit must not only animate the High Command but also inspire every fighting man. He warned that after this battle there was the fight "for our islands, they are all that Britain has and all that Britain means. That will be the struggle."

He spoke with determination and plain statement of the facts of the war of heavy mechanized units and the war of the air, as the enemy has launched it against the section north of the Maginot Line. While he said the situation was "extremely dangerous" he held out the hope that a sudden transformation of the scene might spring into being.

As a word of cheer based upon realization of the stern fighting qualities of the Allied soldiers, the Prime Minister said it would be foolish to lose heart and suppose that the well-trained millions of men in the Allied armies could be overcome in a few weeks or months "by a scoop or raid of mechanized forces, however formidable." The Allied armies have delivered telling punches in counterattacking through the lines of the enemy, he declared.

There was a sternness and sincerity about the words of Mr. Churchill, and with them the note of grim determination, which cannot fail to call forth every ounce of supreme effort by the people of the British Isles and the members of the Commonwealth of Nations. British and French will fight to the bitter end, he said. That is what the Empire and France and the world know and that every man, every woman in these countries intends to do.

ENEMY TECHNIQUE ONE OF MASS

Germans have always sought massed weight efforts and in this war continue to use the mass movement in their offensives. They did this in the last war, they sent men forward in massed formation to be shot down and then sent more forward. That is the line along which they think.

Today in the new type of modern war they are using the same technique though their instruments are more modern and some are new and were not known in 1914-18. They have been sending wave upon wave of bombers forward of the huge eighty-ton tanks or "land battleships" which predeced the advance of German infantry. Here again it is the mass of strength and force. It is lightning war with its surprises for modern engines make the mass movement more rapid than it has ever been in history. Norway was a case in question of the use of German troop air transports being used.

The other day the Germans put the mammoth tanks to act as the pioneers in a drive which allowed the enemy to enter into north-east France. That was a new use of strength and force. But the basic principle is the same.

Germany does not change her style. It was so in the last war.

On the other hand the Allied armies use a strategy of a more flexible type. It won out in the last war and there is every confidence that it will win out in this war and crush Hitler.

AN EARLY RACE OF NEWTONS

There is evidence that the ancient Mayas in Yuccatan and Gustemala were a race of Newtons and Einsteins who knew the movements of the planets and astronomy in general, 1250 years before European astronomers and mathematicians, the American Scientific Congress meeting at Washington was told.

Dr. Alfonso Caso, director of the Mexican National Museum of Anthropology and History, said the relics represented the works of the Olmecs, described as "that wraithlike race of men of the rubber land, among whom first flared the civilization of the Mayas, the Aztecs and the Toltecs of the Valley of Mexico."

The Olmecs, who are thought to have flourished 2,500 years ago, passed on their culture to the Toltecs, who were conquered by the Aztecs from the north some 200 years before the coming of Cortez.

In 500 A.D., Dr. Spinden stated the Mayans had reached better mathematical values for the periods of the revolutions of the planets and other astronomical constants than had been determined by European astronomers in 1750 A.D.

"The Mayans," he explained, "had a superior technique for getting at the facts. They employed the modern empirical methods of science that European scientists did not arrive at until after Galileo and Newton."

The earliest Maya date, Dr. Spinden said, is 752 B.C., therefore 'we can sink a shaft of evidence" for civilization in North America to 2692 years from 1940. All other evidence, he declared, pointed to the arrival of man in America from Asia about 4,000 years ago.

Once man arrived in America, Dr. Spinden said, he created his own civilization from the ground up. He developed his own agriculture with new plants and crops in his own original methods, and fashioned his tools through his own genius. The Mayas represented a recapitulation of civilization on entirely original principles.

The evidence, according to the Brooklyn scientist, was not compatible with the claims of the proponents of the Folsom Man of New Mexico, maintaining that man came to America as early as 10,000 to 20,000 years ago.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Our Civilization Raises the Blood Pressure

I overheard two physicians talking about another physician who had gone to China to live. The physician in China had written that he had found that the blood pressure of the Chinese was much lower than among the people of the United States. I felt like breaking into the conversation and telling these two physicians that the blood pressure of the Chinese living in the United States but who had been born in China was as high as that of United States people.

Further, United States people, after living in China for a few years, find that despite their increase in age there has been no increase, often a decrease, in their blood pressure.

What does this mean? This means that the manner of living in China—no hurry, acceptance of circumstances as they arise, no intense competition—keeps the blood pressure from rising beyond normal limits.

Some interesting research work in blood pressure by members of the staff of the Institute for psychoanalysis, Chicago, is recorded in their recent Five Year Report.

They tell us that chronic emotional tensions—intense ambition, aggressive competitiveness, fears and uncertainties of existence which act as causative factors in these and other bodily disturbances—are determined by the individual's circumstances or surroundings. High blood pressure might turn out to be the result of emotional conflicts in the individual, produced by a civilization in which the competition arouses hostile impulses continually but which offers no outlet for these impulses, thus requiring a great effort on the part of the individual to control them.

Another most interesting finding recorded in the report is that among African negroes high blood pressure is found less often than among North American negroes.

Now, none of us would want to change our civilization for that of China, India, or Africa, but it can readily be seen how natives of these countries with their easy-going life, their willingness or ability to take things as they come without getting upset or worried, keeps their blood pressure within normal limits so that heart, kidney, and other fatal deseases are less common.

The lesson for us is not to lose our ambition or our competitive spirit but to try to acquire some of this calmness of spirit of the peoples of these other countries.

A Divided India

The division of India into two states — Muslim and Hindu —after the present European war ends, appears likely.

While Britain is occupied with the conflict in Europe, both Hindu and Muslim leaders in India are pushing their respective causes but, with the exception of extremists, appear to be willing to postpone the break with Britain, until the war is over.

Today the actual battle involving the division of India is being waged between the ascetic Mohandas Gandhi, of goat's milk diet and loincloth fame, and Mohamed Ali Jinnah, modern European-dressed Muslim leader. They are both prohibitionists.

Jinnah is not anxious to press his demands while Britain is at war, but as soon as the war is over he expects to settle the Muslim situation. He would be satisfied with a Muslim state enjoying Dominion status, like Canada, within the framework of the British Empire.

Gandhi, who shows no indication of compromise with Jinnah, is fighting for a united India. He, like Jinnah, does not desire to embarrass the British Empire at the present time.

Although some Hindu leaders are anxious to precipitate civil disobedience immediately, it seems almost certain that the older leaders, like Gandhi and Jinnah and Grandhi will sit down at a table and discuss the problem of Muslim-Hindu differences, resulting in the division of India into Muslim and Hindu Indias. — St. Catharines Standard.

A German Speaks

No voice comes out of Germany to condemn or question the crimes now being committed in Germany's name. None dares to speak in these days of mounting horror; if there is any protest within the German soul it is drugged into the obscene cry of "Sieg Heil!" But one German, at least, dares to speak the truth to his deluded people, dares to tell them that they are fighting only for prison chains. This is Thomas Mann, who speaks to them with flaming eloquence in his new book, "This War."

He, at least, knows that this war was inherent in the Nazi system from its very beginning. He knows that it was not "forced on Germany," but on a peaceful and civilized world, and on the German people themselves, by the "handful of preverted and bloody-minded men" now in power.

He admits, sadly, that the German people are dazzled by dreams of a victory which will bring them happiness and glory forever. But will it? Dr. Mann warns his fellow-Germans that their way will be dark and bitter, even if they conquer the world. He is sure that a victory for the Nazi system will bring Germany only a "black, blood-stained and violent future," without liberty, without security, without peace. "Perpetual menace, harsh and bloody oppression, warlike tension unrelaxed"—these, he writes, are the conditions of the Nazi system's life, without which it could not survive.

He is confident that it will not win. He proclaims, in accents of a modern Cicero or Catiline, that it must and shall be destroyed. Germany will be thankful, some day, that the voice of this German patriot has not been stilled.—N. Y. Times.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

MAY 20th., 1920.

First Belleville Settlers. Away back in 1789 the first white settler in this section, Capt. John Singleton, a U. E. Loyalist, obtained a grant of 400 acres of land which now forms part of Belleville and erected a log house near the bay. An old and partly filled well marked the spot up to a few years ago, but every trace of the house of the first settler has disappeared. The River was for a time called Singleton's River after the first settler. There is nothing left now, nor even the name of a street to bring to mind or mark the event of the first settlement of Belleville. At that time there was a thickly wooded swamp on both sides of the river nearly to the bay. Lot 4 consisting of 200 acres, lying east of and adjoining the river was an Indian Burying Ground and the front part was occupied by Indians. Capt. John Singleton might have felt rewarded for all his privations if he could have seen the beautiful City of Belleville rise up from the wilderness where he built the first house. These facts are of particular interest now owing to the approaching Old Boys' Reunion in July next.

Encouragement

The Daily Express has never underestimated the strength of the enemy. We do not minimize the brilliant successes the Germans have achieved. They have captured ports which bring them much nearer to this country. They are digging themselves in, strengthening their positions, building new fortifications. They will hold on for a very long time. But, however long they hold on, the fortunes of war are bound to go with Britain in the end. Nothing has occurred to weaken the overwhelming resources on which we can count for victory. Our wealth is untouched. The strength of Britain and the British Empire is unaltered. Our naval supremacy is unimpaired. And, by opening a new theatre of war in Scandinavia, Hitler has given our Navy the chance to strike. There have been setbacks in every war in which we have been engaged. There were many gloomy days in 1915. There was April 22, when the Ypres front was broken and the French were in full retreat. The prospect then was more dismal, the outlook more dark with foreboding, than at any time in the present war. The big battles of this war are still to be fought. The Daily Express offers you hope and encouragement in the immense struggle ahead. But confidence in final victory must not slacken our preparations for a prolonged and intensified fight to wrest from the Germans the triumph which shall be won.—London Daily Express.

Animals Obey Arabs

To keep some animal as a pet must be one of the basic instincts of human nature—from the moment that the wild dog was accepted as the first friend.

Nevertheless, the pet dog is an almost entirely Western idea. The Oriental, if he has to have an animal pet, chooses a gazelle or a parrot. His dog and his horse he looks after carefully, but they are not pets, or friends. They are partners in the serious and difficult business of living.

Only two breeds of dogs are seen throughout North Africa. I am not denying that there may be others, but during a ten years' sojourn in that land of drought I have not seen them. There is the white Kabyle dog—very closely resembling a white and shaggy wolf—and there is the saluki. The saluki is a bigger, clumsier, less finely bred greyhound, generally brindled like a bulldog, and wearing the usual expression of profound pessimism of the dogs of his race.

The saluki is bred for use, not amusement, but his use is not that which is fondly imagined—that of chasing gazelle across the boundless plains. He is sometimes used for this purpose, but truth compels me to admit that I have been gazelle-hunting on various occasions in the Djebel Tebaga—a rocky mountain range of southern Tunisia—and our salukis never once raised a gazelle. They raised hare and jackal, but gazelles are far too cunning and far too fleet; they can outdistance any horseman and any hound. They are stalked, like chamoise and even then a tricky business it is.

The only occasion on which I saw a saluki in actual contact with a gazelle was when, having shot a gazelle in the open, our saluki dived in among the rocks and we found her whining with joy and already playing foster mother to a gazelle kid, who could just stand, and immediately started feeding from her! I may add that this kind-hearted hound was not again used for gazelle hunting.

We always used salukis on other hunting and shooting expeditions, and very useful we found them — but a desert-shooting expedition would cause an orthodox sportsman to faint with horror. Our bag usually consisted of something like this: One jackal (cubs brought home in bag), four brace of partridge, one desert owl (to consternation of beater, who declares we shall now all fall under the spell of the evil eye), five hares (one wounded and adopted as pet by beater's son), one hyena cub, and one small anonymous bird, thought erroneously to be quail.

The salukis—poor hounds! —being brought up after the strick Arab fashion, are fed twice or three times a week, to keep them in good fettle for hunting, and wander round our camp fire while we eat, gazing yearningly at the scraps. But the saluki is the gentlest and saddest of dogs; he never fights, rarely protests, hunts tirelessly, and in his "off" moments at home patiently allows the children to pull his tail and climb his back. He is really, for sobriety, endurance and perfect adaptation to his surroundings, the canine counterpart of the Arab's other standby, his camel.

Not that the saluki can go without water! Neither, for that matter, can the camel. There is a curious impression in Europe that beasts and men alike do go without water in the desert. Nothing could be more absurd. Water, with a temperature of a level 120 in the shade, during the summer months, is far more of a necessity than here, and small though the ration may be, no living creature in a caravan, camel, dog or man, goes without it. Moreover, desert wells are never more than one day's march apart, save in the Central Sahara; and when there are no wells there are, during the rains, flowing streams and small lakes, at all times, of magnesian water, which beasts and men learn to drink without harm. I have seen camels go without food for ten days, having been fed date-stones in advance, but I have never seen a camel go without its daily water-ration. It would be even more dangerous for a dog to do so, for thirst, among dogs, spells hydrophobia.

Very different from the saluki—a sort of canine saint!—is the odious Kabyle dog, so beautiful, fierce and treacherous. Kabyle puppies are the prettiest things on earth; but I have seen a small Arab child beaten for playing with one or giving it a titbit. Kabyle dogs are bred and brought up for fierceness, and their masters begin at three weeks teasing and beating them into ferocity. They are, by law, attached during the day, and woebetide the marauder who prowls round a neighbour's melon patch by night—he will find himself set upon, in deadly silence, by something like a huge white wolf. The extraordinary part about the Kabyle dog is that, except at night, when he is trained to spring upon all intruders, he can distinguish between Europeans and natives at a glance. Any native is allowed to aproach the hut he guards, by day, but the presence of a European is immediately anounced by vociferous barking!

Curiously enough, these dogs, to whom a pet's attentions are unknown, are fitness itself—like the Arab horses, which do not know what it is to be slowly cooled down after a hard gallop, which never sleep in a stable, and are yet exempt from all the ills to which a European's horse in Africa invariably falls a victim.

The saluki and the Kabyle dog, doubtless because they are permanently underfed and always well exercised, are hard as nails. No one dresses their wounds when they fight—not that salukis ever fight when they can avoid it, for they are as peaceable at home as they are fierce when hunting. No one mates them with care, and yet a saluki mongrel is hardly ever seen. No one guards them from harm. I have seen a saluki drag round for days after the sting of a horned viper, from which he eventually recovered. They are hardy, good hunters, keen watchdogs, but as to intelligence—no! The affection needed to bring it out is wanting. The Arab dog does not love his master, he obeys him. I have never seen an Arab stroke his dog, or feed sugar to his horse. I have never seen an Arab bestow any affection on any animals, except once—a Targui on his racing mehari( thoroughbred camel). It had just won a big prize for him at the camel races, and in a fit of exuberance he embraced it. It immediately bit him and gave him tetanus—from which, being a desert man and made of iron, he recovered!—Dorothy Buck.

Bombs Used For Avalanches

Bombs are dangerous and very effective weapons. However, in Switzerland a harmless but most beneficial use has been found for them, for there they are employed to shoot down avalanches.

Of what tremendous importance avalanche defence is in the Swiss Alps must be realized by every person who has some in contact with or heard of the countless victims which avalanches claim there each Winter. For the climbers in times of peace, as much as for the soldiers keeping watch in times of war, avalanches are always a great and incaluculable danger which lurks in the mountains whose very outlines are changed by the huge quantities of fallen snow.

There is a record from the first world war, indicating that on a single day in December 1916 over 10,000 soldiers stationed in the Tirol mountains of former Austria fell a prey to avalanches. In fact, war statistics for that section show far more victims of the snow than of the battlefields.

Switzerland, whose army has been keeping watch at the frontiers and in many important mountain regions ever since September 1939, has made it her business to study avalanche conditions in a scientific way and to utilize the results of this research work for the benefit of her army. However, science was already a step ahead before the present emergency arose. Since 1933 there has existed on the Weissfluhjoch, 8,737 feet, a Swiss Snow and Avalanche Research station. There, with specially constructed apparatus, the condition of the snow is studied and measured. The blanket of snow is now regarded as a live think that can change within and become a deadly menace to humans, for it can gradually form into avalanches.

This station is the only one of its kind in the world. Swiss engineers from the Federal Institute of Technology at Zurich established it and have obtained therein some very remarkable results in research work. Thus it is possible today to foretell avalanches and to issue necessary warnings in good time. These warnings benefit thousands of ski-ers. What is still more important, it can be determined nowadays when the avalanches are ready to descend, and in order to avoid being taken unawares they can be made to come down by means of explosives. Hand-grenades are used if the location can be reached by a ski-er. If big avalanches are envolved, gathering their huge masses of snow mostly above high gorges their descent is started by mine-throwers.

In days gone by the large Spring avalanches often destroyed homes, bridges, highways and railroads. Nowadays they are no longer permitted to grow into a menace and to finally cause death, misery and poverty among the inhabitants. By throwing bombs into masses of snow due to move down the Swiss save human lives and property.—Swiss Information Bureau, N. Y.

Court Martial Not For Heroes

Auckland, N.Z.—(CP)—An astonishing tale of two New Zealand seamen from H.M.S. Achilles who found themselves by chance in H.M.S. Exeter during the River Plate action against the Admiral Graf Spee and covered themselves with glory was told by Captain W. E. Parry, captain of the Achilles, during the ship's visit here, says the New Zealand News Letter.

"After spending some time ashore at Rio de Janeiro," said Captain Parry, "I came down to the wharf to get my boat off to the ship. I found it was not there, and after some time I managed to get another boat. When I got to my ship I was told the reason why my boat had not been waiting for me.

"It appears that two seaman whose leave had been jammed had taken the fast motor-boat and gone ashore. They were not back at 8 a.m. when we sailed next day and we went without them. Of course, in the Navy desertion is a serious offence, and I found myself faced with the unpleasant possibility of having to call a court martial.

"The men later made their own way down to Montevideo and they finally picked up the Exeter, with whom we had a rendevous. But they were still with her when the action started.

"By jove, the two New Zealanders were perfectly splendid. They came up from a flooded magazine, where they had done great work, and when they reached the messdecks an 11-inch shell came inboard and burst, making a terrific shambles. Then those men formed themselves into a rescue party of two, cleared up the decks, carried away the wounded and covered themselves with glory.

"What can you do with men like that?" asked Captain Parry. "Court martial them? Anyway, I can say they were not court martialled. This shows you what my boys were like. The whole ship's company were too wonderful for words."

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

An important factor in the present war situation is the distance advanced German columns are from their base of supplies. In the German advance of 1914 this factor worked to slow up the advance and make for the eventual French victory in the great five-day battle on the Marne which saved Paris from capture and France from annihilation.

There can be little doubt that the problem of keeping an advancing army fit and well-supplied has been simplified by the development of mechanical transport. But the British air offensive on German lines of communication and supply depots is calculated to aggravate the problem of supply.

Royal Air Force bombers by their repeated raids into Germany and on German lines in France and Belgium are giving important support to the French army upon which must fall the weight of the task of stopping the German push.

The problem of the Allied armies is complicated by uncertainty as to the first objective of the Germans, the coast opposite Great Britain or Paris.

In the face of that uncertainty, a powerful French counter - attack, based on an assumption that one of the two possible objectives as the aim of the Germans, might prove a trap in the event the Germans were aiming at the other objective.

GOV'T TO SELL 25-CENT WAR SAVINGS STAMPS

Will be Available in Post Offices, Banks and Chain Stores

DETAILS SOON

Ottawa, May 20.—(CP)—Canada, having already marshalled her dollars to fight for freedom, plans soon to marshal her small change.

"Make your dollars fight for freedom!" that was the call behind the January drive that brought oversubscription by $160,000,000 of a $200,000,000 war loan and machinery will be in motion for sale of 25-cent war savings stamps.

They will be sold in association with War Savings Certificates, already announced and soon to go on sale in amounts ranging from $5 upwards in multiples of $5.

Neither the stamps nor the certificates will be subject to income tax, it was learned authoritatively last night, because no interest is paid.

The public, it was understood, will find a $5 certificate available for about $4 and in something less than 10 years will get a $5 return on it, the profit of $1 being considered capital and so not taxable.

Finance Minister Ralston is expected to give out complete details of this new financing venture shortly.

To Help Small Investors

The whole scheme is designed to place the persons of small means in a position to take part in the wartime financing at any time they have funds, not just when a war loan is being raised. Even then the persons of very small means cannot take part to any great extent because the smallest bonds are too expensive.

Under the War Savings Stamp plan, similar to the Thrift stamps sold in the First Great War in Public schools, post offices and banks, almost everybody will have a chance to participate. They will be available in post offices, banks and chain stores that have branches scattered throughout the nation.

And when the small investor has run his 25-cent investments into the certificate class he may exchange his collection of stamps for a certificate. The plan is to make available forms on which the stamps can be pasted and it will then act as an application form for a certificate.

Marmora Tennis Courts were opened this week for the 1940 season. Some fresh clay has been placed on the courts and with a couple of weeks' use it is expected they will be in fine playing condition. The club is looking forward to a good season. It is probable an inter-church league will be formed to add interest to local games. It is hoped with the longer evenings for playing a membership of from 75 to 100 will be secured this year.

A meeting of public and separate school teachers of Marmora Village, Deloro and Marmora Township, was held in Marmora Public School on Monday evening to plan a children's prize list for Marmora Fair. As the Fair will be held this year on Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 10th and 11th, a little over a week after the schools re-open for the fall term, it was necessary to arrange the list for the children's exhibits early.

As there will be no school fairs this year Marmora Agricultural Society is planning to enlarge its children's department so as to partly take the place of the school fairs. The children's exhibits have been increasing from year to year at Marmora Fair and have been one of the features receiving much favorable comment. This year the number of prizes will be increased and the prize list completely revised. There will also be a class for dairy calves, poultry and various vegetables. It is expected all public and separate school children in the district will be admitted free.

Mrs. M. Birch who has spent the winter here with her daughter, Mrs. G. R. Winters, has returned to her home in Sutton.

Empey Hill

Empey Hill — The May meeting of Mount Pleasant Pioneer W. I. was held in the Institute Hall on Thursday afternoon with a fair attendance. Mrs. Walter Hudson, president, had charge and opened in the usual manner. The roll call was the paying of fees and exchange of slips and seeds.

The secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Harold Grooms gave a most gratifying report of the past year's work showing a satisfactory balance on hand. Mrs. F. Henderson acted as secretary for the minutes. Correspondence was read and dealt with. It was decided to send for booklets on Wild Flower Preservation to be distributed amongst the school children. It was decided that the branch secretary mail a letter of thanks to Miss Scilly and the children of S. S. No. 3, Richmond, for their contribution of enough lovely sewn blocks to make a quilt. Mrs. Albert Reid of Napanee was present and conducted the election of officers for 1940-41. President, Mrs. John Doyle; 1st vice, Mrs. Fred Henderson; 2nd vice, Mrs. Tom Murphy; Sec'y Treasurer, Mrs. Arthur Sexsmith; District Director, Mrs. Claude Nugent; Directors, Mrs. Frank Sexsmith, Mrs. Fred Mowbray, Mrs. Manly Hart and Mrs. Tom McCambridge. A paper on "Canadianization" was prepared by Mrs. Ross Oliver and read by Mrs. F. Sexsmith. Mrs. C. Nugent read an interesting letter from her sister, Mrs. Edmunds, on her teaching the Junior boys in West China. Mrs. Edmunds has been appointed Missionary teacher in the place of her late husband, who died following a year's furlough in Canada.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Reid for her kind assistance to the branch and after singing, "God Save the King" a splendid lunch was served by the committee in charge.

A very interesting entertainment was held under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. at Selby on Monday evening in the S. S. room of the United Church. Following the devotional exercises, when the Crusader Psalm was read by Mrs. Merrick, five juniors, Marjorie Telford, June McFarlane, Gwen Gourlie, Bobby Denison and Glen Denison competed in a Medal Contest which was much enjoyed. Misses Aylesworth Exley and Baker of Napanee were the judges and decided in favor of June McFarlane. The president, Mrs. Melville Windover, presented the winner with a silver medal and each of the other contestants with compensation awards for their efforts, also a box of stationery to Mrs. Merle Denison for preparing the contestants. By invitation, Lieut. Brown of Napanee was present and gave a very interesting address on the temperance question, observing that the liquor traffic was just as extensive as disastrous.

She gave facts from her observation and experience of conditions that are prevalent today and urged her hearers, especially the young people, to use their influence against intemperance. During the evening, Ralph Weese, Lois McCormick, Lieut. Brown, Mrs. Ted Wilde and Mrs. Vernie Booth contributed vocal selections.

After the program, Mrs. Adam Frisken and Mrs. M. Windover moved a vote of appreciation to all who had contributed in any way to the success of the evening's entertainment also to all who had contributed trade coupons for the support of travellers' aid, or used postage stamps, the revenue from which is used for the evangelistic extension work in China. The entertainment was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem.

The Story Behind PICOBAC

Canadians should be proud of Picobac—it's more than a tobacco, it's a Canadian achievement!

Years ago Ontario growers were raising fine Burley leaf; but they hadn't the market it deserved. So the makers of Picobac decided to show Canadians what a mild, cool, sweet smoke Canadian Burley really is. They took the pick of the crop, named it "Picobac" and put it on sale. Today it's the largest selling brand in Canada because thousands tried it (as you should) and agreed that—

"It DOES taste good in a pipe!"

"Tastes good?" says Mr. Picobac. "Boy, that's a masterpiece of understatement!"

All of which was much appreciated. In the evening a Grandmothers' Choir rendered three appropriate anthems and a pageant "Mothers of the Bible" presented by Mrs. Merle Denison, Mrs. E. Robinson, Mrs. Dorland Wood, Mrs. Dorland Jackson, Mrs. W. Merrick, Mrs. Everett Price, Mrs. W. A. McLeod, Mrs. Jim Henderson and Mrs. W. Campbell. A splendid address was given by Rev. W. R. ## The Stars Say

For Tuesday, May 21

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

THE MANY signs of mixed influences dominating this day's astrological map are indicative for several conflicting and confusing situations of major importance and potent. There is likely to be a swift and unexpected unheaval of the affairs, with unpredictable denouements. Business and employment are under crisis that require much tact, shrewdness and compromse.

Those whose birthday it is are likely to be met with a year of sudden and surprising adventure, with much commotion, swift action of unforeseen nature, and probably a drastic revearsal of fortunes, unless much sagacity, tact and calm deliberation be exercised.

A child born on this day may have a rather unusual character, shrewd, resourceful, persistent, yet changeable and erratic at times. With exalted aims it should be successful.

On Friday evening, May 17, at the regular meeting of the Chapter, the Past Matrons and Past Patrons put on the work of the order, under the capable leadership of Past Matron Mrs. Grace McEwen and Past Patron Mr. H. Sager. This is an annual event much enjoyed by the members of the Chapter and was especially graced by the presence of Mrs. Anna Boyd, Past Grand Matron of the Order, from Capreol, Ont., and District Deputy Grand Matron Mrs. Coral Adams, of Wooler, Ont. It was a most enjoyable evening.

Another annual event was the annual church service of the chapter, which was held this year in the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church on Sunday, May 19, where a very stirring and appropriate sermon was delivered by the Minister of the Church, Rev. Claude Troupe Olmstead on the "Religion of Ruth". This was greatly appreciated by the members of the order, who were privileged to be present.

Suppose You Are About to Marry

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

Suppose you are a youth who is about to marry and you and your prospective life partner have good prospects for making a go of marriage.

You are sure you love each other and will always love each other. You have known each other for several years. You have spent a good many hours together, mingling with others and just with each other.

Each of you knows the other's family. Each believes he can be companionable when visiting in the other's home after marriage, and each is sure he can be a cordial host to members of the other's family.

You are both strong and healthy. Each could submit to the other a clear health certificate and certificate for physical fitness for marriage. Each knows himself fit physically to become a parent.

Habits of Economy

You have each cultivated habits of economy, habits of thrift. Each has learned to make self-denials financially and to save some money according to a definite plan. You both know what will be the probable earnings of the husband-to-be for the next several years. You have agreed upon a plan for handling the family budget.

You have come from homes of similar cultural backgrounds, with similar customs and similar religious atmosphere.

The little differences which have come between you during these months and years you have been able to iron out without heartaches, by talking things over, each conceding something, making some compromises and then never bringing up the matter again once it has been settled.

Have High Ideals

All these months and years each has maintained dignity and reserve, never considering the other in a commonplace fashion. Each has maintained toward the other a high regard, measuring up to the high ideals which you will want your children to have.

You resolve that each other's personality and all that go to make it up will be respected. You never knowingly will let your baser impulses dominate your thoughts or direct your actions. You will be so much a master of yourself as to continue to maintain, after marriage, self-esteem and esteem for each other.

If you have succeeded in attaining the goals mentioned, and have adopted such admirable ambitions, your chances of success in marriage are good. Let me emphasize that your mutual fidelity, your self-discipline, your ideals and ability to live by them, once you pledge your lives to each other, will go far toward fitting you to continue to be mutual lovers after you have become man and wife. On the other hand, neither of you will be so foolish as to suppose you can make the other's habits and ideals over after marriage.

False Doctrines

Don't let yourself be deluded by false doctrines about marriage. Doubts and difficulties enough will arise after you have been man and wife several months or several years. Do not let them arise now. But if they do and persist, you are pretty sure you are not fitted to be married to each other.

Don't fool yourself in believing that you can find the best abiding happiness just in each other. Few married couples do. If you are planning just to live as two, you will miss a lot of richness you deserve. Rearing some children, even if they must be adopted, will bring you, with all the sacrifices, the cares and worries and anxieties, something which nothing else can bring.

Solving Parent Problems

Q.—For two years my boy, 13 years old, has had his heart set on aeronautical engineering and spends hours at a stretch putting most difficult model airplane parts together. He saves toward this purpose, as he earns small amounts of money. Do you think this interest is likely to be permanent?

A.—The chances are it will be. I hope you encourage him.

Q.—When my two girls, three and five, have one or two playmates in our home, I just can't stand the noise they make.

A.—It depends on the kind of noise. If it is only vocal noise, you can learn to adapt yourself to that, most of the time at least, if you have a right philosophy. But forbid games of chase and rough-house indoors. Encourage them to enjoy quiet games and creative and constructive play.

"Lover Come Back"

by BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

That morning, at breakfast in the upstairs sitting room, Sondra kept turning questioning eyes on her grandfather. Freshly shaved, and silver-haired in his royal-blue dressing gown, he had never looked more lovable, or more benign. Benign in the way she adored—the autocratic, paternal way of men who always have been in supreme command. Yet . . .

"Dynamite." She spoke abruptly. "Come clean. Did you — you or Chris, I mean — have anything to do with setting the Glory adrift?"

He set down the cup that had been midway to his lips and looked at her in hurt surprise. "Sondy! Would meself be bringing grief on the Glory, and she all that's left of me youth and pride? Why, gurl, 'twould make me young again just to stand once more abat her wheel. To feel. . . . But ye'd not be understandin' that, and ye a woman. As for Chris—ye heard me give him his orders for Salisbury Sound. The lad was forty miles away when the Glory parted her lines." He turned his head to look down at the waterfront, and Sondra caught his start of surprise.

The reason was Chris himself, just making a landing at the O'Moore float—in a rowboat. The Tanya was nowhere in sight. Waiting for him was Liane, and it was evident from her mirthful attitude that she was teasing, and he trying to ignore her.

Something she said secured his undivided attention; for he stopped, his head thrust forward belligerently. Liane, devilishly derisive, swept a hand toward the Glory and laughed in his face, adding some words that were obviously too much for his self-control. He shot out a great paw, gripped her by the collar, shook her, then deliberately lifted her off the float into the water. After dousing her up and down, he hoisted her out and left her, bedraggled and dripping, while he strode up the runway to the wharf.

"Well, of all things!" Sondra started up indignantly. "I'm going down there and tell Chris Sandvik a thing or two."

Her grandfather raised a restraining hand. "Chris is on his way here I'm thinkin'. I have a word for his ear, meself."

As Chris entered the upstairs sitting room Sondra was at him before he had a chance to say "Good morning." "I'm ashamed of you, Christopher Sandvik! What do you mean by ducking Liane?"

"Aw, that hell-cat!" He hunched his shoulders in righteous deprecation. "You know what, Miss Sondra? She's the one who swiped that Bates contract out of your wet clothes and turned it over to the Reynalls. Sure! She just told me, herself. Bragged about it. Trying to make herself solid with Jean, I guess. Made me so danged mad, I—"

"Chris!" rasped the captain. "It makes little difference how Reynall got the contract, now that he has it. But—I sent ye to Salisbury. What the devil are ye doin' back here?"

Chris squirmed uneasily under O'Moore's inquisitorial eye. "It's them new injector nozzles, Cap'n. They never did work right with this fuel oil—near got us into a jam out there with the whales, you remember. The whole set went haywire last night when I was about four miles out. Joe, the engineer, is down at the machine shop now getting the tips reamed out. We lay to our hook in Coogan Bay last night and—"

"So ye were anchored less than four miles away, the night." There was a cutting edge to the quietly spoken words. "Belike, ye wouldn't know that the Glory went adrift and was near lost on the Spearhead, last tide?"

"Yes. I heard. But, awh — look here, Cap'n!" Chris's eyes popped with sudden comprehension. "I never had nothing to do with that. Believe me, sir, I—after what you told me—I—"

His stammering was cut short by the entry of Alexander, who bore a long pasteboard box. "A present for Miss Sondra!" He put it down on the table with a flourish. "Looks like flowers. That big, redheaded engineer from the Glory brought it, with Captain Reynall's compliments."

Sondra, feeling a glow of pleasurable surprise, stood looking at the box.

"Well, well," prompted the captain impatiently. "Open it. 'Tis not likely he'd be sendin' a bomb."

She lifted the lid and turned back the tissue paper; and in a sudden revulsion of feeling went hot all over. "It's some kind of silly joke, Dynamite." She shoved the box across to her grandfather.

The captain lifted out a spliced loop of heavy rope. "Joke, be hanged!" he roared indignantly. "'Tis a slap in the face, no less! A backhanded—"

"But what is the thing, Dynamite? I don't—"

"'Tis the eye of a ship's hawser, Sondy, made to drop over a bollard when mooring at a wharf. And see—it's been cut through with an axe, or a knife. 'Tis his insultin' manner of tellin' us we cut the Glory adrift last night. By the hornbilled jeezwax, if I could lay hands on that impudent whelp I'd jam this down his throat and—"

"Wait, Dynamite. I think the important thing is that the Glory's lines were cut, apparently, by—someone."

The two men looked at each other, but their expressions were lost to Sondra, who had just noticed a long envelope in the bottom of the box.

The envelope contained two documents. One was a copy of the injunction: "O'Moore Seiners, Inc., Defendant; Baranov Packers, Plaintiff." Across it, dated that morning and signed by the U.S. Commissioner, was an inscription: "Injunction dissolved and action terminated on request of Plaintiff."

The other document was the trouble-making Bates contract, crinkled and waterstained. Clipped to it was a note in clear, bold handwriting:

My Dear Sondra O'Moore:

I've just learned that you, and not your grandather, are head of O'Moore Seiners. But, were it the other way around, there are still some methods no Reynall would resort to, even in a fish fight.

Respectfully yours,
Jean Reynall.

Sondra pushed the note and the two documents over to her grandfather. "What does he mean by that?"

The captain scowled at the assembled exhibits, and shook his white head. "I don't get it. They're a tricky breed, these Reynalls. But this one's too deep for me. I—"

He suddenly whisked the papers out of sight and made a warning gesture as the voices of Kemp and Polena sounded from the hall outside. "Cover that hawser, Sondy. We'll say nothing of this to Starbuck, just yet."

Kemp came in smiling, but his face had the drawn look of lost sleep. He dropped into a chair and accepted gratefully the cup of coffee Sondra handed him.

"Up all night, Kemp?"

"Might as well have been. I hope the waterfront bedlam was less disturbing up here than at my quarters on the wharf."

"First we heard was the rumpus when the Glory lost her moorin's," said the captain. "After seein' that through, we felt little call to sleep again, as ye might guess."

"Yes, sir—quite." By the quirk of an eyebrow, Kemp signified his discreet perception. "Unfortunate for us the affair hadn't a different ending, but certainly no fault of yours, sir. That infernal luck of Reynall's would upset the best calculations."

"Huh!" growled the captain. "Luck never floated a stranded ship on an ebbing tide. And if ye're hintin', me lad, that the Glory went adrift through any design of mine, I tell ye now I had no part in it. Ye heard me order Chris to drop the idea, and by jeezwax, I meant what I said. Is that clear?"

Kemp flushed, unaware that the brittle tone was directed at Chris rather than himself. "No offense. I naturally assumed. . . . Well, it would have been a break for us if Reynall's floating cannery had wound up on the beach. It's that injunction of his that brings me here so early, sir. We must find some way to get around it. I've got to have fish this month."

"You'll get them," O'Moore answered shortly. "The injunction has been dissolved."

"Dissolved! How on earth did you manage that, gurl?" Kemp leaned forward eagerly, but the captain signified the subject closed by turning to his radio. "I don't want to miss that news short-wave broadcast from Schenectady," he explained, as he adjusted the dial.

The warming tubes had set up a gentle humming when suddenly the room was filled with a deafening clatter and crash of dots and dashes in the Continental code. The captain swore, and clicked off the switch. "Infernal key-pounder!" he fumed. "Half the time, lately, when I tune for a short-wave broadcast, all I get is that blasted clatter loud enough to split me eardrums. The brass-pounder must be almost in me backyard, by the sound. It wouldn't be that one of your men has been gettin' in a short-wave transmitter, Starbuck?"

Kemp shook his head. "No, we haven't a transmitter of any kind about the place. But"—he made a sourly humorous grimace — "Ikeda saw them rigging up a transmitter aboard Reynall's ship not long ago."

"Reynall, again! Not even the air is free from his blasted interference." Wrathfully, the captain switched to long-wave reception, and dialed in a news broadcast from Seattle.

The staccato voice from the loudspeaker raced at machine-gun speed through the grist of vice, vanity and violence making the day's headlines. Then, after a brief pause, the announcer went on: "The U.S. Navy Department will dispatch a squadron of forty-eight big Navy bombers to Alaska at an early date, for an extensive series of aerial manoeuvres in the northern territory."

"Oh, grand!" cried Sondra. "That means all kinds of parties when they visit Sitka." She looked across to catch Kemp's sympathetic eye, but his frowning, thoughtful gaze was fixed on vacancy. The news reporter launched into another item which gripped her attention and caused her grandfather to stiffen angrily.

"Despite the Japanese government's promise to withdraw all Japanese fishermen from Alaskan waters, latest reports from Bristol Bay indicate that there are still at least one hundred Japanese fishing-boats operating more than two hundred miles of fishing-gear in that Alaskan area. This fleet, manned by members of the Japanese Naval Reserve, has as a 'mother ship' a huge floating cannery, anchored just outside the twelve-mile limit. An unconfirmed report states that the commander of the mother ship is a high ranking officer in the Japanese Naval Intelligence. Unhampered by U.S. fishing regulations, the Japanese are rapidly decimating the Alaskan salmon supply and American fishermen have threatened to resort to armed force if the district is not evacuated at once."

"Armed force!" The captain ripped out the words. "That's the only language the Japs will listen to! Years ago, they muscled in on our seal industry. Now it's the salmon. Next they'll be down here after our herring. And after that—your pardon, Starbuck, I wasn't thinkin' of your outfit, but of the race."

"Quite all right, sir. Personally, however, I can find much to admire in the Japanese."

"So can I — at a distance. No other race is so intensely patriotic. Soldier, coolie, or elder statesman—they are of one faith in the manifest destiny of their empire. And that's just the reason that each man of them—outside their own islands—must be looked upon as a spy; a dangerous agent of his government. They're a menace, Starbuck, and don't ye forget it."

Kemp laughed, and came to his feet. "I'll give you an argument on that sometime later, sir. Just now I must run along and make ready for that slather of herring I hope you're going to swamp me with."

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

TABLE MANNERS — FOR MEN ONLY

You may be a handsome fellow, the brightest and wittiest of men. You may have a devastatingly alluring personality. You may be a wonderful dancer. You may be a heart-breaker.

How are your table manners

You don't think girls are influenced by this? Read this letter, and see that girls do think.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I met a very good-looking and delightful man and enjoyed his company immensely — until he took me out to dinner. His table manners, Mrs. Beeckman, were atrocious! He held his fork as if it were a shovel. He did everything he shouldn't do. I was embarrassed to death. It seems to me that there is no excuse for his table manners, for he is an intelligent, well-educated business man.

The next time he telephoned me to ask me to dine with him, I refused ... Is there anything that I could say or do to help him

The Girl

Now, young man, if you've never thought about your table manners, think now. Why the rule for table manners? To make the act of eating as pleasant as possible, as inoffensive as possible, to those who must watch us eat.

There isn't much, if anything, that that girl can do about your table manners. Something should have been done long, long ago. But now you can do something about them. Take your time; don't be hurried when you eat. Observe what you do, and compare it with what well-bred people do. Read suggestions and rules for good table manners. Ask questions. Your family would undoubtedly be glad to help you — they'd welcome the comfortable change your careful table manners would give them.

Position of Meat

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I contend that the meat should be in the front of the plate. Another member of the family insists that it should be on the side and a third says in the back of the plate, which I think is very awkward, as one has to reach over the vegetables to cut the meat.

Please let us know the correct place for the meat on an individual plate

Convenience in cutting the meat would certainly suggest that the meat be toward the front of the plate.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

PUPPY LOVE AND ITS HEARTBREAKS

A wild-eyed, distraught-looking boy speeding along in a car, beside him a grim-faced policeman. Every little while the boy asks: "Will they give me the limit? Will I burn for this" There rises in his mind the frightful realization that the 16-year-old schoolmate sweetheart he shot "only to frighten her" is dead. His mother, packing his few little belongings that would make him more comfortable in jail and sending them by the pastor of their church. She doesn't talk about her son's plight. She is still confused.

And the white-faced youngster, answering routine questions put to him, realizing little but that he was jealous — awfully jealous. He wanted to scare her and keep her from having dates with other boys.

Another case, that of a promising boy of 17 who killed himself. He, too, was jealous. His girl had gone out with another boy. He didn't try to kill the girl; he just left a note for his parents, blaming no one, just saying goodbye.

In writing of these tragedies the papers have spoken of them as caused by "puppy love." But they are more than that. Youngsters in the grip of emotion they don't understand see no way out but death. It's impossible for them to realize that within six months or a year they're likely to meet someone else who will make the despair of their first "serious" love affair seem funny.

Wouldn't it be well to inaugurate a class in Social Relations in high schools? And wouldn't a dash of humor be a saving grace? A clever teacher could wisely, humorously and understandingly slip into the required reading some really good literature which would deal with this so-called "puppy-love".

English classics have some mighty good specimens. Dickens and Thackeray have both dealt with it, also Booth Tarkington. Youngsters could be brought to a realization of the humor of this mystery called falling in love.

It would not be too difficult to instil in the minds of students that this tornado of the emotions which has swept them out of their accustomed groove is not something reserved for them alone. That all the hum-drum, drab-looking, middle-aged creatures they see in buses, on the streets, in the movies, have, in all probability, been subjected to the rigors of first-love. And, like the tides, it ebbs and flows.

And that grand old platitude about two strings to one's bow offers a solution to the chaos. They might inquire of parents, aunts, elderly cousins if there is any cure for youthful romance equal to meeting the beloved one after a lapse of years. And that the best remedy when jealousy prompts hideous things like murder and suicide, as in the two cases just recorded, is not to brood and mope, but to go out and dance and pretend to be merry with someone else.

Some of us poor mortals are as blundering in the first stages of that overwhelming emotion known as love as we were when learning how to write, skate or play the piano. Parents could help, as could teachers and the church.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Multiple Babies

Twins and other multiples always seem a popular subject, and this isn't hard to understand, for naturally there isn't a parent expecting a baby who doesn't consider the possibility that the Big Event will bring twins or more.

I referred here recently to "fraternal" twins, which occur when more than one ovum is fertilized at the same time. There is another way, too, in which twins can be created. In this the ovum imitates the method of reproduction practised by certain microscopic organisms that live in the water. They reproduce in the simplest possible way. They just grow larger and larger, then divide into two parts to take individual identities.

This is what happens in the creation of "identical" twins. After the one ovum has been fertilized by the one sperm, the fertilized ovum grows larger, splits into two identical parts and the two develop separately into two babies or more. The Dionne quintuplets are "identical".

There are two main differences between fraternal and identical twins. Fraternal twins are caused by a hereditary tendency is some women to produce more than one ovum. Identical twins are just an accident of nature, so far as we know today.

The other difference is in the children's similitary to each other. Every ovum developed by a woman is different from every other ovum. So no matter how many children a couple might have, no two would be exactly or nearly the name — except in the case of identical twins.

In the formation of "identical" twins, just one sperm and one ovum go to make up two separate babies. So the hereditary tendencies from the two parents are duplicated exactly in the two children and go one set into each baby. So identical twins are in fact "identical" — or at least as near identical as two people can be. The reason is that at the beginning they were two of exactly the same person. Of course, fraternal twins are no more alike than any other two children of the same family, except in such respect as the same ages make them alike. They were two separate ovums fertilized by two separate sperms.

We are quite convinced that the Quintuplets are identical. That is, they were one cell to begin with and by accident they became five. That is why we had so much trouble telling them apart at first. Some still have that trouble, though now as distinctive personalities emerge there is more difference between them.

'Buck' Leal Addresses Tweed High School Commencement Exercises

Former Student and Winner of Rhodes Scholarship Speaks on European Tour He Made in 1939

GIVEN PRESENTATION

Tweed, May 20 (Special).—The annual High School Commencement Exercises were held in the High School on Friday evening. There was a fine attendance of the students and their parents and friends. The speaker was Herbert "Buck" Leal, a former student, who was recently awarded a Rhodes Scholarship, and on Monday graduated from McMaster University, obtaining six firsts and one second in his final examinations.

Dr. W. A. Paul, chairman of the High School Board, presided, and welcomed the audience, expressing regret that facilities for holding commencement exercises at the school were not more suitable. He spoke to the student body regarding education and the valuable contribution which it makes to a successful life. All want to live a full life, living richly but not to be rich. We are all beneficiaries of one of the richest estates ever bequeathed to any one—the heritage of a thousand years. Education begins at birth and should continue until death. Many young people have the idea that education is a steep incline to the time of graduation from a school as a college and then a gradual decline to the "volley of ease" where they spend their remaining years under the impression that the world owes them a luxurious living.

Speaking as a parent to parents, Dr. Paul said that they must supervise the general environment of the young people or it will undermine all the good effects of other environments—home, church and school.

Referring specifically to subjects of study on the curriculum, he pointed out that from each one valuable lessons may be learned. From Greek history we learn of the release of man's mind from the bondage to which he had been subjected. Roman history teaches of the growth of law and order. From the later periods we learn tolerance and chivalry.

Contrasting English and German history, Dr. Paul pointed out that the word of an Englishman is always as good as his bond. The German has gotten off the beaten track and regards himself as a superman to whom power is all important. Concluding he warned against what he called "dragons" with which the youth of our day are confronted—the short cuts to success, wishful thoughts, evasion of responsibility, surrender of independence and the sacrifice of the integrity of the mind all of which will lead to dictatorship. "To thine own self be true, and it must follow, as the night, the day, thou canst not then be false to any man."

Given Ovation.

Mr. Leal was given an ovation when he rose to speak. He paid a tribute to the staff and high school from which he had graduated but four short years previously. There had been laid the foundation to which he attributed any measure of success which he had achieved. No school in the province is better equipped and staffed to prepare its students to go out into the world to success, he said, as he referred to many students who had gone out to do good work.

Scholarship Provided Tour

Mr. Leal gave an account of his European trip in 1939 just prior to the opening of the war. He had been granted a scholarship at McMaster University which made possible this tour and opportunity for some months' study in Paris and Oxford. The trip across the Atlantic from New York in the Italian liner Rex was uneventful. Azores, the first land seen, was described as one of the most beautiful places in the world. It must have been of these isles that Moore was thinking, said Mr. Leal, when he wrote Utopia. The first sight of Gibraltar was a thrilling experience, calling to mind Browning's "Home Thoughts from the Sea" and bringing up thoughts of Britain's sea power as associated with such names as Jervis, Drake and Nelson.

At Naples the party was treated to the sight of the Italian fleet in review. Mr. Leal described his trip into the interior of an Italian submarine and of the unfavourable reaction of an Italian guard who learned that he was a Canadian. The Italian people do not like war and do not want war. A keen observer could readily see this in their faces, especially in the faces of Italian legionnaires returned from Spain. They prefer to follow their peaceful agricultural pursuits. In quick succession, Rome, with its many interesting ruins, Florence with its art galleries, Venice with its canals were visited in turn. In the latter city canal traffic is controlled by the red and green system of light signals as motor traffic is in other cities. While here Mr. Leal and his chum stayed in the house where John Ruskin, famous English essayist, had lived for a time.

Little Praise for Life in Germany

From Italy, Germany was entered via the famous Brenner Pass. Of life in Germany, Mr. Leal found little to commend it. Exemplifying the totalitarian idea of government developed to its highest degree, everything in Germany is regimented to serve the ends of the state. Everywhere in Munich, Berlin and elsewhere soldiers marched. Of interest in Munich were the Beer Hall where in 1923 the famous Nazi Pusch was staged resulting in the deaths of sixteen Nazis. These are now looked upon as national heroes and on passing their tombs all must give the Nazi salute and "Heil Hitler." The "Brown House" where the Munich Pact was signed, was another place of interest. Here was perpetuated "the greatest lie in human history." Nowhere in Germany does one find a consciousness of military defeat in the World War.

Through Belgium to Paris by way of the area now the scene of the greatest battle of all time. Here, in Paris, on July 14th, was celebrated France's national day commemorating the fall of the Bastille. The display of French might in tanks, men and all the paraphernalia of war was such as to inspire confidence in their fighting qualities and might. They still stand for liberty,, equality and fraternity.

Spent Month at Oxford

From France, Mr. Leal crossed the Channel to England, where he spent a month at Oxford. This was followed by a brief tour of parts of Norway. "Nothing more peaceful can be imaged," said he, "than the quiet little city of Bergen, nestling in its peaceful fjord at the foot of snow-capped mountains. One could not help but think if he wanted a place of refuge for his friends during this time of turmoil, Bergen would have been that place.

On his return to Britain, war had broken out, and the boat on which he was to have sailed to Canada had been cancelled. On inquiry regarding other sailing information was given that had he been but a day or so earlier he could have booked passage on the Athenia, subsequently sunk by a German submarine.

Mr. Leal returned to Canada on the Duchess of Atholl which was convoyed for two days by three destroyers and a number of planes with the captain following a zigzag course across the Atlantic.

In concluding his most interesting and informative address, Mr. Leal congratulated those students who were being presented with awards for their academic achievements or for their prowess on the field of sport. Education is like a wall, one side of which is academic, the other physical. Neither side of the wall can be built rightly if the other is neglected.

Presented With Travelling Case

Prolonged applause followed the address. A very pleasing event followed when Mr. T. N. Beatty, member of the High School Board presented "Buck" Leal with a fine leather travelling case, pointing out that the recipient clearly demonstrated in his own person the concluding words of his address as he had won honours all through his High School and University career not only in the pursuit of his studies, but also in the realm of sport where he had achieved equally outstanding success. Mr. Beatty referred to Mr. Leal as one of Tweed's most brilliant sons, who, quite unspoiled by the long series of successes which he had achieved, showed clearly why the Board of Governors had awarded him a Rhodes Scholarship.

SCHOOL CONCERT HELD AT MADOC

Musical Program and Operetta "Happy Hearts" Presented by Pupils

On Friday night a capacity crowd attended Madoc Public School concert which was held in the Assembly Hall of Madoc High School. With Mr. Kenneth Nicol, chairman of the School Board acting as chairman for the evening a splendid musical program was given by the pupils all taking part. Part one of the program consisted of popular songs from "Gulliver's Travels," "The Wizard of Oz" and "Snow White." This part was given chiefly by the pupils of the junior grades and much credit goes to their music teacher, Mrs. Blanche Alexander. After an intermission an operetta "Happy Hearts" was presented by the pupils of grades 6, 7 and 8 with Phyllis Beatty and James Watson taking the leading parts. Short addresses were given by Mr. Adam Maguire, inspector for Centre Hastings and Mr. Jas. Irwin, principal of Madoc Public School. Mr. Irwin expressed his appreciation of the audience who had come to see and hear the pupils, and the splendid advancement being made in the teaching of music in Madoc School under the music teacher, Mrs. Alexander. Thanks were expressed to the members of the staff and Mrs. Jennie Pincock of Kitchener, who acted as pianist throughout the evening. The proceeds of the concert will be used to purchase musical instruments for the class rooms.

On Friday night the Young Farmers' Club held a very successful dance in Madoc armouries. Splendid music was supplied by the Austin orchestra of Wooler. Visitors were present from the surrounding villages and community.

This airview of Paris (now menaced by invading German armies) shows some of the principal and historic structures in the French capital, which is the third largest city in the world. Preparedness against a possible parachute-troop invasion of the British Isles sees the mobilization of British men beyond military age into home guards, ordered to shoot or capture any enemy parachutists they see. ### At Present in Fifth Place and Playing Smart Baseball

CARDINALS COMING

Bobby Feller Checks Yankees With a Four-Hitter, Winning 4-1

By SID FEDER

Associated Press Sports Writer

Stranger, you had better smile when you say they're the "Phoolish Phillies" these days.

The once-collapsible Quaker City set in the National League refuses to roll over and play dead any more. Doc Prothro, the good dentist, yanked a couple of ailing "teeth" from his infield, put in a right nifty bridge as replacement, and, what with a fair set of young pitchers, his boys are really snapping at the opposition.

The Phils have taken four of the five starts on their current home stand, topping it off with a 6-5 decision over the Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday. Right now they're up there in fifth place, a strange place for the Phils.

The Phils came to life April 30, when Doc came up with Bob Bragan (fresh from Pensacola) at shortstop, and Art Mahan (out of Louisville) for first base. With the revamped infield and good flinging by Kirby Highbe, Ike Pearson and Hugh Mulachy, the Phils have come up with seven wins in 13 starts.

Bennie Warren, a bench-warming catching hopeful, singled with the bases loaded in the ninth to whip the bungling Bucs.

Chicago Cubs Now Third

Chicago Cubs spotted Brooklyn Dodgers five runs in a third inning rally, and then came on to win out 7-6 in the 10th on Rip Russell's homer with a mate aboard, thereby climbing back into third place in the league standings. The Reds gave Bucky Walters his sixth straight victory, beating Boston Bees 8-4.

St. Louis Cardinals, after blowing a three-run lead, tied it up on Joe Orengo's eighth-inning homer, against New York Giants, and finished on top 6-5 in the 10th when Orengo came through with a single.

The best tossing of the afternoon was provided by Cleveland's Bobby Feller at the expense of the New York Yankees. Bobby pitched a four-hitter for a 5-1 win over the woeful world champions.

White Sox Can't Win

Chicago White Sox did their darnedest to produce their first home victory of the season, but despite a five-run rally in the ninth, they wound up on the short end of a 12-10 count with Washington. Old Elden Auker was handed an eight-run edge in the first five innings, so it was no trick at all for him to pitch St. Louis Brownies to a 10-4 victory over the Athletics.

The highlight of Saturday's show was St. Louis Cards' 6-2 victory over Brooklyn, with Johnny Mize and Terry Moore each hitting two homers. Joe Medwick hit another. Monte Pearson hurled a two-hit, 3-0 shutout for the Yankees.

OPTIONED TO ROYALS

Cutting their roster down to the 25-player deadline, Brooklyn Dodgers have released outfielder Jimmy Ripple to the Montreal Royals on option.

Ben Hogan Makes Runaway of Goodall

New York, May 20 (AP)— The calibre of golf played by Ben Hogan in winning the Goodall round robin tournament the past weekend at Fresh Meadow is certain to place the Texan among the prime favorites both in the Metropolitan Open this week and in the National Open Championship at Cleveland June 6 to 8.

He made a runaway of the Goodall, in which he played seven match rounds against 14 of the world's leading money players. He took the lead with a great 68 on his second round and never was headed, or even seriously threatened until right at the last.

Hogan completed the seven rounds with a total medal score of 491, only one stroke over par-7[illegible] and with a final match score of plus-23. He had, in other words, won 23 more holes than his 14 opponents in the course of seven matches. He won 10 matches while losing four.

Sports Roundup

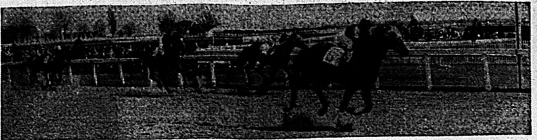
(By Eddie Brietz Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, May 20 (AP)—Babe Ruth has turned down a fat offer to front for a World's Fair eatery. ....There is a five buck fine waiting for any Cardinal who speaks to the opposition. This came to light when Herman Franks of the Brooks hailed an old Red Bird pal and the guy replied in the sign language... Joe Gould's $104,000 suit vs Mike Jacobs is so near a settlement lawyers now are sitting in on the daily huddles.

Add what's wrong with the Cubs: 190 men left on bases in 24 games ....Elon College winning 20 of 21 ball games is bush league stuff down in Eastbank, W. Va., where coach Bill Calvert's Highs have knocked off 37 in a row. They can't remember when they dropped their last one, but it was some time back in 1937.

Educational note: Rogers Hornsby has been added to the faculty of Ray Doan's travelling baseball school....The Shelton (Conn.) High School basketballers now have made 71 errors in six games, including a 24-boot streak in one contest .... The camera men say the most "photogenic" guy in baseball is Van Mungo of the Dodgers who can be snapped at any angle for a pleasing picture....On the other hand, the most photogenial, is Casey Stengel who still can grin into the lens despite the Bees' losing streak.

WILLIE THE KID WINS KINGS PLATE AT WOODBINE TRACK



History was made in the 81st running of the Kings Plate at Woodbine track, Toronto, when Willie The Kid an untried three-year-old crossed the finish line ahead of Curwen and Hood to win the Kings Guineas the first time he ever went to the starting line.

WILLIE THE KID EASY WINNER IN KING'S PLATE

Miss Mildred Kane, Owner, First Woman to Own Winner in History of Race

RING WISE LEFT

Curwen Was Second and Hood Third in Feature Run Over Good Track

Toronto, May 20—(CP)— Willie the Kid, an unknown three-year-old colt when spring training started, today was ranked among the greats of Canadian racing after a smashing victory in the King's Plate.

The colt, a first time starter owned by Miss M. A. Kane of Toronto raced to a handy three-length victory Saturday in the nine furlongs classic. He outsped the field in a brilliant stretch drive after racing wide at the stretch turn. H. C. Hatch's Curwen finished second, a length in front of Jack McIntyre's Hood.

After the race Miss Kane, first woman to win the Plate, was presented with the equivalent of 50 guineas in dollars, donated by the King, the major portion of a $7,500 added purse and a silver cup.

Split Favorite

Willie the Kid went to the post as split favorite with Curwen. He covered the distance in 1:55 2-5 and paid $8.70 to win.

The race was marred when Harry Giddings' Ring Wise was left at the post. Nipper Rowe sent the field away before Ring Wise had been locked in the Puett starting gate. He was backing up when the front gates flashed open and went through the rear gate.

Parkwood stable's Abydos was the first to show in front. He sprinted into a two-length lead, but stopped badly at the half-way mark. Curwen, following close to the pace, took over the lead. Jockey Ronnie Nash held Willie the Kid off the burning pace and made his bid coming to the stretch turn.

Willie the Kid swung wide at the turn and lost ground. Nash straightened out the colt and started after Curwen. The leader was caught a furlong from home and Willie the Kid coasted to victory.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Joe Orengo, Cardinals: His homer tied score and his 10th-inning single sent winning run home to beat Giants 6-5.

Bobby Feller, Indians: Handcuffed Yankees with four hits for 5-1 win.

Rip Russell, Cubs: Hit two-run homer in 10th to down Dodgers 7-6.

Jimmy Bloodworth, Senators: Collected homer, double and two singles, driving in three runs, to lead way to 12-10 victory over White Sox.

Bennie Warren, Phillies: His ninth-inning single with bases loaded defeated Pirates 6-5.

CALLING 'EM
Between the Lines
with Ken J. Colling

Although current weather conditions have been far from inviting to local yachtsmen this Spring, Commodore Maurice Callaghan hopes to get the sailors of the Belleville Yacht Club into a huddle sometime this week. "Usually we open our season's sailing schedule on Victoria Day and we hope to be able to carry this program again this year, but the local sailing craft owners will be handicapped in the matter of time to prepare for such an early opening this year, I'm afraid," commented Commodore Callaghan over the week-end. There is a movement afoot, which will be presented at the next meeting of the Yacht Club proposing the including of the "scow class" into the class "A" group of punt races this season. Ted Hinchey sold his scow, Allegro, to Frank Pepper and the latter is seeking a crew to sail the sleek craft that was built by the Hinchey boys. Incidentally we understand that Dr. Locke has purchased a new sailing yacht also.

Dr. Locke is also seriously considering the re-entering of the Dorothy into the class "B" punt sailing races this summer, after a season of inactivity and pleasure out north. Commodore Callaghan says there are only three class "A" punts available, thus prompting the movement to include the scows in that category. There's Callaghan's After You 3rd, Duke Smith's Joka and Harry Semark's Alaska. Incidentally Duke is non-committal regarding his future plans of sailing this summer, but if he feels sailing takes too much of his time, the genial Duke could turn his craft over to Cap Smith or Harry Whalen and permit them to sail it throughout the summer racing season. The weekly punt sailing races off Victoria Park, as provided by the Belleville Yacht Club sailors, are eagerly contemplated by a goodly number of citizens, who enjoy the competition and the cool refreshing breezes of the Bay of Quinte. It is hoped these Wednesday afternoon matinees will not be abandoned.

All decks will be cleared tonight for the opening of the City Softball League Wednesday when those two ancient enemies of the "mushball" diamond—Corby's A.C. and the Shell "Oilers" will pry off the season's lid and start the softball rolling. There is little doubt but that Johnny Bawden will get the pitching assignment for the league champion "Oilers," while it looks like Connie Harris as the logical choice for Gerald Barriage's pets, although Freddie Vasil has been labouring off the mound strenuously for the past week. Incidentally Corby's have signed three players from Tweed, including Catcher Orr, who will take over Coach Alex Simpson's duties behind the plate until Alex has recovered from his present illness. If the team moguls can agree the league schedule will be drafted sometime Wednesday.

Do you remember when Jack Sharkey, ex-Boston sailor, uncorked a terrific offensive and scored a technical knockout over Jimmy Maloney at New York 13 years ago tonight. The referee stopped the fight at the end of five rounds. Sharkey was recognized world heavyweight champion in 1932 but held the crown just a year.

Duplicating the efforts of Mrs. Ethel V. Mars' Gallahadion, Miss M. A. Kane's "Willie the Kid" came from away back to charge down the stretch and win the 81st running of the King's Plate at picturesque Woodbine track on Saturday. Curwen was second and Hood third. Incidentally Willie the Kid did not start as a two-year-old and therefore not much was known about him, but strangely enough the bulk of the money was on the winner at post time. "Any horse trained by Willie Morrisey has to be respected," chanted those tipsters, as they recalled Bunty Lawless and other winners saddled by Morrisey. Over 20,000 rabid race horse fans were at Woodbine Saturday to open the racing season and watch the 81st running of this continent's oldest horse race. Dark Comet, the favourite in the winter betting, was declared out of the race of Friday, but the strong manner in which Willie the Kid finished leaves little doubt in the minds of the fans as to his ability and it is felt Dark Comet could not have shaken off that great finish made by the 1940 King's Plate winner, who charged down the stretch to pass at least a half a dozen in his run to victory.

Four of New Zealand's best-known athletes are among those who have volunteered for active service with the expeditionary force. They are:

V. P. Boot, British Empire games 800-yards track champion;

T. C. Lowrey, former New Zealand cricket captain.

D. A. R. Moloney, the New Zealand test cricketer who captained New Zealand in the matches against Sir Julian Cahn's team in 1939.

"Lofty" Bloomfield, New Zealand champion heavyweight wrestler.

Gordie Cook, who has tended goal for the Belleville "Quintes" in the junior and juvenile hockey groups for the past three years, has joined the Canadian Active Service Force in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

SPORT SPICE — With no-run no-hit ball games having already been pitched in the two major leagues, up pops an amateur pitcher with a no-hitter on Saturday. . . . In the M-O League Roy Morris, hurling for Petrolia, entered baseball's coveted realm with a no-hit effort against Marine City, Mich. . . . It was the first no-hitter in the two years of the loop. . . . Rapid Bob Feller silenced the Yankee bats yesterday, allowing the McCarthymen but four hits as the Indians beat the world champs. 5-1. The last minute rush of money on Willie the Kid forced the odds down considerably on Saturday. . . . Cincinnati Bucky Walters made it six in a row as the Reds beat the Bees yesterday . . . and Walters' pitching record for the year is spotless, thus far. . . . We expect big doings at tomorrow night's City softball conclave, three of the five clubs demanding a "new deal" . . . and right on the eve of the league opening — smells like sabotage. . . . Mrs. Payne Whitney's Corydon beat Bimelech at Belmont Saturday.

Opposing Hurlers Pitch 5-Hit Ball and Game Won in Ninth Frame

Montreal's Sixth Place Team Cuts Buffalo's Margin to Half a Game

(By the Associated Press)

Newark Bears, hailed this Spring as "the team to beat" in the International League pennant race, already have been beaten more times than they have won, but all hope isn't gone yet. They're still strong enough to beat the Jersey Giants in one of those grudge battles.

The Bears did that stunt yesterday for the first time this season in about the best-played and most exciting game on the International League program. The score of a mound duel between George Washburn and Johnny Wittig was 1-0 and a ninth-inning home run by Alex Kampouris was the only difference between victory and defeat.

Washburn and Wittig each pitched five-hit ball. It was Wittig's third defeat of the season and the fourth victory for Washburn out of 12 games the Bears have won.

The defeat dropped the little Giants out of the league lead, putting them a new percentage points behind Rochester Red Wings, whose doubleheader with Toronto was rained out. Newark remained in fourth place, 4 1-2 games off the pace.

The Orioles came from behind in the sixth inning of the nightcap when Bill Nagel homered with two aboard and Gene Corbett duplicated the wallop.

Montreal's sixth - place Royals cut Buffalo's margin to a half game by beating the Bisons 6-4. Their second game was rained out after four innings with the Royals leading, 2-0, against Freddie Hutchinson, who was making the debut for Buffalo.

Chris Hartje and Don Ross showed the way to the Montreal triumph. The catcher blasted a homer and triple, good for four runs and Ross made three hits and two runs.

With the baseball season a month old, several players have forged to the front in baseball news. Earl Averill, of Detroit Tigers, tops the American league in hitting. Al Milnar of Cleveland, is one of the loop's leading twirlers. Harry Danning, Giants' catcher, is the National league's leading clubber with Bucky Walters easily the pitching star. Dizzy Dean, the Chicago Cubs' aging veteran, appears at the end of his baseball career. He has been knocked out of the box several times this year.

Justice Minister May Make Statement According to Letter

Toronto, May 20—(CP)—Justice Minister Ernest Lapointe intends to make a statement in the House of Commons regarding possible federal action against subversive elements in the Dominion, Attorney-General Gordon Conant of Ontario was informed in a letter from Lapointe today.

Acknowledging a previous letter from Conant in which the Ontario Attorney - General demanded internment of "fifth column" elements, Lapointe said he would discuss the matter in parliament.

Conant had contended there should be no distinction in law between enemy aliens and Communists, Fascists or Nazis, urging the Federal authorities take action under the Defence of Canada Regulations.

AT THE McCARTHY

"DARK RAPTURE"

If you enjoy a peek into the secret turbulent drama of untrod places, if you like thrills that chill the blood, if you are curious about strange barbaric rituals, if you are keen on seeing a movie which is the most exciting jolt of entertainment the screen has provided in over a decade, then see the feature-length expedition film made to thrill the entire family, "Dark Rapture" now showing at the McCarthy Theatre. In addition to the above, a fine second feature "Flight at Midnight", featuring Phil Regan, Jean Parker, Col. Roscoe Turner and Noah Beery Jr., is shown on the same program and brings to the screen one of the most enjoyable comedy-drama hits of the season. Latest Fox News events showing British destroyers attacking German warships at Narvik, Norway, French tanks in action on the Western Front, Canadian Regiment taking the Guard at Buckingham Palace and scenes of the Kentucky Derby, add variety to the program, which is one that we can heartily recommend to all.

AT THE CAPITOL

"THE MAD EMPRESS"

Portraying the beautiful but tragic love story of Maximilian and Carlota, "The Mad Empress" a Miguel Torres production released by Vitagraph now making its local debut on the Capitol screen.

Medea Novara, Austrian actress who has made Mexico her home, is starred as the tragic Carlota, supported by Conrad Nagel and Lionel Atwill. "The Mad Empress" tells the story of the placing of a well-meaning Austrian archduke, Maximilian, upon an unwanted puppet throne in Mexico in the 1860's.

The production enjoyed the unprecedented cooperation of the Mexican government, which in behalf of its first President Benito Juarez, portrayed in the film by Jason Robards, allowed national museums, historic palaces, jewels, furniture and even the Mexican army itself to be utilized.

On the same programme is shown a laugh comedy from start to finish "All American Chump" starring Stuart Erwin, Robert Armstrong and Betty Furness.

The Universal News of the world completes the bill.

The picture Paramount made behind sealed studio doors—from a secret script almost as cautiously guarded as the British crown jewels—will be shown to local audiences for the first time next at the Belle Theatre. It is, of course, the widely-discussed "Dr. Cyclops", Ernest Schoedsack's Technicolor thrill fantasy, which promises one of the most unusual movie experiences of years.

"Dr. Cyclops" taking its title from the one-eyed monster of Greek mythology, is a modern, not to say futuristic story, dealing with a diabolical scientist who discovers a formula for reducing human beings to bantam creatures one-fifth of their normal size and the hair-raising experiences of four men and a girl upon whom he works his terrible experiment.

The five victims—two of them scientists, the other adventurers—meet their fate when they dare penetrate the doctor's weird laboratory high up in the Andes mountains of Peru. They have heard reports of his strange experiments with radium rays, with animals as subjects, but little suspect his real object.

At first resentful at the intrusion, the doctor suddenly gets the devilish inspiration that here is what he has been looking for, Craftily he lures the unsuspecting fivesome, into his laboratory, switches on his infernal machine, and with a shattering blast turns them into helpless bantams no more than fourteen inches tall.

Dressed in the doctor's pocket handkerchiefs and frightened half out of their senses, the tiny creatures awake in a horror-filled world where every once-familiar object is five times its accustomed size. A scissors, taken apart, provides them with vicious-looking sabres. A housecat has turned into a ravening monster from which they flee in torror. A revolver is now a "Big Bertha" cannon with which to make a desperate attempt on the life of their hated master.

Just as extraordinary as the plot was Paramount's method of casting for the production. To begin with, all big Hollywood names were automatically rejected, for studio officials felt that it would spoil the illusion if familiar players were shown in capsule size. Although the production is one of the most lavish of the year, the cast includes no star names, but is made up of players chosen solely for their fitness to play the unique roles demanded by the story.

Heading the cast, in the title role, is Albert Dekker, veteran of stage and screen. A pair of lovers who become his victims are played by Janice Logan and Thomas Coley, two promising newcomers. Others include Charles Halton, Victor Kilian and Frank Yaconelli.

Fantasy and screen thrills are nothing new to Schoedsack, who was given the direction of the film. His past hits include "Grass", "Change" and the well-remembered "King Kong."

"And One Was Beautiful"

Alice Duer Miller's widely-read novel, "And One Was Beautiful" is announced as the second feature attraction with a cast headed by Robert Cummings, Laraine Day, Jean Muir and Billie Burke. Dramatic story of a girl whose beauty brings tragedy to all about her, the picture marks the return to the screen of Miss Muir after a two-year absence in which she appeared on the New York and London stage. Miss Muir plays a beautiful socialite, and Miss Day her younger sister. The man they both love faces prison to protect the older girl, from blame following a fatal automobile crash. The younger girl, torn between love for the man and loyalty to her sister, knows the truth and is in the grip of a dilemna that wracks her soul. Dramatic highlights include the fatal crash, climax of a series of intrigues in the Smart Set, the breathless moment in court where the girl hovers between silence and the truth, the pledge of the younger girl to her lover to keep silence, and the dramatic climax amid gay scenes in the haunts of rich socialites are shown.

The Belle News of the Hour with the latest pictures from "Over There" will be exhibited on the same program.

"It All Came True"

"It All Came True" Warner Bros. film version of the famous Louis Bromfield story is now at the Belle, with Ann Sheridan in the starring role and Jeffery Lynn, Humphrey Bogart and Zasu Pitts featured with her.

An interesting newsreel and a funny cartoon complete the program.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper pop lit a cigar with a sattisfied expression, saying to ma, My luck has changed, from now on everything I tackle will turn out so successfully that everybody will ask me to advise them in their affairs, and my advice will prove to be so sound that I'll soon be one of the most popular men in town.

My, such an unexpected burst of optimism, something wonderful must of happened, ma said, and pop said, It did, I found a half a doller in the street. It's the first time in my life such a thing has ever happened to me. I've found an occasional cent, and once I believe I found a dime, but a half a doller lying there beckoning to me all bright and shiny, I tell you it's a revilution in my affairs. I'm a changed man, everything I touch will turn to gold or at least to chromium or alluminum, and my profits will eat up my losses instead of the other way around, he said.

My goodness how marvellous, the rug will be just like a symbol of our new prosperity, ma said, and pop said, What rug's all that?

The one for the front hall, I really wasn't going to buy it, badly as we need it, because I've been feeling super conservative because of our new budget but it's a real Terkish kakerook rug and an irresistible bargain and now that everything is looking so rosy I'm just going to buy it, ma said, and pop said, Yee gods hold everything, I've got a sudden sickening impression that that half doller is counterfit.

And he took it out of his pocket and bit it, saying, By gollies it's true, it's as soft as mush, it feels like so much putty, my luck hasn't changed an inch.

Now Willyum it has and you know it has, and when you see that beautiful rug you'll be sure of it, ma said, and pop said, It's a womans world, that's all I'm sure of.

And he got in back of the sporting page.

Fish Not Color-Blind

Most anglers who use flies know that fish are not color blind, although zoologists teach that all lower animals cannot distinguish one color from another. This theory has recently been disputed by ichthyologists, whom Clifford Bower-Shore, a well-known disciple of Izaac Walton, interprets together with his own opinion as to the changing color of fishes, in The Contemporary Review of London:

"The latest discovery is that fish can even distinguish between colors. Frisch gave some specimens of Phoxinus variously colored meats and found that red was not favored, the yellow and grey colors being preferred. This is doubly interesting, because in my own experience of British fresh-water fish, red has proved to be a much favored color. My personal opinion on the factors in color change is twofold: (1) That fish are possessed of a color vision and a resultant power of color adaptation; (2) that coloring is increased during periods of high nervous stress."

As to the color changes in the fishes themselves he writes:

"It is my belief that the most nervous, individual fish are the most prone to color change. Fish kept in tanks for a good length of time, sufficient to become finger-tame, do not show the same degree of speed in color-change in respect of fear, or when removed to other tanks of completely different setting and color background; but, contradictorily, they have been found to be more subjected to exciting influences such as the sight of food."—N. Y. Times.

WALL STREET

New York, May 20 (AP).—Leading stocks pushed up 1 to 3 points in today's market, but volume was unimpressive. Near the fourth period extreme gains were halved or cancelled in many instances.

Bonds did better, along with commodities. Grain futures, pegged at Saturday's final marks, rose about 6 cents a bushel for wheat at Chicago before slipping.

Steels and aircrafts, principal beneficiaries of forthcoming defence spending and foreign orders, were in the forefront of the early climb. Among these were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Boeing, Glenn Martin, Lockheed and United Aircraft. Douglas wavered after an initial jump.

Distillers Seagram and Canadian Pacific, on the Canadian list, improved fractions while Dome Mines and Hiram Walker dipped. Canada 4s, among bonds, advanced ¾ point.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 20 (CP)—Toronto Exchange displayed mild weakness today in industrials. Mining and western oil issues showed little net change. Trading slowed down to a dull tempo.

Steel, senior oil and miscellaneous issues were the weakest of the industrial section and the foods and liquors were inclined upward.

Smelters dropped about 1-2-point and other senior base metals held steady. Losses among the cheaper issues were limited to a few cents. Gold shares selling off 5 to 10 cents included Wright-Hargreaves, East Malartic, Sylvanite and Teck Hughes and Buffalo-Ankerite lost 30 cents. San Antonio, Aunor and Kirkland Lake were stronger.

WAR BRIEFS

London, May 20—(CP) — Exchange Telegraph Company, in a dispatch from Goteborg, Sweden today said refugees from Norway reported the German army occupied Mo and the distict halfway between Trondheim and the Nazi-held Arctic ore port of Narvik last Saturday. They said the Germans shelled the town and at the same time dropped parachute troops, and that grenades were used in hand - to - hand fighting before a British-Norwegian force was driven out.

Berlin, May 20 (AP)—Germany raised a 3,000,000,000 mark credit today to finance her armies. (The value of the mark nominally is 40 cents.)

As in Poland, Norway and Denmark, the Reich has introduced dual currency in the form of so-called Reich credit bank notes in Luxembourg, Belgium, Holland and German-held parts of France.

Alexandria, Egypt, May 20 AP)—United States citizens were advised today by the United States Legation to leave Egypt "while there still remains an opportunity to do so," because of the possibility of war spreading to the Mediterranean area. At the same time competent Allied sources expressed belief there are "a considerable number of foreign spies securing important information here which would be of great value if the country were to be invaded." Persons suspected of "Fifth Column" activities were placed under strict police supervision.

gained their equilibrium in the final half-hour. United Aircraft got up a point or so. Contesting the trend also were Great Northern, U. S. Rubber, Caterpillar Tractor, Glenn Martin, Sperry and Curtiss-Wright.

Butter, Egg Prices Remain Steady

Toronto, May 20 — Only minor price changes were evident during Saturday's short session of the Toronto open produce market. Eggs continued to hold firm and butter was quietly steady.

The fair volume of fresh receipts cleared well under local buying on the egg market. Outside of 1-2 cent per dozen improvement in grades B and C in the graded section, prices were unchanged.

Demand was not heavy on the butter market, but there was enough buying to keep fresh supplies moving. Brokers reported that receipts arrived in light quantities. No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids traded at the previous day's price of 22 3-4 cents per pound.

Coalition Cabinet May be Formed in U. S.

New York, May 20 (AP)—The New York Times said today that President Roosevelt is "seriously considering the appointment of several prominent Republicans to Secretaryships in a coalition cabinet."

The Times said there is a "strong possibility" that the President, "faced with widespread National concern over the developments of the European war," in the immediate future would name Col. Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, Secretary of the Navy.

Colonel Knox was Republican Vice Presidential nominee in 1936.

The paper also raised the possibility that Alf. M. Landon of Kansas, 1936 Republican Presidential nominee, would be offered the post of Secretary of War.

'HOLES PLUGGED'

well-trained crew can fire 25 times a minute, have been rushed to defensive positions along the route of the German advance.

Change is Moral One

The big change in the general military position today is the moral one. The appointment of General Maxime Weygand, Marshal Ferdinand Foch's right-hand man, as Commander-in-Chief, has thrown new heart and fresh confidence into the French and British people.

Marshal Foch on his deathbed, advised that if France ever were in danger again to send for Weygand, adding "he has never been beaten." The French have now sent for General Weygand.

The 73-year-old general is described here as "quick, alert and brilliant." He is the sort of man who inspires confidence in a third army and lifts a nation from despair and uncertainty.

General Weygand's appointment, although it caught the British people quite unprepared, has been extremely well received here. They regard him as a man of determined action.

Forts Still Holding

The spokesman declared the Belgians have been fighting magnificently and that there has been no break through their lines. Liege and Namur, important railroad centres in Belgium, still are holding out.

"Despite what the Germans might have said, we have not abandoned any material. Our boys are now getting used to bombing and are protecting themselves accordingly.

"We are not losing many men through these bombing now, but the noise is great and unpleasant."

Ready, in the words of Prime Minister Churchill, to "face, endure and retaliate against" the Air Force of Germany, Britain concentrated on combatting that power and its possible blow at the British Isles.

Stricter control of industry, notably the airplane industry, was believed indicated by Prime Minister Churchill's statement last night that considerations of private property would not be allowed to interfere with the government's war effort.

Britain expected that the government would assume control of a large number of privately-owned factories now producing war equipment in order to intensify production.

May Discuss Plan

Mr. Churchill may discuss plans for stepped-up production when he makes a statement in the House of Commons, perhaps tomorrow.

At the same time Lord Beaverbrook, new Minister of Air Production, issued an appeal to garage workers to accept employment immediately in aircraft factories for assembly work.

Eight thousand children who previously had been moved out of London and other big cities were removed from exposed east and south coast towns to the shelter of Wales in the west; 2,000 others go back to London.

Farther, Britain relied on the efficiency of her big air raids precautions organization to make it impossible for massed Nazi bombing attacks to score effectively.

Strong Balloon Barrage

Observers pointed out that cities like Rotterdam—where, the Dutch Legation in Paris announced, at least 100,000 persons were killed by methodical German air attacks—lacked London's balloon barrage, her underground shelters and her auxiliary fire services.

On the offensive side, the Air Ministry announced that Royal Air Force bombers over the week end raided German communication lines and supply bases from Hamburg in the north to Sedan in the south. The R.A.F. centred its attacks on oil stores, feeding tanks, and concentrations of the dive bombers which form the spearhead of the Nazi offensive.

At least 20 German planes were reported shot down.

On land, headquarters of the British Expeditionary force announced: "The British front was held successfully in the face of enemy pressure".

Mr. Churchill, in his first broadcast to the empire as Prime Minister, said he counted upon "dogged endurance" to stabilize the western front with the help of the French "genius for recovery and counter-attack".

Weygand in Command

His declaration that "mastery can be gained only by furious, unrelenting assault" coincided with the appointment of General Maxime Weygand, a master of offensive warfare, to the supreme command of the Allied Armies.

Mr. Churchill indicated new Allied strategy by asserting:

"The Armies must cast away the idea of resisting attack behind concrete lines or natural obstacles. . . .

He voiced confidence the western front would be stabilized in time to draw on the full resources of the Allied empires to check the German Blitzkrieg. At the same time he warned his countrymen that, once the front was stabilized "the bulk of that hideous apparatus of aggression which dashed Holland into ruin and slavery in a few days will be turned upon us".

Referring to the air power which crushed most of Holland, he said:

"We are ready to face it, to endure it and to retaliate against it to any extent that the unwritten laws of war permit".

Able to Share Perils

Then he added:-

"There will be many men and women in this island who, when the ordeal comes upon them, as come it will, will feel comfort and even a pride that they are sharing the perils of our lads at the front . . ."

Nazi aircraft nosed over England's southeast coast for the second successive night and inhabitants heard occasional heavy explosions and intermittent gunfire as searchlights swept the sky.

At the same time the sound of guns could be heard from across the English Channel, where the great land battle continued. Shells could be seen bursting in the sky.

While 12 special trains carried 8,000 children from the English coast to Wales, two hospital trains from a British port carried to the provinces the first British wounded brought from Belgium.

Use "Gangster " Methods

Wounded related that Germany's shock troops were using "gangster" tactics.

"My platoon was guarding a railway embankment," one casualty related. "During the night the Germans forced their way across a canal not far in front of us. At daybreak, having got on our side, they began to move forward. There were about a dozen of them, each armed with a tommygun.

"One stayed on the bank to cover his comrades and the rest set off, each working entirely on his own in a fanwise formation.

"It was a suicidal job for men to undertake singlehanded but they did it. They worked quite independently, firing as fast as they could at everyone they saw until either reinforcements caught up with them or they were shot."

Open Homes to Children

Cardiff, Wales, May 20 (CP) — Humble Welsh mining folk opened their homes today to 8,000 English children rushed to the shelter of the bleak hills of Wales, away from the war dangers threatening the east and southeast coasts of England.

It was the second flight of the youngsters, for when the war broke last September they were taken from London and other large centres to what authorities thought was the safety of England's coastal resorts.

They arrived in Wales yesterday in 12 special trains.

The Welsh made their coming a gala occasion with brass bands playing "See, the Conquering Hero Comes," and "Land of My Fathers," and flags flying.

The bewildered children heard the greeting shouted in a strange tongue:-

"Croesaw-I-Gymru."

When told that it meant "welcome to Wales" they shrilled back excitedly: "Hip! Hip! Horray."

Motor coaches and private cars took them to schools and church halls where they were classified for dispersal to new billets.

Their "foster" parents who tearfully bade them goodbye in English coast cities had loaded them with gifts.

Tiny tots with gas masks slung on their shoulders clasped dolls and toys and quickly made friends with their new guardians. Language was no barrier.

"We do see a bit of the country, don't we?" remarked one little girl carrying a teddy bear.

Ten thousand children in all were scheduled to make the trip to Wales—but about 2,000 go to London instead because their parents at the last minute decided Wales was too far away for them to visit.

H. M. S. WHITLEY

The Whitley was one of a class of 15 ships launched as destroyers of war designed before they were re-armed as escort vessels.

The Whitley was armed with four 4-inch, high angle guns and two multiple machine-guns and had a speed of 30 knots.

The Whitley is one of the same class as the Valentine, which was reported beached on the Dutch coast May 15 after an air attack.

The Whitley, a vessel of 1,090 tons, was launched in April, 1918, and was re-armed in 1938-39 as an escort ship.

Carried Crew of About 130

A ship of the Whitley type normally would carry a crew of around 130.

ITALIAN POLICY

ters said that tonight's turnout in Piazza Venezia will be to welcome a large Japanese delegation come to negotiate a new trade agreement.

Responsible Italians interpreted Count Ciano's Milan speech as a recapitulation of Italy's claims.

Making his first public address in five months, in celebration of the alliance's first anniversary, the Foreign Minister promised a crowd at Milan that "Rome must say and will say its word in European events. But he told them decision as to what that word will be must come from Premier Mussolini.

May Face New Tasks

Ciano told the Milanese they might be called upon to "face new tasks" designed to defend Italy's sovereign rights and prestige and to realize her aspirations. He expressed confidence that Milan, where the Italian-German pact was settled early last May before its signing at Berlin on May 22, would respond enthusiastically "if and when" Il Duce gave the order.

In political circles the Foreign Minister's words were taken as evidence Italy is contemplating no abrupt move. Instead, they believed Mussolini still is studying the European situation, especially military developments on the western front, to determine how best he can serve Italy's interests.

There were rumors he might speak tonight from his balcony in the Palazzo Venezia. No official comment was available immediately.

Air Raid Precautions in North Italy

There was at least one sign that Italy plans to be ready to intervene at any time, should the occasion arise, in resumption of air raid precautions in northern Italy today. Blackouts and other defence experiments were ordered in the industrial regions of Milan and Turin.

Italy has had no air raid exercises since she took her non-belligerent stand at the outbreak of the war last September.

Italian readiness for word from Mussolini came from two sources.

Il Duce's newspaper, Il Popolo d' Italia, hailed Ciano's arrival at Milan with the statement that "Milan with firmness waits for Il Duce to call the people to the next test."

When Il Duce Commands

Giovanni Ansaldo, editor of Il Telegrafo of Leghorn, Count Ciano's paper, said in his weekly broadcast to the army:

"When Il Duce commands we will be ready and victorious."

Substitution of Charles Roux for Alexis Leger as undersecretary at the French Foreign Office is regarded as forging better relations with Italy.

Roux is considered friendly toward Italy. At the same time his long service as French Ambassador to the Vatican placed him on excellent terms with Pope Pius.

GEN. WEYGAND

tween the Sambre and the Oise just east of St. Quentin.

This became the main sector of the fluctuating battle front yesterday when it became apparent, that the western thrust of the Nazi army toward the channel ports represents the main direction of the German attack, a military spokesman said.

Action along other sectors was little less intense but was regarded by French military quarters as secondary. At the Aisne near Rethel some German units succeeded in crossing the river but were thrown back with heavy losses in casualties and prisoners taken.

The French fought under the leadership of a new Commander-in-Chief, General Maxime Weygand.

Weygand, 73-year-old veteran of the first Great War, was called to supreme command of the Allied land forces yesterday to succeed General Maurice-Gustave Gamelin as the bitter battle in northern France, described by military experts as "the greatest in modern times," approached a critical stage.

The situation facing the new Allied chieftain closely paralleled the days of 1918 when, as an understudy of the late Marshal Foch, he helped map the strategy which broke the back of the Kaiser's last great offensive.

Gamelin Not Placed

The communique announcing Weygand's promotion, which followed two conferences yesterday afternoon between Reynaud and Petain, did not say what post General Gamelin would take over.

Reports on the action around Maubeuge and Rethel led some observers to believe that the Allies might be launching a pincer movement in an attempt to cut off the pocket and isolate German troops now in France.

East of Rethel, the Germans launched their largest mass attack so far against the fortifications of the Maginot Line proper.

The spear of the attack was near Montmedy, the northwestern terminus of the main fortifications. The General Staff spokesman this morning said this attack had been repulsed at all but one point, with heavy losses suffered by the enemy. The Germans still held one small advance casemate.

But the central state of this vast theatre of war was along the west bank of the canal linking the Oise to the Sambre, running northwest to southeast past St. Quentin into the Oise valley.

Here thousands of steel monsters were in action in the most gigantic clash of modern cavalry-on-wheels the war has yet produced. The Germans were believed to have shoved in four to five armed divisions—a full army corps. Against them the Allies have moved their full strength in mechanized forces operating in this sector.

Advance Eight Days

The German forces engaged along this battlefront are the same that have been advancing for eight days under continuous Allied aerial bombardment and along twisted and bomb-marked roads. They are moving west, the direction now of all the main German attacks. All other actions are diverging to aid the flanks of this general westerly movement.

For the past two days British and French mechanized divisions have been moving up and are now engaged with their full weight. The resulting battle takes on a character absolutely new in modern warfare. There can be no question of a continuous front maintained by this huge mobile fort. They are functioning more like the heavy cavalry of former times.

They are flanked by detachments of mobile machine guns and motorcyclists who can be compared to the light cavalry and Hussars of the past. Their task is to drive forward as far and as fast as possible and "to do damage" to the enemy's flanks.

Millions of Horse-Power

But where in the old days in a big battle thousands of horses might be involved, here it is a question of millions of horse-power tained. Armored detachments drive forward, clash with the enemy and moving at speeds no horse ever attire under cover of darkness to avoid being cut off.

It was under these conditions that a few detachments of German motorcyclists arrived a few days ago near Laon and last night nearly to Peronne, 20 miles northwest of St. Quentin.

To grasp the character and scope of these operations, one has to divest himself of the conception of a battlefront which stems from the Great War of 1914-18. The modern war in 1940, is characterised mainly by the operation on land of forts in motion at an average of 30 miles an hour and of huge bombing planes in the air at enormous speeds.

Surprise Attack Fails

Southeast of the great battle of St. Quentin only local actions were in progress. The Germans tried a surprise attack against several Aisne bridgeheads near Rethel. At two points they succeeded in putting several detachments on the south bank. At all other points they were repulsed and at these two points the German units were surrounded and taken prisoner during the night.

The attack on the Maginot Line at Montmedy was preceded by extremely powerful artillery preparation. Then dense masses of infantry attempted to storm the forts themselves. It is here that the Maginot Line begins with its full depth of interlocking forts and casemates. The attacking troops were brought under the direct fire of the forts and suffered enormous losses without gaining a single advantage except occupation of one of the small advance casemates used only by vanguard troops.

Withdraw on Schedule

Along the rest of the Maginot Line from Montmedy to the French frontier, there was nothing to report.

In the north, the Allied strategic withdrawal was proceeding on schedule. The British threw off a number of German attacks on their rearguard as the main Anglo-Belgian forces continued their movement to join the principal French army.

The morning general staff communique follows:

"Our troops are fighting vigorously in the region north of St. Quentin to hold up the enemy drive. In the vicinity of Rethel, enemy elements which had succeeded in crossing the Aisne were thrown back during the night.

"In the region of Montmedy, German attacks were renewed with the same intensity. They were repulsed.

"During the night our bombing planes carried out with extreme vigor the plan for disorganization of enemy supplies."

Rowing Club Wrecked

The Don Rowing Club on the lakefront was wrecked with a loss of $25,000, part of the roller coaster at the Canadian National Exhibition was crumpled. Maintenance shacks were crushed and the roofs were lifted from the horticultural building and the emergency hospital.

The wind caught the roof and a siding of a shack in the centre of the track oval in front of the exhibition horse stable and lifted it over power lines and part of the roller coaster and dropped it on to the end of a military stable some distance away.

Damage estimated at $9,000 was caused at Thorncliffe race track where three stables were smothered. There were two horses in one of the stables but neither was hurt. Part of the fence at Woodbine race track was blown down.

Station Forced Off Air

Radio station C.F.R.B. was forced off the air for several hours when a 350-foot antenna tower crumpled. It was torn from its base.

Hamilton reported chimneys and roofs were damaged in all parts of the city. In the area around Port Hope 10 to 15 barns were crushed but there were no reports of any cattle lost. Hydro poles and trees were felled in Eastern Ontario and some districts were without electricity for several hours.

Telephone communication between Madoc, 25 miles north of Belleville and Tweed was disrupted. No damage was reported from Brighton, Napanee and other points. The telegraph companies reported some difficulty, communication between some points being impossible for hours.

day's trading. Similar action was taken by exchanges at Minneapolis, Kansas City and Duluth and the Canadian Government pegged prices at Winnipeg.

The war was cited by the directors as creating a market emergency and the action by the Chicago and other exchanges was taken at the suggestion of Agriculture Secretary Henry A. Wallace. He had requested the move by all grain markets, stating it was "a temporary protective measure against further price disturbance from current war developments."

The order of the exchange, effective at the opening of trading today and to continue until further notice, prohibits future trading in wheat, corn, oats, rye and soy beans on any day at prices below the close of Saturday's minimum prices.

Establishment of minimum prices for grain futures does not restrict transactions at prices over the minimums. The order of the exchange merely puts a "floor" under prices.

The Chicago Exchange's order prohibits sales below these quotations:

Wheat—May 79; July 78 1-2; September 78 1-4; December 79 1-4.

Corn—May 59 3-4; July 59; September 58 1-2; December 57 3-4.

Oats—May 34 1-2; July 33 1-4; September 31.

Rye—May 43 1-2; July 44 1-2; September 46 1-2.

Soy beans — May 91 3-4; July 89 1-2; October 77.

EIGHT PERSONS

Lawrence Phelan, 20, and a female companion, Goldie Staples, 22, were killed when a two-seater pleasure plane plunged to earth near St. Catharines at the peak of an electrical and wind storm that lashed the centre of the province.

The two occupants still were alive when witnesses removed them from the wreckage after the light monoplane had fallen from a height of about 1,000 feet. They died four hours later in hospital.

Phelan had rented the plane from the St. Catharines Flying Club. He had received his private pilot's licence only recently.

Other Deaths

Toronto—Margaret St. John, 13, was crushed under heavy tiles which broke loose from a truck her father was driving toward Camp Borden.

Ronald Mills, 21 months, was pinned under an automobile in a side-lane. Mrs. Jane Simpson, 82, seemingly stricken by a dizzy spell, fell 18 feet from a second-floor window of her home.

Kingston—Mrs. Mable Tucker of Ottawa, who had been in ill health, was drowned after falling from a dock.

St. Catharines — Mrs. Kathleen Richardson died of burns she suffered when a fire hit her home Friday.

Sudbury—Thought by police the victim of a hit-and-run driver, five-year-old Yvette Pepin was found dead on a road 12 miles north of sudbury.

SNEAK BURGLAR ENTERS 2 HOMES OVER WEEKEND

Leaves Trail Burned Matches in Pine St. Home and Eats Fruit on Charles St.

DAYLIGHT JOB

Twice over the week end, once when it was practically daylight, Belleville's burglar crime wave continued when the pantom burglar entered two homes on the east hill without stealing anything of value.

During the absence of the family at the home of William Dermott, 23 Pine St., the marauder gained entrance through a cellar window and ransacked both the upstairs and downstairs of the home sometime Saturday night. The break-in was discovered by the family milkman, who discovered a rear door open. Knowing the Dermott family was in Tichbourne attending a funeral, the milkman notified police.

P. C. Arnott investigated and found all doors left open, as has been the case in six or seven previous incidents when the phantom burglar operated locally. Many burned matches were found on the floors, indicating the marauder had used matches to guide his way around the house in the darkness. No person saw the lighted matches from the street, however.

Changes Tactics

Changing his tactics of operation somewhat, the burglar boldly entered the home of Mrs. C. J. Fisher, 302 Charles St., about 8.30 p.m. last evening while it was still daylight. Entrance was gained to the house by means of pushing out the rear door key and unlocking the door with a skeleton key. Here also all doors were left ajar, presumably to effect a hasty retreat in case of interruption. The doors were found open by Carl Fisher, son of Mrs. Fisher, when he returned home after church.

P. C. Ellis investigated and was told that the marauder had ransacked Mrs. Fisher's purse, but nothing of value was taken. Apparently the man was hungry, however, as a grapefruit and some other fruit were taken from the family refrigerator. As has been the case in former break-ins the phantom burglar took all available house keys from both residences entered over the week end. "He certainly has quite a collection of house keys by now," remarked Sergeant Arthur Harman today.

Eastern Star Members Worship At Victoria Ave. Baptist Ch.

Rev. C. T. Olmstead Preaches on Factors in the Religion of Ruth

Members of the Order of The Eastern Star worshipped in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church Sunday morning when a large congregation heard the Rev. Claude Troupe Olmstead preach on the subject "Ruth's Religion."

"Whence came Ruth, this woman of idolatrous Moab, by her desire for Jehovah, the one true God?" said the preacher. "She came by it just as you and I and every other human being came by our desire for God. It was implanted in her by God in her creation. Some of you may keep that desire for God pretty well covered up. You may think you have it hidden from the world and even from God Himself. But in the deepest moments of your life you long for God that you may have some solution of life's riddle.

"And Ruth's desire for God had been fostered by her knowledge of and association with the Hebrew family into which she married, and especially with Naomi, her mother-in-law. There was something about their life that recommended their God to Ruth. She recognized something different in their life from what she saw in the life of her own people. Instinctively, she associated this difference in life with the difference in their religion.

Strength of Will

"Strength of will is revealed in Ruth's utterance to Naomi, 'Entreat me not to leave thee....for whither thou goest, I will go....thy God shall be my God....' A strong will is necessary to a true life. We have seen many life tragedies for want of a strong will directed by Jesus Christ. Such a will is based on faith in God. Your determination for God may cost you dearly; but when you find that it crowns life with the fulness of blessing you will say that it was a hundred times worth while.

Her Religion

"Desire for God, decision for God, determination of the whole life Godward, these are the elements that made of Ruth's religion and her life a success. These are the factors that must enter into every successful Christian life.

"Will you, therefore, by the grace of Jesus Christ, allow your desire for God to ripen into decision for God and follow that, by the power of the Holy Spirit, with the determination of your whole life Godward. If you will do so, God will crown your life with sovereign power in building the Kingdom of Christ among the children of men."

An anthem was pleasingly rendered by the choir and Mr. John W. Deacon was heard in a solo "O Love That Wilt Not Let Me Go" that appropriately fitted in with the subject of the sermon.

Soldier Takes Truck, Given Six Months

The efficiency of police radio in crime detection was clearly demonstrated in Belleville on Saturday evening when a soldier was arrested when found in possession of an allegedly stolen truck.

Shortly before midnight, while Constables Taylor and Evans were patrolling the city in the radio-equipped police cruiser, Sergeant Arthur Harman broadcast a message over station CJR, Belleville police call letters, informing the officers that a truck bearing Ontario licence plates number 3145-C, had been stolen from McAnnany Street.

While the police were answering the call the truck, still driven by a soldier, was in collision with a motor car on East Dundas St. Later Ernest Potter, R.R. No. 3, Belleville, saw the vehicle being driven into the curb near the intersection of Front and Bridge Sts. He boarded the truck and removed the ignition keys and notified police headquarters. Again the news was broadcast over CJR and this time P. C. Taylor apprehended Pte. John Morley, of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, and held him on a charge of joy-riding.

Police say the truck was driven east as far as the Point Anne lane and back before it was recovered by Mr. Potter and Pte. Morley was arrested. Police also allege that Morley was under the influence of liquor and he was held.

Today in police court Morley was charged with taking a motor vehicle without the owner's consent and was sentenced to serve six months in the Ontario Reformatory after he had pleaded guilty as charged. Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., introduced Pte. Morley's military crime sheet before sentence was passed.

"I was never in a serious jam before in my life," pleaded Morley as he was removed from the court.

Police Blotter

Belleville police spent a busy week-end as the result of an epidemic of minor thefts and purse pilferations. David Russell reported the loss of his wallet, but could throw no light as to how the purse got out of his possession. It contained $15.00 he told police.

Late Saturday afternoon ten-year-old Raymond Davidson, 120 South George St., found a purse abandoned in one of "Keep Belleville Clean" garbage cans on Front St. Young Davidson immediately took the wallet to the police station, where Mr. Russell later identified it as his property. The money was missing. Police say the guilty culprit removed the contents and tossed the empty purse into the city garbage can, where it was discovered by young Davidson. Another purse was recovered also.

Lost Licence Plate

Floyd Greer, 121 West Moira St., reported the loss of the front licence plate off his motor car. The licence plate was stolen, while the car was parked in Mr. Greer's garage sometime over the week-end, he assured police. The plate number was given as 26-N-87.

James Ethier, 85 Pinnacle St., reported the theft of a card and key case last evening. The case was taken from Mr. Ethier's car while he was attending St. Michael's church and had left his car parked on Church St. The sneak thief was considerate, however, as he removed Mr. Ethier's drivers and owner's licenses from the case and left them on the front seat of the car.

Damage Considerable

Considerable damage resulted to two motor cars at the intersection of James and Bridge Streets, early Saturday evening when an automibile driven by Norman J. Brooks, Trenton, collided with another motor car driven by Gordon May of Brighton. Motorcycle Officer Ellis investigated and preferred charges against Brooks, whose car was not adequate brakes, it is alleged by the officer.

BELGIAN GOV'T AGAIN MOVED

Royal Family Expected Soon to Reach Ste-Adresse, France, Near Le Havre

Ste.-Adresse, France, May 20—(CP—Havas)— The Belgian Royal Family today was expected at this new seat of the Belgian Government, which installed itself here yesterday, following the precedent set in the First Great War.

Having moved from Brussels to Ostend last Thursday, the government decided to shift again to this French town outside Le Havre after German planes had bombed Ostend Thursday and Friday nights and Saturday morning. More than 100,000 refugees left Ostend after the first bombings.

On Thursday the departments of the Belgian Government took up quarters in various Ostend hotels—the Premier's staff in the Astoria, the foreign office at the eWillington, the defence ministry at the Bellevue and Britannia, near the Kursaal.

The French embassy and Swiss legation were located in the Littoral Palace and British embassy in the Imperial Palace. The Canadian minister to Belgium, Jean Desy, and his staff were next door at the Hotel Terlynck.

'THERE IS NO NEED FOR DISMAY' SAYS THE TIMES

Churchill's Speech Seen as Foreshadowing Stricter Industrial Control.

London, May 20 (C.P. Cable) — The Times, in its first lengthy comment on the Battle of the Bulge, concluded its review of the ramifications of the plane and tank blitzkreig today with the declaration that "there is no need for dismay." Other morning newspapers were confident but warned of the trials to come.

Meantime Prime Minister Churchill's speech of yesterday is taken to foreshadow stricter control over industry, with the state taking over control in a large number of privately owned factories now producing war equipment in order to intensify production.

The News Chronicle said that both owners and workers will be called to make sacrifices and forecast large scale labor dilution. The Daily Express prophesied the recruiting of women "in hundreds of thousands to the factory army" but added there is no immediate question of industrial conscription.

The Daily Herald said that if Hitler expends his huge supply of armaments without complete victory he has little hope of replenishing his arsenals, but the Allies still have great resources in Britain, the Empire, and the United States.

"So if we can hold on long enough, the titanic balance of forces now engaged may incline in our favor again," it said.

"This may give us hope—cool and rational hope as we watch the mechanized hordes piercing into the body of France and salute the heroism and endurance of the Allied soldiers who are risking their lives to withstand them.

"And with that hope let us work—and let us endure in comradeship with those in France and with all friends of freedom throughout the world. There is nothing the British and French peoples will not endure to win the struggle."

MILITARY HONORS FOR FOUR FLYERS KILLED IN CRASH

Comrades Attend Last Rites at Airport Before Sending of Bodies to Several Homes

PLANES SALUTE DEAD

Trenton, May 20—(Special) — The blue-grey of the Royal Canadian Air Force paid last tributes to four gallant comrades at the base near here Saturday afternoon, when full military honors were accorded Flight Lieutenant Harvey Jasper, Winnipeg; Flying Officer G. E. Auld, Toronto, Flying Officer J. E. Pidcock, Montreal and Aircraftsman John R. Kean, Windsor.

The four airmen were killed instantly early Friday morning, when the Norseman plane they were flying crashed in a muddy swamp six miles north of Grafton.

A May sun shone down on lines of members of the base personnel, as the corteges slowly wound their way from the entrance of the auditorium in the Administration Building through a blue-clad guard of honor heads bowed and arms reversed, that lined the roadway to the base entrance. Supporting parties followed the flag-draped caskets, as the haunting tones of the Dead March in Saul, played by the station band, filled the afternoon air. Staff and other officers walked slowly behind the corteges in the van of squadrons of personnel.

Overhead, the sun glinting on their wings, planes of the station dipped in a last salute to gallant comrades. In the distance the drone of airplane engines hummed a monotone, for training must not stop, even for death. Three volleys were fired over the cortege at the base gates, followed by the Last Post.

Service for the dead flyers was held in the auditorium of the base, where comrades and friends of the victims crowded to pay a last tribute. Captain, the Rev. W. J. Province, chaplain of the base was in charge and briefly eulogised the deceased airmen. After the service and tributes by the personnel, the caskets were taken to the George H. Cobley Funeral Home, Trenton from which place they were expressed to the homes of the dead officers.

AUTHORITIES PUSH PROBE OF FIRE

Police Silent on Outcome of Inquiry of Fire at Glace Bay, N.S.

Glace Bay, N.S., May 20—(CP)—Authorities pushed an investigation today into a $200,000 fire that destroyed the Dominion Coal Company's big general machine shop here and threw 260 men out of work.

Police were silent on the outcome of inquiries that opened soon after the fire broke out late yesterday, but it was known they already had detained one man and questioned him. The man, described as a book salesman who arrived here recently, was released last night.

For the Provincial Government, S. S. Wright, Chief Fire Marshal for Nova Scotia, will open an official inquiry.

The fire, which apparently started in some waste in the forge department of the machine shop, threatened nearby buildings before firemen brought it under control. No other structures were damaged badly.

H. J. Kelley of Sydney, General Manager of the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation, Dominion Coal's parent company, said the loss would be "about $200,000."

New York, May 20 (AP)—Fifty-three well known Americans have accepted invitations from a Kansas newspaper editor, William Allen White, to join a "committee to defend America by aiding the Allies." it was announced today. # Prime Minister May Announce Formation of Third Division In Speaking to the House

Ottawa, May 20.—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King is expected to announce an intensification of Canada's war effort all along the line when he speaks in the House of Commons today and the formation of a 3rd Division in the Canadian Active Service forces looms as a strong possibility for the immediate future.

In the naval, military, air and supply spheres action to speed the application of Canada's manpower and resources to the task of winning the war is afoot.

The latest war developments emphasize the need for land forces as well as air forces. The 1st Canadian Division is ready for a shift to France and a 3rd division would be raised to replace the 2nd when the latter is sent to England.

The Prime Minister may announce this step today, in addition to outlining progress in air training, in the development of a defensive naval force and in the acquisition of munitions and supplies.

As at present organized, the Canadian Militia contains enough units for six divisions. Two divisions have been mobilized along with sufficient auxiliary and corps troops to form an army corps, which may consist of from two to five divisions

The standing plan is that as one division proceeds to the fighting area another should be in an advanced stage of training and a third should be mobilized. In the first Great War Canada maintained four divisions in France comprising a Canadian Army corps.

With the British Commonwealth Air Training plan requiring larger and larger classes of recruits each month as it expands and with reinforcements being raised for the 1st division and other units overseas, recruiting in Canada will be more active in the next few weeks. There is virtually no recruiting now except for the Royal Canadian Air force.

Recruiting officers have been appointed in some military districts and others will be appointed soon.

Canadian Sergt. Tells Prisoners Goebbels 'Kidding the Troops'

Nazis Believed None of Canadian First Division Had Arrived in England

MADE SERGT. LAUGH

By SAM ROBERTSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 20 (C.P. Cable)—The Nazi propaganda mill has lead the people of Germany to believe that Canadian troops have not yet reached the United Kingdom, according to German prisoners of war.

A Sergeant-Major of the Canadian 1st. Division who recounted for The Canadian Press today a talk he had with five men rescued from a destroyed Nazi submarine said they were amazed at the sight of "Canada" shoulder badges on his battle dress.

"They couldn't believe their eyes" the sergeant said, "and I had a difficult time convincing them that I was really Canadian. They had been fed two false reports. At first they were told that Canada was not actively engaging in the war. Later they were informed that all 1st. Canadian Division troopships were torpedoed by U-boats in the Atlantic."

The sergeant chuckled.

"I took great pleasure in telling them that Goebbels has been kidding the troops," he said.

Cannot Reveal Identity

The sergeant, whose identity cannot be revealed for military reasons, talked with the prisoners during a sightseeing tour of the north. He visited a civilian prison where they were held pending transfer to a regular internment camp. He is from Kitchener, Ont., and speaks German.

Four of the Nazis were "mere boys still in their teens," the Canadian said. They told him they had not relished submarine duty "because of the ruthlessness of the U-boat campaign they were commanded to carry out." They were glad the war was over for them, and did not mind being in prison once they learned they were not going to be shot.

The sergeant said the men had been warned that capture by the British would mean quick execution by a firing squad.

"The first few days they were held," the Canadian said the Nazis told him, "they thought their time had come whenever the cell doors opened. But as the days went by—days that brought regular meals and limbering up exercises in the prison gymnasium—they soon realized that Goebbels had been kidding them in that too."

ONE INJURED IN CAR CRASH

Accident Occurs at Intersection of Dufferin and Dundas Sts. in Trenton

One person is in the hospital and several others sustained injuries as the result of a motor collision at the intersection of Dufferin and Dundas Streets in Trenton late last evening. Nineteen-year-old Gilbert Weese, Stanley Street, Trenton, sustained deep scalp lacerations and a badly cut forehead and was rendered into a semi-conscious condition during the accident. Weese was rushed to the Belleville General Hospital, where he was said to be suffering from the loss of blood resulting in weakness, Dr. G. S. Cronk reported today.

Weese was riding in an automobile driven by John H. Scriven of Smithfield, when their car was in collision with another car, driven by George McCaw, of Picton. The latter vehicle was emerging off Dufferin Street when the collision occurred. The impact was so terrific, that it resulted in the McCaw car being forced over the curb, where it struck a pole and turned over. Both cars were reduced to a heap of wreckage and ruins, while all occupants sustained some degree of injuries and needed medical attention.

Chief Bain, of Trenton, today stated that a charge of reckless driving would be preferred against Scriven. 'He was apparently driving at too fast a rate of speed, I would estimate," commented Chief Bain.

NAZI OBJECTIVE TO SMASH THRU TO CHANNEL PORT

General Weygand's Problem Now is to Block the Rapidly Moving German Push

London, May 20 (CP)—The Germans seem to hope to be able to smash through to the English Channel at Calais, according to a review of the situation today by the military correspondent of Reuters News Agency.

The German drive into France has altered its direction twice since it began, yet still retains its smashing momentum, he wrote. The immediate hope is that this momentum will slacken as the enemy tanks with all their accompanying vehicles get farther from their depots of supply.

The Germans are now thrusting due west at St. Quentin and Le Cateau, and it would appear their plan is to reach the sea via Arras and Calais. In this manner they might hope to separate the French from the British and Belgian armies, but the latter are also highly mechanized and have been moving into new positions with utmost speed since the breach through at Sedan.

If this tank vanguard, which has now reached Le Cateau, St. Quentin and Guise, can be checked, it will be difficult for its motorized infantry to consolidate such long lines of communication in time to resist counter-attacks before the masses of German infantry, which are now making forced marches in the rear, can come up.

These German infantry divisions are organized on the old pattern; and 80 per cent of their transport is still horse drawn. The men, however, are exceptionally hardy and well trained and are accustomed during peace training to march 30 to 35 miles a day with but one meal from a field cooker.

General Weygand's opportunity may occur with surprising suddenness. While the situation remains in its present fluid state it will be difficult for him to mount a strong counter-offensive, but when a halt is made either from exhaustion of lack of supplies, he might find himself provided with an opportunity to attack the long and extended enemy flank.

No doubt a counter-offensive of this sort will be undertaken in any case, which might have the immediate result of slowing down the vanguard of the armored divisions and causing them to halt automatically. They have performed miracles of endurance so far, but there is always a limit beyond which it is impossible to go.

Railways are vital to all armies, and the only two lines suitable for helping the German forward movement are two single lines which reach the Sedan region from Luxembourg. These are useless for the supply of large forces.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Daily temperature variation! Everywhere outside of the Arctic and Antarctic Circles, temperatures vary from day to night, as everyone knows. But this daily variation is great or small according to circumstances. Over the sea there is less variation than over the land, even at the same latitude: this is chiefly because the land absorbs and radiates heat more readily than water. There is also a greater variation in summer than in winter. This is due to the strong control by the sun in summer, its more direct rays then being much more efficient than the less direct rays of winter. It is seldom that a day in summer is cooler than the preceding or succeeding night; but this happens frequently in winter.

British Flier Hitch-Hiked Back Aboard Nazi Tank

London, May 21 (CP)—Captain Harold Balfour, parliamentary Under-Secretary for Air, in a broadcast last night told how a British flier "hitch-hiked" back to his lines atop a German tank.

Captain Balfour, who a few hours previously had interviewed fliers just returned from flights over France and Flanders, said the Royal Air Force pilot had bailed out of his machine after it was hit by enemy fire and landed near an advancing column of tanks.

As one of them pasesd, Captain Balfour said, the flier jumped on and only then realized it was German. Unrecognized, he stayed on the tank until it reached a point where he was able to jump off and make across country to the Allied lines. The next day the flier was back with his squadron.

Captain Balfour also told how a low-flying German Junkers plane machine-gunned civilian refugees near Lille. One Junkers machine, he said, enjoyed the protection of two Messerschmitts until three British fighters appeared on the scene. A Messerschmitt was sent to earth in flames and the other was attacked fiercely.

"The Junkers pilot rather than face a dose of his own medicine deliberately crashed his machine in a field," Captain Balfour related.

Pilot-Officer Lights Cigar When Challenged By German Sentry

Glasgow, May 21 (CP-Cable). — How a canny Scott, Alexander MacLeod, 24-year-old pilot-officer of the Royal Air Force, saved himself and a companion from capture by a German sentry in the low countries by coolly lighting a cigar when he was challenged, was disclosed yesterday on his arrival at his home here.

MacLeod and an Aircraftman Cox were forced to land in a Dutch village after a dog fight with seven Nazi planes.

As they were drinking coffee, a German armored car entered the village and the fliers hid in the cellar of a house for four hours and then decided to walk to Antwerp, 30 miles distant, after the Germans had left.

"It seemed as if our number was up when we came across the river," said MacLeod. "About 300 yards from the bridge a German sentry shouted a challenge. Pretending not to hear it, we sat down near the river bank. To heighten the atmosphere of nonchalance I pulled a cigar from my pocket and began smoking it. That seemed to satisfy him."

The fliers reached Antwerp and returned to Britain aboard a destroyer.

'Time Factor' Favors the Allies If War is Long Says Moscow

Moscow, May 21 (AP).—If the war is of long duration, the "time-factor" favors the Allies because of their huge resources, raw materials and also the economic backing of the United States," Trud, organ of the Russian Trade Unions, declared today.

"The productive capacity of the American steel industry," it said, "is twice as much as Germany's. A war of exhaustion, prolonged for years, would serve in the Allies' favor."

Hitherto most Russian comment has stressed Germany's favorable prospects in the war and the Allies' disadvantages.

Rome, May 21—(AP) — Italy, Germany's non - belligerent ally, appeared today to be preparing to enter the war as she ordered blackouts and air raid drills in her chief industrial areas for a three-day test beginning tonight.

Speeches of Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano in Milan and Cremona, in which he said Italy awaits only "the order of the day" from Premier Mussolini "when he will have decided upon it," increased the feeling among Italians that they might be called shortly to fight on one of their frontiers.

GERMAN SEAMEN ARE UNDER PROBE

Stranded Since War's Outbreak, Men Picked Up Paddling Kayaks in Lake Ontario

Rochester, N.Y., May 21—(AP) — Two young German seamen stranded since the war broke out, face investigation of their alien status today by Immigration Bureau Inspector Henry W. Fogarty.

The men, picked up by coast guardsmen as they padled two Kayaks in Lake Ontario, identified themselces as Gerd Spille, 27, former third officer on the Standard Oil tanker Persephone, and Fritz Wandmaker, 19, ordinary seaman on the same ship.

The pair said the German crew was set ashore when the war began after the tanker docked in Baltimore last Aug. 28. Since, they added, they had come up the Hudson River, through the barge canal and down the lake in the Kayaks.

Former Leader Of Labor Party Resigns Office

London, May 21—(CP-Cable)— Lord Ponsonby, former leader of the Labor Party in the House of Lords and Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs in the first Labor Govenment, resigned from the party today.

Lord Ponsonby has been an ardent advocate of Pacifism and several times has expressed disagreement with the Labor Party's foreign policy. He supported Neville Chamberlain's pre-war policy of appeasement.

Lord Ponsonby a great grandson of Earl Grey, prime minister from 1830 to 1834, as a boy was page of honor to Queen Victoria. He served in the diplomatic service and later entered the House of Commons as a Liberal. After the first Great War he went over to the Labor Party.

HON. C. G. POWER HEADS CANADA'S AIR MINISTRY

Will be Directly Responsible for Canada's Effort in Air Training Plan

CABINET ENLARGED

Ottawa, May 21 (CP)— Canada's military operations in the air, the spot where the Dominion is counted on to give greatest aid to the Allied cause, are to become the responsibility of Hon. C. G. Power, present Postmaster-General and a twice-wounded veteran of the first Great War, it was understood today.

On good authority it was learned Mr. Power, Liberal member of parliament for Quebec south, will head a Ministry of Defence for Air in that capacity he will be directly responsible for the Dominion's effort in the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, in reviewing progress in Canada's war work to date and detailing an acceleration of effort for the future, told the House of Commons last night an appointment to the new cabinet post for air would be made.

His announcement bore out reports current for some time that the government intended adding this portfolio to the cabinet.

The Prime Minister announced further enlargement of the cabinet when he said a Minister would be placed solely in charge of munitions and supply, a department now administered by Transport Minister Howe.

James Duncan of Toronto, only recently appointed as Acting Deputy Minister of National Defence for Air, will be the Deputy Minister of

NAZI STEAMSHIP CAMPINAS SUNK

Total Known German Mercantile Losses Now Set at 630,000 Tons

London, May 21—(AP)—An authoritative spokesman said today four British merchant ships totalling 8,355 tons, one Allied vessel of 316 tons and three neutral ships totalling 5,737 tons were sunk "by enemy action" during the week ending May 12.

"Some Dutch tonnage inevitably was lost as a result of the German invasion of Holland," he said, "but many Dutch vessels escaped."

The Admiralty, at the same time issued a report that the 4,541-ton German steamship Campinas was sunk by a mine May 10. It said this brought the total known German mercantile losses to approximately 630,000 tons.

An additional five German ships totalling about 25,000 tons were "considered sunk as a result of submarine operations," it was said.

The source estimated the total sinkings of enemy ships, whose names and exact tonnages hav not been ascertained, amounted t 190,000 tons, and the total German losses at 820,000 tons — approximately 20 per cent of Germany's pre-war tonnage.

Since the war started up to May 14, the source said, 267 officers and men from Nazi U-boats have been captured.

The spokesman said German mines reported by the South African government last week off the Cape "might have been laid" by a German surface raider, submarine or merchant ship.

VAGRANCY CHARGED

Toronto, May 21 —(CP)— Dan Trenyrff's was held by police today on a charge of vagrancy after he was captured by a citizen at the base of a 60-foot Hydro-Electric power pole. The Heath Street bridge nearby carries Hydro lines from the Rosedale district in North Toronto and 600 feet of lines were found to have been cut.

Police claim a search of Trenyrff's pockets disclosed a 1939 membership of the Communist Party of Canada. They said he would be charged under the Defence of Canada Regulations. He was remanded in court without bail.

William Harris-Smith said he heard a noise from a Hydro pole at the bridge and called out. A man descended and Harris-Smith grabbed him, holding him until police arrived. Trenyrff told police he had no home, that he was born in Greece in 1890. He arrived in Canada at Quebec in 1912 and came here in 1930 since when he had been on relief.

MINE LAYER SUNK CREW FEARED LOST

Admiralty Announcement States Minelayer H.M.S. Princess Victoria Sunk by Enemy Mine

London, May 21—(CP) — The sinking of the minelayer Princess Victoria by a German mine with officers and 31 men missing and feared lost was announced today by the Admiralty.

It was the second naval loss announced today. The cruiser Effingham became a total loss, the Admiralty stated, when she struck a rock off the Norwegian coast.

A statement said:

"The Secretary of the Admiralty regrets to announce that the minelayer H.M.S. Princess Victoria, Captain J. B. E. Hall, R.N., has been sunk by an enemy mine.

"The commanding officer, three officers and 31 ratings are missing and it is feared that they have lost their lives. The next of kin have been informed."

Invasion Feasible But Unsuccessful If Britain Prepared

London, May 21 —(CP)— The Daily Express, published by Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Aircraft Production, said today that while a German invasion of Britain is "perfectly feasible, it cannot be successful if we are prepared."

The newspaper said that British sea power, without air parity, could not resist an invasion of the British Isles "with absolute certainty."

"If Hitler conquers the French coast, his planes could escort troopships and drop a curtain of bombs to screen a point of landing," it declared.

"Land batteries could cover the Channel. A sea passage for transports might be mined on both sides.

"Hitler landed troops in Norway's western ports by decoy which deceived the British navy.

"The lesson of Norway is this: Invasion of Britain is perfectly feasible. But it cannot be successful if we are prepared."

Compton sent a letter to the commandants of all naval districts, yards and stations, all bureaus and offices of the Navy Department and to headquarters of the Marine Corps.

The proposed increase of 15,000 in shipbuilding forces, the navy said, would be distributed between the Uortsmouth, New York City, Mare Island, Philadelphia, Boston, Norfolk, Charleston and Puget Sound Navy yards.

There are 66 warships under construction or projected, including eight battleships.

SWEDEN MAKES SHARP PROTEST

Stockholm, May 21.—(AP)—The Swedish Foreign office said today a sharp protest is being made at Berlin against the machine gunning of a railroad station at Vassijaure, across the Swedish frontier East of Narvik, Norway.

Stockholm newspapers said a German seaplane flew over the frontier yesterday, firing into a crowd of fifty persons waiting for a train. One was killed.

Occupation of Narvik by Allies And Norse Expected, Says Report

Stockholm, May 21—(AP)— A shortage of ammunition in the German garrison at Narvik, Norwegian ore port besieged by strong Allied and Norwegian forces, is reaching a critical stage and occupation of the city by the attackers is imminent, reports from the Swedish frontier said today.

These reports indicated that the Germans might resist to the last man rather than surrender or retreat into Sweden.

New York, May 21—(AP)— An official Norwegian communique broadcast by the British Broadcasting Corporation today and picked up here, said "German troops have taken up new fortified position on a plateau north of Narvik, and have ceased fighting in the area between Narvik and Trondheim."

NEW WAR CONCEPT

France Will Have No Dilatory Procedure for Traitors, Saboteurs and Cowards — 'Two Great Peoples, Two Great Empires Cannot Die,' Premier Affirms — Names of Petain and Weygand Cheered by French Senators — British, Belgian and French Armies Are Praised

Paris, May 21 (CP-Havas).—Premier Paul Reynaud today announced in the Senate that the Germans occupied Arras and Amiens this morning.

Arras is 50 miles from the English Channel and Amiens 40 miles. Amiens is 70 miles from Paris.

Speaking of the German breakthrough at the frontiers, Premier Reynaud said that bridges over the Meuse were not blown up as a result of mistakes that will be punished.

"During the last 48 hours the German advance has continued," he told the Senate. "Arras and Amiens have been occupied since this morning.

"Our classic conception of the conduct of the war has come up against a new conception—motorized raids in depth and parachutists.

"The first effort is of an intellectual order. Decisions must be made. I am thinking of 1914. We ended up by winning after initial reverses. Every man and every woman must understand the seriousness of the hour through which we are living." Shortcomings Not Tolerated.

Bill Carrying Death Penalty For Treachery Ready For Passing

London, May 21—(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill announced today that a bill carrying the death penalty for treachery will be hurried through its second and third readings tomorrow to hasten its enactment as a move against any "fifth column" activity.

The Prime Minister said a bill covering the new local defence volunteers—a home guard against the threat of parachute invasion—will be introduced in the House of Commons tomorrow. He asked that it be enacted the same day.

Mr. Churchill assured James Maxton, Independent Labor, that if any attempt had been made to suppress criticism or opposition in the Commons, it was apparent that it already had failed.

The Speaker told William Gallacher, Communist member, that he would do his best to see that all sides were heard.

Sir Harry Lauder Sings For Troops

(By Sam Robertson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aldershot, May 21—(CP-Cable) —Sir Harry Lauder rallied what 70 years have left of his once great voice to sing for the Canadian troops today—just as he did for many of their fathers in the last war.

In his own inimitable fashion he entertained 1,300 officers and men of the 1st Division, Canadian Active Service Force. Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, General Officer Commanding the 1st Division, was among them.

They packed the garrison theatre to the rafters to hear "the dumpy wee man" sing his old Scottish favorites and stirring songs of patriotism until the perspiration streamed down his aged, creased face. Sir Harry will do repeat performances tomorrow and the night after so that a few thousand more Canadians may hear him.

With his r's rolling as thick as haggis, he told the Canucks: "I am very prood tae be among you. It's grand tae be able tae contribute a wee bit tae the guid cause."

CLAIM NOT CONFIRMED

Berlin, May 21—(AP)—A special communique from the German High Command today claimed that a British battleship and a cruiser were hit by bombers off the Norwegian coast by German aircraft.

(This claim could not be confirmed in London. The admiralty does not usually comment on these claims, since the Germans usually make them in the hope of obtaining information on British naval movements.)

WANTED TO MARRY IN POLICE STATION

A Peterborough policeman blinked his eyes unbelievingly at midnight Saturday, when a young couple came into the police station and announced that they wanted to be married. He blinked them again just a moment later, when the prospective bridegroom stated, that they not only wanted to be married but they wanted the nuptial knot tied right then and there.

Regretfully the police informed the love birds, that there was no one at the police station with authority to marry them and furthermore that before they got married they would need a licence and then they would have to wait several days before the ceremony took place. The disappointed couple then sadly left the police station.

EMPIRE DAY EXERCISES TO BE FEATURED BY CITY PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Belleville Public School children will mark the 121st birthday of Queen Victoria, beloved monarch through peace and war for 64 years, here on Thursday afternoon.

Appropriate programs which include patriotic plays, songs and drills will feature the Empire Day exercises. Teachers have placed special stress on the importance of the event in view of the dark clouds that are now hanging over the Empire.

Queen Victoria ascended the throne in 1837 and died in 1901 shortly after investing Lord Roberts with the insignia of the Garter for the British victories in the South African War.

GENERAL HEALTH OF CITY GOOD

The general health of the city of Belleville has been exceptionally good for the past few months, and continues to be so, Dr. G. S. Cronk, M.O.H. stated today.

"There is only one case of scarlet fever", Dr. Cronk said, "and that is being rapidly cleared up. The general health of the city has been good for some time, with the only thing to mar a near perfect record being the few cases of spinal meningitis that broke out a few weeks ago, but which are now cured".

Unsuspected Mine Field Found Off Cape Town

CAPE TOWN, Union of South Africa, May 21—An enemy mine field has been discovered off Cape Agulhas, the most southern point of South Africa, it was learned here.

The announcement was made in a Defense Department communique which added:

"Adequate steps are being taken to deal with the mines, several of which have already been safely exploded."

No evidence was available on the origin of the mines or how long they have been laid, and no shipping has been damaged.

It was recalled that there was an explosion, followed by the repeated firing of rockets of Cape Agulhas last October when an investigation revealed no trace of any vessel in distress. However, it is impossible to say whether that incident was connected with the mine laying now discovered.

NO PARKING IS PERMITTED ON RIVERSIDE PARK

Parks Board to Prosecute Motorists Who Leave Vehicles Parked on Westside Park

LIFE GUARD NAMED

Victoria Park to be Officially Opened on Victoria Day; Park to be Policed, States Mayor

Motorists who park their vehicles on Riverside Park in Belleville, or otherwise deface the property by driving vehicles over the lawns thereof, will be subjected to prosecution, it was decided at the regular meeting of the City Parks Commission held last evening. Large legible signs prohibiting the driving or parking of motor vehicles on Riverside Park will be erected along the west side of the Moira River at advantageous points in warning, the Board announced.

With the official opening of Victoria Park scheduled for Victoria Day, May 24th., the Board voted to renovate the Park buildings and paint them on the outer surface. His Worship Mayor Thompson, who was present by virtue of his office, promised strict policing of Victoria Park for the coming season. "Persons defacing or destroying property on Victoria Park this year will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. Annually this board has to expend the ratepayers' money to repair the buildings on this park as the result of damages caused by the malicious destruction of our property," stated Chairman W. A. Woodley.

At the suggestion of Commissioners C. B. Colling and G. R. Clapp, the Board will contact the Belleville Harbour Commission regarding the erection of a permanent cement abutment wall along the west side of the harbour with the idea in mind to make the harbour more suitable for summer touring yachts.

Deputation Waits on Board

A deputation from the Belleville Fair Board, consisting of President E. Bonter and George Jarrell, waited on the Commission regarding the erection of an additional cattle shed at the Fair Grounds. "We propose to erect a shed 200 feet by 22 feet at a cost of approximately $950.00 and ask that the Parks Board assume one-half of the cost of the building", requested President Bonter.

"Would your Society kindly put that request in writing, advertise for tenders for the erection of the building, and I am sure the Board will deal favourably with the matter," replied Chairman Woodley.

George Semark, of this city, was engaged as Life Guard at Victoria Park at a weekly salary of $15.00 per week. There were two other applications, but Mr. Semark's past experience prompted the Board to name him to the position.

Those present were Chairman W. A. Woodley, Mayor Thompson and Commissioners—C. R. Clapp, C. B. Colling, C. J. Symons and M. Callaghan. It was further announced that ex-Alderman Thos. Cushing had been named to the Commission to replace the vacancy left through the recent death of the late Commissioner Richard Snell.

Girl Guides to Canvass Belleville Homes to Get Orders For Doughnuts

This is Girl Guide Gift to Empire Week — Organization is Raising Funds to Buy Two Air Ambulances and Motor Lifeboat—Girls Will Take Orders for Doughnuts Which Will be Delivered a Short Time Later

GENEROUS RESPONSE WILL HELP GREATLY

Like doughnuts? If so, this week will afford an opportunity of lovers of these real old Canadian delicacies to not only indulge in their favorite food, but to assist the Girl Guides of this city in their national war effort.

For this week is Girl Guide Gift to the Empire Week. The lassies who wear the famous service blue of their organization, will devote all their time and efforts, in all parts of the Empire to raise funds which will provide the fighting services of the Empire with two air ambulances and a motor lifeboat.

All over the world, in the far-flung parts of the Empire, the Girl Guides have rallied to the call. They need, in Canada alone, a lot of money, and many and various will be the means of raising it.

In Belleville, the Guides and Brownies, under the supervision of Commissioner Mrs. L. B. Riggs, not only believe in the old adage that an army travels on its stomach, but they have implicit faith in the populace of this city that an appeal to their palates will result in a swelling of the Guide coffers.

So, along come the doughnuts. Great big golden brown fellows, cooked to perfection as only expert cooks can do it. The holes won't be as big as might be expected, but that part of the doughnut that surrounds the hole will compare with any ever made in this city.

Today, tomorrow and the remainder of the week, the trim Guides will call at the homes of the city. They will ask housewives, husbands, Junior, Mary and the Maid for their orders. Belleville has never failed a worthy cause yet, and in these dark days, when the very life of the Empire and this country is threatened, no one can do or give too much to aid the gallant lads fighting for their very existence on the bloody fields of France and Flanders.

Think well before you refuse. The doughnuts will cost only a few cents, and your contribution will aid a humanitarian cause. The Girl Guides of the city are leaving no stone unturned to make their drive for funds a success. They are not asking for tens or hundreds of dollars, only a few cents and for the expenditure, homes of the city will receive full value.

So when the young lassies call at your home, some of them may be a trifle modest regarding their request, treat them courteously, give them the order for one, two, three or six dozen of the delicious doughnuts, and they will be delivered to your home, fresh from the ovens within a short time.

The troops need the ambulances, the guides need the funds to supply them, and Belleville needs the doughnuts. Buy them.

Y'S MEN CONCLUDE YEAR'S WORK AS SERVICE CLUB

Impromptu Speeches by Club Members Prove Amusing; President H. Vaughan is Lauded for Efforts

PRESENT CHAIRS TO "Y"

Concluding their year's activities as a local service club, the local Y's Men's Club held their final banquet before launching upon the summer vacation period at the Y.M.C.A. last evening. In retiring from office President Harold Vaughan reviewed the year's activities, while Treasurer Jas. Miller tendered the club's financial statement, which showed the club enjoyed a favourable bank balance. The club presented 48 folding chairs to the Y.M.C.A., General Secretary J. E. Shortt accepting the generous gift on behalf of the Association.

Two-minute impromptu discourses on subjects selected by Y'sman Jake Goodman and related by the members proved amusing, as well as entertaining. "Bunt" Miller spoke on "My greatest fishing experience"; Jim Seymour on "Will Italy enter the war"; Norm Edwards on "My favorite sport"; Jack Wilson chose the subject of "Are you a hunter?" but failed to make it clear as to whether he was speaking on hunting deer, or dears, while George Pauley introduced a topic which brought some discussion relative to the increasing of the club's membership.

Seeks Support

President-elect Homer Thomas asked for the support of the members during the forthcoming semester, when the efforts of the club will doubtless be directed in war service to Canada and the general cementing of public morale. Past President Jack Wilson extended the sincere and grateful thanks of the club to Retiring President Harold Vaughan for his two years of untiring efforts as the guiding influence of the club in stabilizing the organization.

The evening's entertainment was provided by James Bankier, Belleville's talented tenor soloist and Alec Gordon at the piano. Jim Seymour acted as sergeant-at-arms and Reg. Scriven as song-leader. The annual Y's Men's Club dance will be held at the Country Club on June 5th and the club will again compete in the city service club softball league.

Portrait Presented By His Majesty To be Placed In College Chapel

A meeting of the executive of the Toronto Chapter of the Albert College, Belleville, Alumni, was held at the home of the president, Mrs. A. P. Phillips, with Rev. Principal Bert Howard of Albert College, Belleville, and Mrs. Howard, as guests.

A lengthy discussion took place on ways of establishing a closer relationship among members of the Alumni, particularly in the Toronto district, and the college. Principal Howard outlined at length the splendid growth of the college during the last few years, and assured members that the confidence placed in the faculty of Albert College, and the work they are doing, ranks second to none in the estimation of the faculty of Queen's University, Kingston, with which seat of learning Albert is affiliated.

The college is named for the late Prince Consort Albert, husband of Queen Victoria. At the Convocation on June 13, a large painting of Prince Albert, a gift of His Majesty the King, will be hung in the college chapel. Next fall the executive hopes to have a banquet, so all members of the Alumni may have the opportunity of fraternizing and promoting that good fellowship which, for eighty years, has been a watchword of the college.

St. Andrew's Y. P. Sponsor Fine Concert

Under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Young People's Association an entertaining as well as instructive program was enjoyed at St. Andrew's Church Hall last evening. Rev. Mr. Walker gave an illustrated lecture on points of interest throughout England, Ireland and Scotland which proved very instructive and entertaining while the program also included piano solos by Mr. Charles Kilgour solos by Miss Dorothy Carr and duets by Misses Jessie Cunningham and Dorothy Carr that were much appreciated. The proceeds of the evening will be used in support of St. Andrew's tennis club.

RED CROSS CABLES MONEY

Washington, May 21—(AP)—The American Red Cross yesterday cabled $500,000 to France to meet "the appalling needs of 5,000,000 Belgian and French refugees fleeing from the battle zones."

Wayne Chatfield Taylor, American Red Cross delegate to Europe, had telephoned headquarters here that many of the refugees, fleeing from areas "where the fighting beggars all description," were sick and wounded and that many were "forced to leave members of their family dead along the roadside."

School Life Should Begin After 7th Birthday Says Inspector

F. J. Pickering Addresses Rotary Club on Education of Children

TELLS OF TESTS MADE

Children should not be started in public school until after passing their seventh birthdays. This conclusion was arrived at in an address by F. J. Pickering Inspector of Public Schools for South Hastings, before the noon-day luncheon of Belleville Rotary Club yesterday. Mr. Pickering quoted numerous authorities, including the Committee of Seven appointed in Illinois in 1935 to determine the proper age for beginning school. That Committee had reported the proper age to start learning number facts was seven years and four months. The age for reading readiness was regarded as even later. Dr. C. Stothers of the Ontario Department of Education, in a recent circular had asserted, that the mental age for teaching reading by phonics should be seven years and six months.

Mr. Pickering told of his personal experience in starting his children to school each instance in the September following their seventh birthdays. He felt that they had had the time and energy to appreciate and enjoy school, and they had been consistently high in their grades.

Should Not Force Child

"We let our children learn to walk and to talk according to their inclination", Mr. Pickering observed. "Why then attempt to force a child to learn anything before attaining the proper age?"

"When learning is thrust upon children before their minds are fully receptive they turn to memorization and consequently had to be taught the facts a second time", said Mr. Pickering.

"Most children learned to use figures whether taught or not, but none of them learned to read without instruction", he continued. "Reading depended upon a number of factors, such as method, number of books, excellence of teaching, size of classes, abundance of teaching materials and the vocabulary of the child. Mr. Pickering told of tests made in the United States which had established the value of these factors in teaching reading.

Times Are Given

In nine states of the U.S.A., the age of admittance to school was five years and up; in 31 states, six and up, and in two states seven years and up. The average age for beginning the last year of high school in each of these states is 17 1-4 years.

In Ontario, said Mr. Pickering, the age of five years for beginning school was set by Egerton Ryerson. Nothing ever had been done to alter that minimum age, and it had become regared as the proper age to start children at school.

"Are we wasting the early years of the child's life which should be devoted to play and to building up a vocabulary?" Mr. Pickering asked in conclusion.

The speaker was introduced by W. J. Morrison, superintendent of the Ontario School for the Deaf, and president-elect Percy McGuire, expressed appreciation on behalf of the Rotarians.

President Howard Clarke announced a special meeting next Monday night to consider arrangements for the Regatta on Civic Holiday.

Jack Deacon read a communication from the Rotary Club of London, England, telling of their welcome to Rotarians proceeding overseas and asking that such members be notified.

Next week several members of Watertown, N.Y., Rotary Club, headed by Mayor Harris of that city, will be guests of Belleville Rotary.

Police Blotter

Two bicycles were reported stolen from the rear of the parking lot adjacent to Smith's Hardware last evening. The 'bikes' were the property of John Johnston, 213 Pinnacle St., and Douglas Young, 390 1-2 Front St.

Two other bicycles reported stolen to the police over the week end were recovered near Pine St. School grounds, where they had been abandoned, which prompted police to be of the opinion, that the bikes taken last night were also stolen for the purpose of "joy-riding" and will be subsequently recovered. In the meantime the owners will suffer the inconvenience of the loss of their favorite mode of transportation.

Mrs. Thomas Holland, Pinnacle St., reported the loss of the family lawn mower to the police today. The lawn mower was taken from out a rear shed adjoining the Holland premises. This is the second lawn mower to have been reported stolen in Belleville during the past week.

Marauder Disturbed

Mrs. Leonard Woods, 67 Cannifton Rd., was wakened from her sleep shortly after midnight last night, when she heard what appeared to be efforts to enter the front door of her home. Mrs. Woods shouted out an upstairs window and the marauder was seen to sneak away under the cover of darkness, without gaining entrance to the premises. Upon the return home of her husband, some 15 minutes later, police authorities were notified of the incident, but efforts to locate the culprit proved futile.

Police did not connect this matter with the more recent will-o'-the-wisp efforts of marauder, who has been operating as a phantom burglar in the east hill section of the city, however.

Nazi Tank Bands Wandering About Living on Country

British Spokesman States These Roving Bands Becoming More Vulnerable to Counter - Attacks—Attempt to Stem Nazi Thrust to Channel Ports

FRENCH HOLD CAMBRAI

Belgian Army Contributes Largely Towards Success of Defensive Battle Now Being Fought — Successful Bombing Raids Are Carried Out on German Oil Refineries

London, May 21—(CP)—An authoritative spokesman said today that the western front battle was "more confused than ever, with everybody behind everybody else's lines."

The spokesman declared that bands of German tanks are "wandering about living on the country" in a wide salient thrusting into France, and added that they are "becoming more vulnerable to counter attack."

Inside this salient, marked out by the farthest points of the German advance, he said, "the French hold many places from which they are delivering counter attacks."

Britain's home front rushed to greater efforts to help the Allies in what the British general headquarters termed a defensive fight to stem a German thrust through Belgium and northern France, apparently designed to reach channel ports.

The Health Ministry appealed for more trained nurses as convoys of wounded soldiers arrived home from the war front and the Ministry of Supply appealed to arms and munitions workers to put on "war speed."

The general staff's communique describing Monday's fighting announced the Allied forces in Belgium successfully beat back "repeated attacks" by German tanks in "the area south of the River Scarpe and against Scheldt positions."

It acknowledged that "the Belgian army has contributed largely towards the success of the defensive battle now being fought."

The 25-mile-long River Scarpe flows eastward past Arras and Douai in northern France to the Belgian frontier.

Further south there were indications the German thrust may have reached the road between Cambrai and Peronne, but Paris reports said French troops retained Cambrai, Peronne and La Fere.

A "main cable failure", the post office said has caused severance since seven o'clock last night (2 p.m. EDT Monday) of all telephone communication between Britain and the continental countries of France, Italy, Hungary and Switzerland, although it was initially ascribed to wire trouble. Diplomatic lines were said still to be in operation.

The Air Ministry described successful Royal Air Force attacks on oil refineries in northwestern Germany and a steady pounding with bombs of communications lines of the German mechanized offensive.

The Air Ministry communique said R.A.F. pilots showed "matchless courage" in battles with numerically superior German air forces and caused heavy German losses.

Build Up Hospital Machine.

In an appeal for more trained nurses Miss Florence Horsebrugh, Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Health, said: "We want every available nurse," especially nurses able to go anywhere the situation might demand.

She disclosed that the government is building up a "hospital machine" to care for possible air raid victims on the home front as well as wounded from the battlefields of France and Flanders.

"We don't know which part of the country will suffer in the event of an air attack," Miss Horsebrugh said, "but we must have ready flying squads of nurses who are willing to go at a moment's notice to any place where an emergency arises."

Supply Minister Herbert Morrison, urging the utmost speedup in the nation's effort to produce arms and munitions, declared: "The hour is critical; the nation's need is great—if we waste a minute at our desk or bench we sacrifice a life."

Increase Efficiency.

At the same time the Ministry of Home Security disclosed production of a new filter for civilian gas masks increasing their efficiency against smoke gasses, has been in progress for some time. Supplies of the new filters—the snout of the mask—are being sent first to what the government regards as the more vulnerable areas.

The Times in discussing the military situation commented:

"The plain reason for the dangerous position into which the Allied armies have been forced is not a failure of strategy or valor but a deficiency of material.

"The German onrush could have been stayed and their future defeat can be secured only by overcoming their immense superiority in the air."

ACCIDENTAL DEATH

Warminster, Wilts., May 21 —(CP-Cable)—A coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death yesterday at the inquest into the death of Private Williams Forbes Thow, 24, of Toronto, and a member of the Canadian Active Service Force who died of injuries when an army car he was driving, collided with an army truck.

occupied and fairly well equipped.

"He had started out a fortnight previously in civilian clothes and with only a packet of aspirins.

STATES NORWAY WILL BE REUNITED

General Ruge, in Interview, Says Sudden Nazi Seizure of Rallying Points Hindered Norwegian Resistance

Somewhere in Norway, May 21 (CP-Havas).—Full confidence that all Norway will be reunited in freedom was expressed today by General Otto Ruge, commander-in-chief of the Norwegian army, in an interview granted the Norwegian Telegraph Agency.

Describing the heroic resistance of Norway's army despite the confusion created by the sudden Nazi seizure of all rallying points, he said:

"Our units had to improvise as best they could. Those detachments and individual soldiers who were not already in the hands of the Germans tried to concentrate, but they had to begin fighting almost immediately, and soon such fights were going on all over Norway.

"Rumors of all kinds were in circulation and the Oslo radio, under the control of the Germans, worked systematically to increase the confusion.

"Allied troops began to arrive in such numbers that I considered the crisis would soon be over and our operations and those of the Allies would shortly begin.

"Then the Allies decided temporarily to withdraw from southern Norway and Trondelag. This decision was taken in accordance with a consideration which I cannot mention here. It had no doubt been well considered, but for the Norwegian army the decision was a heavy blow.

"Our troops were already exhausted, our stores of ammunition had dwindled and, left alone to face increasing German pressure, we could do nothing. It was a bitter moment for all of us.

"Those three weeks of fighting are weeks that I shall never forget. Think what kind of an army this really was. At Oslo, for instance, hundreds of men who could not mobilize because the Germans who were in Oslo streamed out of the city, collected under one officer or another, and formed a so-called company.

"Infantry, artillerymen and sailors collected at random and improvised equipment from taxis and chauffeurs whom they had collected, God knows where.

"Farmers' wives did the cooking and waited on the men.

"Our medical corps was conjured up under the leadership of doctors full of energy and initiative. I remember one in an improvised hospital I visited which was then fully

War Expenditures Exceeds 2 Million A Day Says King

Prime Minister States in Reviewing War Effort Before House of Commons That 2nd Division Would be Despatched to England Earlier Than Expected and That 3rd Division Would be Recruited

ANOTHER SQUADRON

Output of Pilots and Crews Will be Accelerated and New Aerodromes and Hangars Will be Completed — New Department for Air to be Formed — At Least Two New Cabinet Ministers Will Join Government

Ottawa, May 21—(CP) — Canada's war effort is to be speeded up through a series of new government decisions ranging from appointment of two additional cabinet ministers to enlistment of a third division.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced the acceleration of the national war program last night as he sketched for the House of Commons the Government's war record to date. At the same time he informed the House the war would cost at least $700,000,000 in 1940-41 — not $500,000,000 as estimated three months ago.

War expenditures alone would exceed $2,000,000 a day during the current fiscal year and ordinary expenditures would exceed another $1,000,000 a day.

Detail Plan of Effort

Mr. King gave the following detailed list of planned war effort which he said was "now being translated into action."

1. To advance the date of the despatch overseas of the 2nd division of the C.A.S.F.

2. To advance the date of the despatch of such further reinforcements of the 1st Division as have not already proceeded overseas.

3. To push forward the recruiting of reinforcements for the 2nd Division of the C.A.S.F. who will follow the division overseas at the earliest possible date.

4. To form a Canadian corps in the field, in accordance with arrangements which have been discussed with the British war office.

Besides the two divisions, and their ancillary units, the corps will include the necessary additional corps troops and will involve the despatch overseas of several thousand men, beyond those already mentioned.

5. To undertake the raising of a 3rd Division, to be available for such service as may be required in Canada or overseas.

6. To assign, at the request of the United Kingdom government, certain naval and military formations to active duty in the Caribbean and North Atlantic areas.

7. To despatch overseas No. 112 army co-operation squadron to act as a reserve for No. 110 co-operation squadron now overseas.

8. To adopt every feasible method of accelerating the output of pilots and air crews, from Canada, for service in the field, at the earliest possible date.

Certain methods have already been formulated by the Canadian government, both to accelerate and supplement the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan in Canada, in order that pilots, observers and air gunners may be made available, more quickly, for active service. Steps have been taken in order to expedite the preparation of aero-dromes and hangars.

9. To confer upon the Ministry of Munitions and Supply certain special powers which would not be accorded in normal times, to enable it to expedite the provision of equipment and materials of war, for the armed forces.

Awaited Return of Minister

He added the decision of the new department for air had awaited return of Defence Minister Rogers from his overseas tour. The new Minister will have supervision over the British Commonwealth Air training Plan.

Mr. King also said the Department of Munitions and Supply, now held by Transport Minister Howe would be placed under a full time Minister.

Mr. King announced these developments towards the close of his speech in the debate on the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne.

Mr. King had been preceded by Conservative leader Hanson and was followed by M. J. Coldwell (C.C.F., Rosetown-Biggar), speaking in the absence of J. S. Woodworth, National C.C.F. leader, John H. Blackmore (New Democracy, Lethbridge), Mrs. Dorise Neilson (Unity, North Battleford), sole woman member of the chamber, and T. L. Church (Con., Toronto-Broadview). There was no vote on the address and it was adopted unanimously.

Proceed With Scheme.

Mr. King informed the House of the government's expectation to proceed with an unemployment insurance bill this session. Eight of the provinces had agreed to the necessary change in the British North America Act and the ninth, Alberta, had been merely non-committal until it studied the report of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations.

The dominion's industries had received war orders totalling $275,000,000 to date, of which $200,000,000 constituted orders from Great Britain and her allies and $75,000,000 worth of orders from the Canadian government, Mr. King said.

Canada now had twenty shipyards engaged in building ninety war vessels, and the construction program was "well in advance" of schedule.

There were under construction 82 airdromes and 175 other construction projects including coastal defences and air raid defences.

The government had on order 9,000 motor vehicles at a total cost of $14,000,000, some 3,000 such vehicles had already arrived overseas. War munitions orders totalled $80,000,000, and construction of a large explosives plant was under consideration.

As of May 10, 1940, the strength of the Royal Canadian Navy stood at 952 officers and 5,862 ratings, including some 200 officers and men attached to the Royal Navy. The proposed total strength eventually was 1,450 officers and 10,000 ratings.

Seven Destroyers in Navy

Strength of the Royal Canadian navy was seven destroyers, 15 minesweepers, six anti-submarine vessels, 15 fishermen's reserve vessels, 51 other auxiliary vessels, three high-speed merchant vessels now being converted into light cruisers, and 90 vessels under construction, 54 of which were patrol vessels and 18 minesweepers.

He reported the personnel of the Royal Canadian Air Force as of May 10, separate and distinct from the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan, was 1,389 officers and 10,926 airmen including army co-operation, home defence personnel and those preparing for international duties under the air training plan.

One army co-operation squadron was already overseas and a second squadron was under training.

The Home Defence Branch of the service was nine squadrons at present and three additional squadrons will be detailed to similar duties.

81,519 Now in C.A.S.F.

Total strength of the Canadian Active Service Force was 81,519, said Mr. King. This included a 1st Division, now in England, of 23,438 with auxiliary troops and 24 personnel at Canadian headquarters in London, making a total of 23,878.

Strength of the 2nd Division would be 24,645. There was also a personnel of 16,282 in various depots, some 9,036 engaged in coastal defence works, 1,665 guarding vital centres and 6,223 engaged in various other duties. It could be said that more than 100,000 were on active service.

Reinforcements would be provided from 11 territorial units being organized, he said. Canadians were aiding in defence of Newfoundland "and other points in the Atlantic area."

Recruiting for the C.A.S.F. would continue, said the Prime Minister. Navy recruiting would be governed by the acquisition of additional vessels, and R.C.A.F. recruiting was linked with the air training plan.

In three years the air training scheme called for total expenditure of $600,000,000, of which Canada's part would be an estimated $350,000,000. It would require 40,000 officers, airmen and civilians to operate the scheme.

Did Not Appreciate Size

An apparently common belief that slow progress was being made arose from lack of understanding of the size and intent of the scheme. The public did not appreciate the full size of the plan, "the greatest individual effort the Dominion has ever made."

Mr. King said the government had taken all possible steps against sabotage by propaganda and other means.

Unless the government exercises its mandate to prosecute the war "with all our power and resources" the people may "rise in their indignation and demand a government that will," Conservative Leader Hanson said. "It happened in England and it may happen here," he said.

He criticized the government for alleged indifference to the part Canada should be playing in the war and charged that the 1st division had gone overseas poorly clad and equipped with obsolete weapons.

Several Questions Asked

Mr. Hanson asked Prime Minister Mackenzie King or his associates to answer the following questions:

1. Is the Empire Air Training Scheme being carried on with all possible speed?

2. When will Canada be sending men overseas under this plan?

3. How far is organization advanced on mobilization of the 2nd Canadian Division?

4. What provision has been made to reinforce the 1st Division?

5. Has Canada mobilized plant and industrial power in the Dominion to the utmost capacity?

People Alarmed is Claim

It was apparent the government was not interested in getting recruits for service overseas, Mr. Hanson said. The people of Canada were becoming alarmed at the government's indifference.

It had required a major crisis at the front to "shock the government into a realization that Canada was in the war, Mr. Hanson declared.

Mr. King denied the Conservative leader's charge that previous to the outbreak of the war the government had refused to consider what might happen abroad and had consistently emphasized that its defenc preparations referred to defence action in Canada only.

"Where was Canada's first line of defence in September 1939?" Mr. Hanson asked. "In Canada or over there where they are struggling with the beasts of Essen? We have only ever had one line of defence—the British navy, to which we don't contribute a single dollar."

Privilege to be Part

It was only under the stress of such times as the present that Canadians realized fully the privileges of being part of the British Empire.

"Why, Canada couldn't defend herself against Siam," he claimed.

"Why all the talk about the defence of Canada? Why not be honest and say our defence is the common defence of the British Empire?"

While Canadians appreciated the friendship and goodwill of the United States, Canadians did not want to see their country dependent for defence on even a friendly neighbor.

"If the day ever comes when you have to shelter yourselves under the Stars and Stripes you'll have to haul down the Union Jack and it'll never go up."

Recognized Difficulties.

Mr. Hanson recognized the difficulties in introducing unemployment insurance legislation but urged the government to "persevere".

"Don't take opposition (from the provinces) too seriously," he said. "I was always one who thought we should have a strong National Government. I always found the more power was given the provinces, the more money they spent and the more debt they incurred."

To find what the Fathers of Confederation really meant, the acid test of wartime had to be applied to the constitution. "Then you realize that the greatest power rests with the federal legislature."

He charged the National Defence Council had had plans ready for mobilization of four divisions but the prime minister had cancelled such plans.

Prime Minister Denies Charge.

Mr. King rose to deny that he had "cancelled any plan". Mr. Hanson said he had expected such denial but he had "some evidence" of such a plan being prepared by the Defence Council and cancelled by the Minister of Defence, if not by the Prime Minister.

"That statement is totally incorrect," put in Hon. Ian Mackenzie, former Defence Minister.

Mr. Hanson insisted this plan for mobilization of two divisions for overseas and two for home defence, was really a year before war began, although he accepted Mr. Mackenzie's statement.

'FIGHTING LEADER OF FIGHTING MEN'

'A man of action,' 'the fighting leader of fighting men,' are descriptions, in the London Evening News, of the new Chief of the French General Staff and the new Allied Generalissimo, General Weygand, who has succeeded General Gamelin. The new leader is a heroic figure to Frenchmen and is looked upon as possessing possibly the finest brain for strategy in the world. He it was who helped to map the strategy under General Foch which brought the Central Powers to their knees in November 1918.

The phase of the war on the Continent changed when Germany struck at the two Scandinavian nations and then thrust through the Low Countries. Today it is a vast war of movement. For the Germans it is waged on the principles laid down by Frederick the Great and his generals, a typical Prussian strategy of mass movement and ruthless prosecution without count of cost in human life and suffering.

The post which has come to General Weygand is perhaps the greatest in responsibility which has ever fallen to a leader and strategist. A new warfare is exacting heavy toll on the front and behind the lines, the war of aircraft. The London Evening News says "the new warfare will exact its sacrifice at home as well as in the field of battle. It will mean increasing losses on the battlefield, and from the fighting forces will come imperious demands for more men and weapons. It will call for relentless speeding up in the factories and subordination of every civilian to the needs of the fighting men."

This is the effort which is to back up General Weygand in his efforts to defeat the enemy. With this he will carry out the plan for smashing the enemy and directing the war in the spirit of attack.

THE TRAGEDY OF ROTTERDAM

Systematic destruction of property and life in Rotterdam by the Nazi bombers has been charged by the Dutch in a communique which declares that over one hundred thousand persons were killed in the port city.

These persons had been neutrals, who had barely time to know that the Germans were upon them before they were mercilessly slaughtered by that enemy. The vast majority were civilians, no doubt, but the heartless foe regarded this not at all.

How many children who were born to be blessing to this earth owe their death to the Nazis? How many children in the war areas where the feet of the Huns have stamped on liberty may never know whether their parents are alive and how many parents have forever lost sight of their children knowing not what their fate may be, whether death or life?

The heart of the world goes out to these unfortunate people of nations overrun by the Germans. All the kindness which is possible will be shown but how far short of the sumtotal of this great need which has come upon the earth because of the German decision to war on the nations, humanitarian effort must fall!

It is no wonder the heart of the countries so stricken is bearing a tremendous load of anxiety and sorrow. Vast sanctuaries will have to be opened up for those who have lost their homes and friends and belongings and worldly possessions.

Britain has been warned that the enemy may strike at the homeland by invasion and there has from the start been concern lest the enemy who has always shown his despicable character may resort to air raids over unarmed cities. The men at the front bear a tremendous responsibility for it is the soldier, the sailor and the aviator who must give that full measure of effort that will bring victory. And the people at home in this totalitarian war have their great burden too.

The cruelty of German tyranny is one of the most awful in history. Germany has set out to terrify into subjection nations by such bombardments from the sky as showered upon the innocent Dutch victims. She has earned a name which would make nationals of other nations blush with shame. The scene in Rotterdam should never have been enacted on this earth but for Naziism. This massacre will go down in history as the story of many thousands of martyrs to their love of liberty. The thoroughness of the destruction proves that the bombing was carried out according to plans.

AS THE WAR DEVELOPS

Everything which was said condemning the spirit of Hitlerism and Nazism before and since the war began has been proven over and over again in the past month which has witnessed events of tragic character in history. Norway, Denmark, The Netherlands and Belgium have been subjected to the Nazi hatred and to explosives of the most deadly character, all because they were free and stood on the paths which Germany chose to take to get at Britain and France.

The foe has created out of his spirit of hate and fury the most horrible creation any nation ever produced. The name of the Nazis must ever remain dishonored for their deeds. They have released as it were demons but it takes more than demons to quell the spirit of the Allied nations and the soldiers, airmen and sailors who throw themselves across the path of the mad nation. The Allied forces are solidifying their line and it is expected that there is a great Allied counter-offensive near at hand, one writer stating that the rapidity of the German advance has become an invitation to counter-attack. The German mechanized columns which are thought to contain the great bulk of that type of equipment the Germans possess cannot go forward without stopping as they will run out of fuel if they leave behind their supply bases too far. The Germans have been expending oil and other resources at a terrific rate.

While the situation is serious, as has been pointed out by the British press there is no reason for dismay. Events of the past few days recall something of the days back in 1914 before the Marne River was reached.

The British and French spirit is indomitable. The realization of the situation is not clouded and the two peoples are staking every effort on the battle against their barbaric and savage foes.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

MAY 21, 1920.

The officers for the Belleville Y.M.C.A. this year are as follows: President, Dr. H. A. Yeomans; Vice-President, Mr. E. R. McBride; Recording Secretary, Mr. B. F. Jennings; Treasurer, Mr. C. S. Clapp; Directors, Messrs. W. H. Merry, C. B. Smith, H. W. Ackerman, Charles S. Clapp and Ed. F. Dickens.

Up to 1816 only a very few people had taken up their abode at the place where the mouth of the river here joins the Bay of Quinte and which was called Meyers' Creek and sometimes Thurlow Village. Dundas Street was then the northern limit of the settlement. Beyond that were farms and woods. There was a bridge running across the river connecting Dundas Street West upon which the stage from Montreal to Toronto made the crossing as well as other traffic. Shortly after this about fifty United Empire Loyalists settled in the little village and a post office was established with Samuel McNabb the first postmaster. The place where the first post office was opened is not known, but the site of the first hotel is known to have been at the corner of Front and Pinnacle Streets and part of the building is now standing. Some effort should be made to mark historic spots in this city for the coming Centennial and Old Boys' Reunion this coming summer.

30 YEARS AGO

MAY 21, 1910.

Tenders are being called for the purchase of the residence and grounds on Pinnacle Street, belonging to the estate of the late Dr. Hope.

Miss Florence Bleasdell, who spent the winter in Belleville, is now visiting in Trenton.

Mr. Tom Power of the Kilties Band sent to the Intelligencer a copy of the London Daily Telegraph containing a full account of the death of King Edward. It is a historic number and the thoughtfulness of Mr. Power is appreciated.

Belleville's last official tribute to His late Majesty King Edward VII, took place yesterday afternoon when before a crowded church the solemn rites of the Church of England were conducted in St. Thomas' Church by the rector, the Rev. Rural Dean G. R. Beamish, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Fraser and the Rev. A. L. Geen. It was about 4.15 in the afternoon when the 15th. Regiment and the veterans left the Armouries, the Drum and Bugle Band playing the "Last Post," then the band of the regiment took up the strains of Handel's immortal "Dead March in Saul." Arriving at the church the regiment filled the centre of the edifice. The clergy and large surpliced choir progressed slowly up the aisle to the chanced and the service which included a part of the Burial Office was proceeded with.

40 YEARS AGO

MAY 21, 1900.

Merrick Sawyer, prominent and most highly regarded resident of Belleville, died at his residence, William Street, south of Bridge Street, today, at the age of 92 years, 3 months. He was born at Heath, Mass. At an early age he came to Canada and settled in Cobourg, where he taught school and later became bursar of Victoria Academy, now Victoria University. In the year 1840 he came to Belleville and engaged in the retail drug business, which he conducted successfully for 40 years and retired in the year 1880. His word was as good as his bond and his reputation was the synonym for probity.

At one time he was a member of the Congregational Church and later of the Methodist Church. He held the positions of trustee, recording steward, class leader and twice was superintendent of the Sunday School of Bridge Street Church. He was chairman of the Board of Education in the year 1875 and at one time was a Justice of the Peace and Town Clerk. He was in every sense a good citizen.

50 YEARS AGO

MAY 21, 1890.

The members of the Ramblers' Bicycle Club will meet at the market square this evening and take a run out into the country.

Mr. James Sawyer Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Johnson of this city, left for Port Hope this morning to assume the position of purser on the steamer Norseman. The Intelligencer congratulates Mr. Johnson on his appointment and the Navigation Company in acquiring the services of an excellent and popular young man.

At the annual meeting of Bridge Street Church Sunday School the following officers were re-elected for this year: Superintendent Mr. William Johnson; Assistant Supt., Mr. H. F. Ketcheson; Treasurer, Mr. W. Hopkins; Secretaries, Messrs. J. A. Conger, W. H. Chown, G. H. Pope, A. G. Vermilyea; Organists, Prof. Donley, Miss M. Higinbotham and Miss Drewry. The membership of the school increased by 54 during the past year and now numbers 828.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Indications are now that the German push through France is aimed at the English Channel. The objective is to cut off the Belgian, British and French forces fighting in northern France and Belgium from the main French forces fighting south of the great bulge the Germans have pushed into French territory.

The furious assault which Prime Minister Churchill forecast Sunday can now be planned by the Allied command. Undoubtedly Allied counter-attacks exceeding anything yet attempted in force will be launched before the Germans have time to bring up their main forces and consolidate positions won by the mechanized forces.

The possibility of a pincers movement on the bulge is no doubt being considered. In such a movement the mechanized British force in northwestern France would undoubtedly be an important factor.

So far the British have not been heavily engaged by the enemy and so are more or less fresh. They did march up into Belgium and back again but they were not forced back. It was a strategic withdrawal and the enemy never once broke through their lines.

Thus it may be that the British army is being saved for a decisive role in the concluding stage of the battle now in progress.

Marlboro Goes to War

Winston Churchill is now Prime Minister of Great Britain and Master of the Empire's war. The ambition of a lifetime has been realized. His political manoeuvres in the days of peace were often questioned, but his courage and relentless energy in time of war are beyond criticism. He does not spare the enemy in sarcastic speech or swiftly driven blows. He is fitted to ride the storm rather than to plough the dull, clay furrow of humdrum life. He is going to war. "On ne sait quand il reviendra."

There is resemblance, actual and prospective, between his career and that of his famous ancestor, John Churchill, Duke of Marlborough. Both were politicians, sometimes blessed, often cursed. Both were soldiers. John rode in the ranks of his cavalry at Ramillies, swinging his sabre like any trooper; Winston charged with the 21st Lancers at Omdurman. One successfully conducted a great European war; the other is about to do so. Both suffered political reverses. In 1712 John Churchill was practically exiled from England, having received a broad hint from very high quarters that it would be advisable to leave the country. Winston once suffered a crushing electoral defeat by an almost unknown opponent in a London constituency. He also had a reverse at Manchester, and for political reasons had been excluded from several Cabinets.

A point of difference is that John Churchill fought against France, and had as allies some German potentates, who were always very insistent that their more or less (usually less) valuable services should be paid for in cash.

Louis XIV of France had, like Hitler, an insane ambition to dominate Europe, and seemed to be on the high road to success. But in the years from 1703 to 1711, glorious years for the British Army, John Churchill defeated Louis's armies in a series of the most brilliant victories in military history. He had among his troops many Dutch soldiers, who fought well, as their descendants are fighting alongside British soldiers today.

His was the guiding brain of English politics and of the European strategy, both naval and military, of England and her Allies. He had also a very large finger in the Parliamentary pie, keeping constantly in touch from the battle front with the chiefs of the Government in England. He was, in fact, if not in name, Prime Minister as well as Captain-General in the field. With some differences in detail, there is a striking resemblance in the activities of John and Winston Churchill.

Louis XIV waged war like the gentleman and great King that he was. He allowed no Goerings or Goebbels at Versailles. In those days:

Battle were fought
With a chivalrous sense of should and ought.
In spirit men said,
End we quick or dead.
Honor is some reward!
Let us fight fair, for our own best or worst.
So. "Gentlemen of the Guard, Fire first!"

But now behold what
Is war with those where honor is not!
Rama laments
Its dead innocents;
Herod howls, "Sly slaughter
Rules now! Let us by modes once called accurst,
Overhead, under water,
Stab first!"

Thomas Hardy.

In leading the Empire against Germany, Winston Churchill will have a more difficult task than his ancestor. The French of Marlborough's day were the gallant gentlemen that they still are, but the Germans of today are a people willingly carrying out, perhaps "with a certain amount of relish," the orders of one of the meanest souls that ever disgraced humanity, a people who are showing all the cruel brutality, ignorance, and insensibility that they have shown again and again through the centuries. "Honor is not" with them or their leaders. Masters and men are equally guilty.

Hitler has said that the fate of Germany is now being decided for a thousand years to come. We will take his word for it.

There is an eternal danger to be guarded against. Certain weak-headed individuals in Canada and elsewhere will wish to be merciful to the German people in defeat. When were the German people merciful to anyone? History has no record of it. The only certain safety for the world lies in punishing this "wild beast", this robber nation, so thoroughly that it will not be able to raise its head again for Hitler's Thousand Years.

The modern "Malbrouck" will march to victory, as did another Churchill some 230 years ago. When the armistice bugles blow, the enemy will have been destroyed. It cannot be otherwise.

Then the task will be finished. "Malbrouck" will come home from the wars, and surely the spirit of John Churchill will whisper to him "Well done, my kinsman!"

Here may be quoted extracts from the final pages of Winston Churchill's biography of Marlborough. In future years similar words may perhaps be written of himself.

"By his invincible genius in war, and his scarcely less admirable qualities of wisdom and management, he had completed that glorious process that carried England... to ten years of leadership in Europe ... The union and greatness of Britain, and her claims to Empire, were established upon foundations which have lasted to this day... He had proved himself the good Englishman he aspired to be." —P. S. M. in Montreal Star.

Awakening

S.S. Washington, May 19.

More than untold hundreds of men have died in the last ten days, in Norway, in Holland, in Belgium and France. A world has died. The formulas and cliches by which we have been limping along have proved themselves tragically false. We must revise our thought and our action.

x x x

There is no such thing as purely defensive warfare.

This should have been demonstrated to all the world, first in Spain and later in Poland. Even the most willful must see it now.

The French have based their political and military strategy upon the idea of defense and security. Their defenses have cost them billions and are formidable beyond description. No Frenchman is willing to carry war to another country's soil, but he will die with superb heroism to defend his own.

There is a law of physics—namely, that a moving body has vastly greater power than a static body. In this world of machines, he who strikes first, with all the power at his command, gains an advantage which cannot be compensated by superiority of numbers (vide Spain), nor by equality of armaments if the latter are used purely defensively.

Bombing planes will reach their objectives in such proportions as to make the raids effective. If the aggressor is willing to pay a high enough toll of lives and machines, he cannot be kept wholly from his destructive work by pursuit planes.

Or, an air arm purely for defense must be vastly stronger than an air arm for purposes of offense and must be prepared not only to defend itself against the disadvantages of the surprise attack but to carry an equally vigorous attack to the aggressor's own soil.

The army of France is superior to the army of Germany, man for man, in training and in morale. It is greatly inferior in numbers, both of divisions and machines, than its political or military leaders dreamed or told the people. But that inferiority is insufficient to explain the apocalyptic advance of the Nazis. In the war of movement and mechanics the offense has an overwhelming advantage.

x x x

The independent small nation is a myth and presumes the absence of evil in this world. It cannot defend its soil, its institutions or its culture.

The small old nations of Europe, judged by any human standards, have greater justification for their existence than have the large ones. They have a higher standard of education, a more nearly equal distribution of wealth and culture, are less susceptible to catastrophic social upheaval, are more lightly taxed and are better governed; but whether they are hard, civilized and armed, like the Swiss; or civilized and unarmed like the Danes; or rich and casually armed, like the Dutch, they cannot sustain their existence.

x x x

Neutrality is a myth. It presumes the universal rule of international law, and this presumes the power to enforce it by nations stronger individually or collectively than any other potential aggressor.

Germany, a country of 65,000,000 people in 1938, has absorbed 63,000,000 of other peoples since then, many of them neutrals, by offensive terror or by offensive warfare.

The totalitarian state alone is capable of effectively waging the totalitarian war.

This war of a whole population against whole populations by every conceivable means of military, economic, propagandist and terroristic action demands, first, the complete subjection of war-making nations to a single authority; complete control over the entire financial, industrial and labor life; the turning of the whole people into a war machine, in which the complete subjection of war-making bottom is treated and paid like an army, its officers and industries becoming primarily munitions factories used only secondarily for the production of goods for human consumption.

Against this system, in war, no form of free enterprise conducted for personal profit and or in the interests of individual consumers, and no system of socialism conducted in the interest of the collective standard of life can survive.

x x x

No primarily commercial or primarily agricultural nation, or nation devoted to the production of quality goods, can survive, in modern war, against highly industrialised mass-production nations.

Commercial nations, like the British, supply themselves by buying what they need with reserves and credits distributed throughout the world. Since they have no control over the political programs or whims of their suppliers, they can never be sure that a congress will not pass a neutrality act or suddenly interfere with the normal credit system, and thus, in effect, blockade or partially blockade them.

x x x

The British airplanes are, figuratively speaking, Rolls-Royces—the Spitfire and the Hurricane. This war proves that a hundred Fords are better for war than fifty Lincolns.

The command of the seas may win a long war of attrition but it is no defense against the destruction of the nation that possesses it.

It is entirely possible that before this summer is over the British people will be confronted with the choice of giving up their fleet, accepting dictated terms or subjecting their factories, cities and populations to a reign of terror from the air unprecedented in human history.

The Nazis demonstrated first in Germany that their own population could be subjugated by terror, intimidation and propaganda. Wars can possibly be won by terrorism and by the destruction of factories and communications by dynamiters dropped from parachutes into the midst of a civil population.

The nation whose all-powerful leadership has no respect for human life has an advantage, in war, over peoples who hold life sacred, as the kidnapper has the advantage over the parents of the child he holds.

The power of persecution, terrorism, extortion and the holding of hostages has been demonstrated for seven long years to a complacent world washing and rewashing its hands in the blood of just men, or futilely rushing around with stretchers to pick up the victims.

Whole nations can be held as hostages in totalitarian war.

x x x

Military alliances for defensive purposes are useless against a huge union, singly directed.

Military alliances for defensive purposes mean division in command, lack of completely integrated financial and economic action, incapacity in striking power and an enormous field for disruptive propaganda.

The concept that money is beyond good and evil and that economics can function regardless of human purpose is blown up with the cities, factories and the bleeding bodies of men.

The airplanes that dropped bombs on Dutch towns were made in factories rationalized with American loans; the trucks that transported the aggressors over neutral frontiers were manufactured—some of them—by American-owned factories; the machine tools to make the machines on which the machines of war were made came, in large part, from America.

x x x

What does all this mean? That we must all be Nazis or accept the Nazi rule?

No—not unless Lucifer won the war against God.

It means that an era is over and that a new one has begun, in which the world will be united and free, with all the rich diversity of human cultures but with the rights of nations strictly limited and the world policed; or it will be united and enslaved, with no rights for any one.

It means that there must be as sublime an imagination for good and as great a will for world-wide justice and freedom as there has been for evil.

It means that this war is a revolution, which will not be won or lost in Europe, but won or lost on a world-wide scale.

It means that political action, at this moment, is as important as armaments.

The dark beast of the Nazi world must not be allowed to crouch upon its exhausted victims and feed upon them for new conquests. It must be attacked—first of all by the certain knowledge that it stands utterly alone and without friends; that all its victories are temporary, because men will not live under such contemptible rules; and that the full economic, financial, commercial and machine power of the United States is to be used, however long it takes, for the establishment of a world fit for human beings.

x x x

Those who are fighting must know for what they die; they must know that they are not dying as units of an expiring world but dying for a new world—our own new world, growing out of great traditions expanded and renewed, dying not for yesterday but for tomorrow, not for nationalism but for commonwealth, not for money, but for a decent human life, not for domination but for union with equality.

If we are not prepared to accept that responsibility, to dare for countervision, then give the world to Hitler, to his vast nightmare of servitude and oppression!

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

When the Spoiled Child Goes to School

I have in mind a father who was so fond of his baby girl that at any hour of the night that a friend or neighbour called, he would go up stairs and wake up the child to "show her off". You can readily understand how spoiled that youngster was and the difficult time she had in adjusting herself to the authority of the school teacher. The "behaviour" symptoms of this youngster were the result of the kind of home training she received.

The child going to school for the first time is confronted with a personage of authority who prevents him from talking, from lounging at his desk, from having a drink of water or going to the toilet without permission. He finds that he is not allowed to do things in school.

Naturally, experienced school teachers appreciate the child's difficulty but realize that for the sake of the youngster's present and future happiness and the happiness of others, he must learn that he has no special privileges.

The fact that a child misbehaves in school means that he needs to be "adjusted" to school life. "He comes to school bearing with him the habits developed by his home training—fears, dislikes, temper tantrums, self-pity, self-preoccupation and unwholesome curiosities taught him by six years intimate contact with two people who, to him, represent authority. He comes into contact with a new authority and a new set of companions. If he does not comfortably fit himself into the school life, he becomes a disturbing element in the class room and playground and a "problem" child to his teacher".

The solution of the problem by many teachers is making the youngster understand that he must do what other youngsters do, and must not do what other youngsters are not allowed to do. He must learn to know that he is not the teacher's "pet", or that the teacher has not a "pick" on him. He is just one of the class.

The group games which have come into general use in play grounds are perhaps the best method of handling the behaviour child. He learns that he must take "his" position—pitcher, fielder, forward, guard —must pass or run with the ball, must catch or stop another boy, must take his defeats as well as his victories.

the new air department.

Must Provide Bill

Appointment of an Air Minister and setting up of the separate department of air will necessarily await the passage of a bill through parliament and until the bill is introduced the full scope of the new ministry will not be known definitely.

However, it will involve supervision over all activities of the Royal Canadian Air Force, including the Air Training Plan.

At the moment that rests with Defence Minister Rogers as Minister of National Defence. Control of civil aviation now rests with the Department of Transport, but some of its phases have special relation to the war effort.

Until the creation of the Transport Department a few years ago civil aviation came under the Department of National Defence. When the Transport Department was created it brought under one ministry the former departments of railways and canals and marine and the civil aviation branch of the Department of National Defence.

Some U. S. Senators Consider Future of West Indies Islands

Washington, May 21 — (AP) — Senate sentiment appeared to be growing Monday for United States acquisition of Allied islands in the West Indies to increase the security of the Panama Canal.

Some lawmakers proposed transfer of the property as part payment of First Great War debts; others suggested the United States take over the land in event Germany wins the Second Great War.

Puerto Rico is the outpost of United States defences in the Caribbean. Stretching between Florida and the east coast of South America, however, are dozens of little islands owned by Britain, France and The Netherlands—all within striking distance, by air, of the canal.

Farther out in the Atlantic to the north, Britain's Bermuda islands offer a possible base for airplane attack either on the canal or the United States mainland.

Senator John Miller (Dem-Arkansas) declared that "we will be foolish" if we do not take charge of Bermuda, the Bahamas and all the islands in the West Indies owned by England, France and The Netherlands "as a protective measure." He proposed sending a battleship to do the job.

Senator Sherman Minto (Dem-Indiana) suggested that the United States might negotiate with the Allies for landing a "protective force," because "we can't afford to let those islands fall into the hands of Mr. Hitler."

Senator Alvin Adams (Dem-Colorado) disagreeing with suggestions for acquiring the Allied possessions, saying:—

"If they asked us to assume possession that would be all right, but we would not be justified in opening negotiations. I do not believe in pressing a fellow who is in a desperate situation."

Australia Recruits Seventh Division

Canberra, May 21 — (CP-Reuters) — Intensified recruiting to form a seventh division of the second Australian Imperial Force was officially announced today.

Prime Minister R. G. Menzies announced the war cabinet's decision, while Brigadier Geoffrey A. Street, National Defence Minister, simultaneously issued a public appeal to young men to enlist in the new division.

"The utter ruthlessness of the German machine emphasizes the necessity of fighting to the bitter end," Brigadier Street said. "Increased recruiting can be an evidence of the Allies' inflexible will to victory."

(Australia is adopting the new British system of having three battalions of infantry in a division, as against four previously. So to form the 7th division one battalion is being withdrawn from each brigade of the 6th division, to form a complete new brigade for the 7th, hence only two brigades need to be raised.

(So far as is known, Australia plans to send overseas three divisions, to form an army corps under the command of Lieut.-General Sir Thomas Blamey.)

BIG DEFENCE BILL WINS APPROVAL

U. S. Senate-Appropriations Committee Acts With Speed

Washington May 21—(AP)—A $1,820,941,000 defence bill, unprecedented for the United States in peace time, won quick approval of the Senate Appropriations Committee today while the military leaders urged speedy realization for President Roosevelt's goal of an air armada of 50,000 planes.

Leaders arranged to start Senate debate tomorrow, and the defence bill may go to the House of Representatives for consideration of Senate amendments by midweek. The Appropriations Committee required only two hours to vote its approval.

Of the total in the bill $1,497,711,368 cash would be available for expenditure immediately upon President Roosevelt's signature of the legislation.

Largest of Appropriations Asked

The measure, carrying far more than any previous peace time appropriation, includes Mr. Roosevelt's recently-requested allotment of $545,770,364 in cash and $128,229,636 in contract authorizations for army expansion and purchases of airplanes, material, machinery and supplies.

The call to the aviation industry in the words of government officials, was to build up a 50,000-plane fleet as quickly, as efficiently and as cheaply as possible."

Esssentials of the air program were outlined by army, navy, treasury and civil aeronautics authority leaders at a hastily-called conference of manufacturers of airplanes, engines, machine tools and Allied products.

Need for Engines

Matching the high-placed government officials in the conference were many of the best-known names in aviation.

The need for engines, more vital than that for fuselages, was stressed, it was learned.

Stepehen Early, Presidential Press Secretary, was reminded that the President had said some adjustment, by legislation, might have to be made of working hours to carry out the defence program. Early said he supposed the matter involved a study of the whole question of labor relations and that work on the problem was under way.

SECOND BRIGADE IS UNDER CANVAS

Succeeds First Brigade Which Has Completed Ten Days' Training

(By Edwin Johnson Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Aldershot, England, May 21 (CP Cable)—Armed and equipped as if for battle, the 2nd Infantry Brigade, 1st Division, Canadian Active Service Force, moved from Aldershot Monday for advanced training under canvas.

The men will take over a tented city on rolling plains of rural England where the 1st Brigade has been housed for the last 10 days.

Headed by Brigadier G. R. Pearkes and his senior officers, columns of transports and armored vehicles sped through sleepy towns and villages all morning. First came the Princess Pats, followed by the Edmonton Regiment, with the Seaforth Highlanders of Canada bringing up the rear.

Cheered by Early Risers

Early risers poked their heads from windows or stood at the curbside cheering and waving to the men. Farmers in fields and gardens paused to watch the khaki-clad procession convinced that the Canadians were on their way to the front.

The large-scale shift, however, is but a normal phase of the divisional training which every unit undergoes.

Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, General Officer Commanding the 1st Division, accompanied by Lieut.-Colonel G. R. Turner, General Staff Officer (first grade), paid a surprise visit to the 2nd Brigade Headquarters and remained to see the convoy's organization and departure.

The 3rd Brigade will go under canvas shortly.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating breakfist and I said, Hay ma, hay pop, 10 cents a week isn't a very big of an allowance and I'm getting bigger and older all the time, so why cant I have at least 15 now?

My goodness when I was a little girl your age I was quite sattisfied with an occasional rare penny from time, to time, ma said. In fact I was more than sattisfied, I was surprised and delighted and grateful for days, she said, and pop said, If I ever saw as much as a nickel when I was his age I felt like Creesus and acted like Morgan and walked around on air singing like a berd.

Well jimminy crickets, pop, holey smokes, ma, money was different in those days, you could actually buy things with it and still get lots of change, there wasn't any high cost of living in those days, I said, and ma said, It wasn't so long ago as all that, how old do you think we are for land sakes? The trouble with childern nowadays is, they're aloud to spend a king's ransom every week and they get to thinking that the family pocketbook is an endless well for their convenience, practically growing on trees. It might even be an excellent thing to reduce your allowance instead of increasing it, she said.

By gollies that's a thought, pop said. As Benjamin Franklin must of said, the only people who really appriciate money are the ones who've never had it. If we reduce Benny's allowance to about 7 cents for a while, it wont be any time before he realizes that 10 cents was a small fortune, he said.

Sounding like a bum idea, and I said, Well good night, never mind, I'll try to get along.

Now there's a better spirit, ma said, and pop said, Yes, humble yet hopeful. Suppose we boost him up to 12 cents he said, and ma said, Well, we'll think it over.

Not sounding exactly definite but making me feel partly lucky.

SAYS NEUTRALITY ALMOST BETRAYAL

Archdeacon Gower-Rees Mentions 'Three Things Neutrals Must by Now Know'

Toronto, May 21.—(CP)—Neutrality "amounts almost to a betrayal of modern civilization and the highest moral aspirations of mankind," Archdeacon A. P. Gower-Rees of Montreal, said Mon., before a gathering of Canadian and United States businessmen.

Addressing almost 2,000 Canadian and United States delegates to the first International Credit Men's Congress, he said neutrality might be the "right national attitude" in some disputes, but the present struggle could not be confined to one continent "because the issues concern humanity".

"The issues at stake in this present conflict demand that every nation shall decided without delay on which side it should devote its strength. By incessant threats the Nazi regime of Germany has almost paralysed the economic life of many nations, and affected that of all nations".

Germany Made Present War

He listed "three things that neutrals must by now know:" that Germany made the present war; that there was no evidence that the Allies planned for the war or arranged for the exclusion of Germany from world commerce; that German methods of warfare had mobilized the conscience of the world against Germany.

Hitch-Hiking on The Road to Delinquency

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

"DEAR Doctor Myers: It is obvious that I read your column, and it is also obvious that I place enough value on its contents to spend my time reading it, and in the main degree with its contents. But you are off on the enclosed, causing one to wonder what your experience has been.

"Brother, do you not know that to the average man and woman the joy of giving someone a lift is the most enjoyable thing about driving and owning a car? Just where can one experience greater satisfaction than to know that one has helped some one to make progress? . . . .

"Should you find time to acknowledge this I would get some of the same feeling I get when I pick up some of the finest fellows I have ever met."

Refers to Hitch-Hiking

Here is the statement of mine to which he refers: "In my humble judgment, hitch-hiking, except in cases of distress, is morally and economically wrong. In many states it is illegal. I'd rather have a child of mine begging for bread than for a ride. He would be less of a public nuisance."

I wrote this correspondent that I sincerely believed that if one of my sons or I had the privilege to take a ride with him in his car, we would have a profitable journey; that I admired his generous spirit but was not swayed from my former statement by his argument; that, moreover, I hoped to quote from his letter and make a few comments on it in this column. The comments follow.

I would certainly agree with this critic that great joys come from sharing and that about the greatest satisfaction one can experience is "to know that one has helped someone to make progress." I disagree, however that by encouraging hitch-hiking we can win this satisfaction without contributing to the inconvenience of some persons and the delinquency of others.

Did the Same Thing

Prompted by the same motives this man reveals, I used to pick up hitch-hikers and never had any unhappy experiences with them. But I have known others who have had. Besides, hitch-hikers impede traffic and add to accidents. Business concerns hardly would post a "no rider" sign on their trucks nor would state legislatures declare hitch-hiking illegal if there were not good reasons.

Should one share just for one's own satisfaction? Think of the thousands of children who have been spoiled, even ruined, because their parents got so much satisfaction from excessive generosity, even self-sacrifice. Consider the paupers who have been made through indiscriminate giving by those who give only for the joy of giving. Think of the generous children who give away all their parents have.

Therefore, I believe we parents owe it to our children to prevail on them not to thumb for a ride and we owe it to all children not to encourage hitch-hiking in anybody.

TRUST YOUR PHYSICIAN

BY McKEOWN'S DRUG STORE

Every conscientious doctor prefers to aid you in preventing serious illness rather than treat you over a period. His years of training, plus a natural aptitude, make him the greatest of humanitarians. His desire to aid you—not just because you are unequipped to aid yourself—is born of an innate consideration for the well-being of others.

His first thought is of keeping you well and this he can do if you will only seek his counsel at regular intervals, then follow implicitly his advice. If you do not do so you are disregarding the first and greatest law of nature, self-preservation.

Self-medication for self-preservation is a dangerous and seldom successful method of dealing with an unknown cause. Only a qualified doctor can determine the cause of illness. Let him prescribe when treatment is necessary.

You will also find that it is wise to carefully choose the pharmacist and the well equipped drug store when having prescriptions filled.

Toning Up the Scalp

PEGGY MORAN . . .constant care keeps her scalp and hair healthy.

By HELEN FOLLETT

THOSE MOANING sounds you hear are girls bawling about falling hair. They've been keeping their locks looking pretty but they haven't done a thing to keep the scalp toned and healthy. Never thought about it probably.

A vigorous shampoo can be a vitalizing scalp treatment. Before starting the cleaning process the hair should have 100 strokes of the brush, which does a good housecleaning job snaking out dead shafts and acting favorably upon the scalp. A two or three-minute friction should follow. On with the suds with plenty of elbow grease, adding hot water as the lather thickens. Rinse with a bath spray; use a current strong enough to knock you down; it is the only way to get the soap out.

For Soft, Glossy Hair

Another application of the soap, another rinsing, then a vinegar rinse to give the hair gloss and make it soft and silky. Add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar to a quart of water. This should be rinsed away. Finish with a quick cold shower to get a reaction of the blood streams of the scalp.

Finicky eaters often find their tresses thinning, so there must be something to the idea that hair needs certain food elements. Stick to a balanced diet and pray for more wool.

Nose Deserves Better Treatment

If you're mad at your nose because it catches freckles or gets shiny, stop to think what a utilitarian feature it is. It warms the air before it is taken into the lungs. It catches atmospheric dust that might make trouble for the respiratory organs. It affords one pleasure when one sniffs sweet perfumes or inhales those appetizing odors that come from the kitchen when one is hungry. It gives warning against smoke and dangerous gases. It deserves a kind word now and then.

You can subdue the freckles with a lotion made of equal parts of peroxide and strained lemon juice. You can correct the shine by sponging with a bicarbonate of soda solution.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Formal Wedding Calls for Formal Invitations

If the wedding is to be formal, the invitations will be formal engraved, and worded in the third person. Customarily, the invitation to the ceremony is engraved, on the first page of folded note-paper, white or off-white (cream or ivory white), of fine quality. The paper may or may not have a raised margin formed by a plate-mark. There are a variety of correct sizes, but most popular at the moment is the small size that fits unfolded into its envelope. The size of the enclosed cards must be in proportion to the size of the sheet.

Two envelopes are used for wedding invitations (or announcements). The outer envelope bears the name and address; the inner envelope, which has no mucilage on the flap, contains the invitation and accompanying cards. On this inner envelope is written only the name Mr. and Mrs. Richard Wood or Miss Dorothy Allen.

A simple, conservative style of engraving should be used. Script is always correct, and is less expensive than shaded letters. Besides Script, the style of engraving most in fashion at the moment is Shaded Antique Roman, with Shaded Modified Roman and plain and shaded block letters as other popular and correct choices.

The following is a typical invitation form:

Mr. and Mrs. George Pierce Graham request the honour of your presence at the marriage of their daughter Mary Elizabeth
to
Mr. Alexander Underwood
Tuesday, the twenty fifth of June
at half after four o'clock
Trinity Church
Home City, New York

Enclosed with this invitation is the reception card:

Mr. and Mrs. George Pierce Graham request the pleasure of your company
Tuesday, the twenty-fifth of June
at five o'clock
Seven Home Place
The favour of a reply is requested

If an At Home card is enclosed with the invitation, it does not carry the name, since the bride-elect has not yet acquired her married name. It reads:

At Home
after the first of September
Ten Park Place
Palms, California

The tissues should be removed before the invitations and cards are enclosed in the envelopes.

(Tomorrow: Informal invitations for an Informal Wedding).

Wedding Etiquette Tip

In invitations to a church wedding (request the honour of your presence) and in wedding announcements (have the honour of announcing) honour is spelled in the old-fashioned way, with a "u."

Also, when the word favour is used (The favour of an answer is requested) it too is spelled with a "u."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She Sees Her Boy Friend Only Once a Week

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Do you think a year's difference in ages is too much, when the girl is the older? My boy friend is 18 and I'm 19. We've gone together for two years and are very much in love. My only regret is that I don't see him oftener than once a week—Saturday evenings. He works out in the country and has no car of his own, so he comes in with some friends. And sometimes it's two weeks before he'll come in. He says he's afraid I'll get tired of him if he comes too often.

He tells me he loves me, but I think if he really loved me he would want to come oftener. He seems very serious, and always tells me to be sure to wait for him. He seldom dates anyone else.

Since he comes to town so rarely, do you think he should object to my going out with other boys ocasionally?

T. R. D.

When a boy is so young, it seems a mistake to hold him too strictly to account as to his comings and goings. His work obliges him to be away during the week and he has no car; I don't really see how he can do any better than he's doing, and it's quite all right for you to make occasional dates with other boys.

You say he has asked you to wait for him, which shows that he's in earnest at present. But, my dear, a boy of 18 has a long road before he is able to meet the well-beloved at the altar. Therefore, don't worry if he fails to come every Saturday. If your love is the real thing, you can afford to miss a few dates.

No, I don't think a year's difference in ages counts at all.

All Girl Do Not Expect Men to Spend Money On Them

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Some time ago you had a letter in your column from a young man who said he was disgusted with all girls because they demanded so much in the way of money-spending. I was glad to read your answer in which you told him that he had not tried to become acquainted with the right type of girl.

The Spring days I'd be so glad if I had a nice boy pal who would like to go with me on hikes Saturday afternoons and Sundays. I like the girls in my office well enough, but it seems kind of forlorn for two or three girls to go off hiking by themselves. No, we don't want to goad any man into matrimony, but we'd like to have pleasant times with boys who are probably as lonesome as we are.

No Gold Digger

Of the young man who wrote that all girls are gold diggers, I strongly suspect osme girl had thrown him down good and hard a few days before he wrote that letter. He was just passing along his grouch.

Please Don't Make Over Your House to Anybody

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've always managed to keep my head above water because my home is a large one and is situated in a university town. I take in paying guests for rooms only.

Now my only daughter and her husband have begged me to sell my house, as they need ten thousand dollars to put in a business which they say will bring in over $5000 a year. They assure me of every comfort in their home. While I love my daughter and my grandchildren, still I hesitate above giving up the old home and the pleasant contacts with the people who share it with me, for what may be an uncertainty.

My son-in-law has never been very successful. During my husband's lifetime he helped him to start two new projects, both of which have been failures. And, of course, if this scheme fails there would be nothing for me but charity or the poorhouse. What do you think?

Anxious

Please don't consider for a moment selling your home and putting the money into some scheme proposed by a man who has never been successful. To people of that type, everything glitters until the schemes flops. If you could afford it, it would be better to give your daughter a little financial help and remain where you are.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Summer Camps

This is the time of the year when many parents are thinking of sending their children away to camp for the Summer. I am reminded of this by letters from several mothers asking my opinion of the idea.

Well, I believe that a properly conducted summer camp can be an ideal place for a girl or boy for the summer, or for at least a part of it. I know some parents sneer at summer camps and suggest that those who send their children to them do so only to get them out of the way for a while. These persons do themselves no credit by indicating this belief.

Of course, it may be more convenient for parents to send Johnny and Mary to camps than to keep them at home or take them on family vacation trips, but I don't believe that is what motivates most parents in placing their youngsters at camps. Acting as parking places is certainly not the chief function of boys' or girls' camps.

Here around Callander we are in the heart of a summer resort country for both Canadians and Americans. Among our summer cottagers around us there are persons who send their children away from them to camps, and I know the mothers dislike very much to be parted from their youngsters and that they doubtless spend many uneasy moments of worry about them while they're separated.

But they understand and appreciate that a couple of seasons away from home at a summer camp can give a boy or girl great advantages very few of them could enjoy any other way. For instance, one of the most important things a boy learns in a camp is how to get along with other children. Often he is an only child, and has had few playmates. He has never had to really get along with them. Even if he has a brother or sister or two chances are he has never had to depend on himself the way he must when he is thrown with 50 or 100 others of his age group in a camp.

Usually when a child goes to a camp for the first time he is pretty lonely and miserable in the beginning. He wants to go home. He may think he is sick and send for his parents. He'll have all kinds of complaints to make to them about the camp. Usually all that's wrong, of course, is that he misses being babied. If his parents let him stay at the camp, as they should, he will find others who are going through the same throes, and his feelings and theirs will draw them into companionship and friendship. Because he and they feel this need of companionship and friendship so much, they will learn to get along together, to share things and interests. They will get over their loneliness. And thereby they will have had one, but only an incidental, great benefit from the camp experience.

These new friends and the camp supervisors won't "baby" him as his parents and brothers and sisters do at home. He has to do things for himself. When he misplaces something, he must find it for himself. He finds too, that he must do his share in keeping the cabin or the tent neat and clean. He has these chores about the place he must share with four or five others, and if he shirks and doesn't do them, he will find himself in trouble pretty quick. I have known more than one youngster come home from camp with an entirely new and more healthy outlook on life. Being forced to do things for themselves made them conscious of their powers for the first time.

Learning to do things for themselves is made easier for the youngsters at camp than at home because his supervisors are likely to deal with him in a more detached way than his parents do. Also, as one of 50 or a 100 of his age group, there is more encouragement to him to learn things that will make him want to excel and stand out as an individual. If a boy learns a fancy dive or fast swimming stroke while with his family, the feat isn't likely to get him much attention, but if he wins a diving contest or swimming race at camp, he gets cheers, a medal, prestige. And wise camp supervisors see to it that every boy in camp gets a chance to excel in something.

Of course, this blanket endorsement of the summer camp idea doesn't mean that parents should just send their children to any camp. They ought to select one carefully, being sure to look it over, and see the calibre of the leadership, if possible, before signing up Johnny or Mary. Some consideration should be paid to the child's desires and interests, too. If he's "crazy" about boats and the water, then a camp where there's sailing, fishing and such is the place for him. If, on the other hand, he likes climbing, the deep woods, trail-blazing, so to speak, then the mountains are probably best for him.

BETHANY W.M.S.

The May meeting of the Bethany W.M.S. was held on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. G. Sills with fourteen members present.

The president opened the meeting. Prayer was offered by Mrs. James Sills. Business was discussed. Quiet music and Hymn 366 opened the worship service, based on Christian Stewardship. The Scripture was read in parts by Mrs. Easton, Mrs. George Hamilton, Mrs. E. Treverton, and Mrs. Ritz.

Mrs. E. Treverton took charge of the program. A reading was given, "A New Foundation" by Mrs. A. Miller. Miss Rita Clarke then favored with a piano solo, after which Mrs. (Rev.) Armstrong gave the first part of the Christian Stewardship Study Book, "The Stewardship Life," explaining the methods of tithing before the birth of Christ, and how it changed during and after His life. A very fine duet was rendered by Mrs. George Hamilton and Mrs. C. Eggleton. The Study Book, "Moving Millions" was divided into parts and proved very interesting. The first part, "Educational Positions in India" by Mrs. Easton, "A Higher Christian Education Today", Mrs. Osland, and last, "Sanitation and Health" by Mrs. C. Eggleton. A short poem, "The Best Things" was read by Mrs. Treverton.

Little Miss Sunshine

"You'd never guess how much I worried about my Susie," says Mrs. Ford. "Her system was sluggish and it dragged on her like a ball and chain."

Anyone—young or old—may have the "ball and chain" feeling that can result from too little bulk in the diet.

Post's Bran Flakes help to prevent "ball and chain" feeling. They provide natural bulk in the form of bran to keep food wastes moving promptly.

"Susie's a ray of sunshine now," says Mrs. Ford, "And who wouldn't be—with scrumptious Post's Bran Flakes for breakfast!" laughs Susie.

HELP keep your family free from the effects of faulty elimination by serving Post's Bran Flakes regularly. They are so appetizing — so convenient. If this does not readily relieve constipation due to lack of bulk, it's time to consult a physician.

125 ENTRIES RECEIVED FOR KID-KAR DERBY

As the Official List Calls for 75 Entries, the Field Will Probably be Narrowed Down to the Required Number

TO MEET BOYS THURS.

Evidence that the youth of Belleville is still keenly interested in the mechanical and sporting elements of their Kid-Kar Derby was given to members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club at their fortnightly banquet held Monday night, when Chairman Orliff Lloyd reported that one hundred and twenty-five entries for the annual sports classic had been received from the city's potential Barney Oldfields.

As the official entry list calls for seventy-five entries only, and the usual withdrawals will no doubt be made before race time, the clubmen have arranged a meeting for the boys to be held in the Y.M.C.A. next Thursday night where rules, regarding construction, race, and other important features connected with the race will be explained, and the field narrowed down to the allotted number. The meeting will provide, also, motion picture films and a "treat" for the youngsters.

The official closing date for entries is Thursday of next week it was decided, but an extension of time for out-of-town entrants will be allowed. Five drivers who reside in nearby towns and communities will be allowed to compete in the race.

Parents Must Guarantee Construction

[illegible]te of the distribution of the standard wheels and axles, being provided gratis by the clubmen to the entrants will be arranged for at the meeting. In view of the fact that this equipment is being donated by the club members who are desirous that each boy entering shall fulfill his obligations, parents of the drivers will be asked to sign a rider guaranteeing the construction and entry of the car in the race. All cars must be constructed and ready to race ten days before the date of the event, July 9th.

In view of the fact that dates would conflict, the clubmen decided to table the request of the Canadian Wheelmen's Association that the Canadian Cycle championships be held in Belleville this year. The association, however, was requested to keep this city in mind, so that full co-operation of the Kinsmen can be given another year.

20 New Members to be Initiated

Arrangements for the annual "Stag Party" and Initiation Night at which some twenty new members will meet the 'club goat', were concluded and a committee appointed to look after the "details."

According to Secretary Bill Ashline, members and residents of the city are due for an entertainment par excellence if plans already under way materialize. Arrangements are already in progress to bring the famous radio troupe "The Happy Gang" to this city. Nothing definite, however, has been arrived at yet but the clubmen are hopeful of success.

A highlight of the meeting was an address by Mr. E. B. Smith, Hamilton, immediate past-president of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association. Mr. Smith's address appears on the sports pages of this edition.

Past-President Cleo Colling was in the chair in the absence of President Geoffrey Marvell, while Leo Riggs presided at the piano in the place of Kinsmen Phil. Huddleston who was unavoidably detained through illness.

Keen interest is already being shown by the youth of the city in the 1940 classic scheduled to be run on Derby Hill, July 9th. A meeting of the entries for this year's race will be held in the Y.M.C.A. on Thursday night, where rules, regulations, and a "treat" will be provided for the boys.

Film on African Life Is Most Interesting

One of the most unique travel pictures that has been shown in Belleville for quite some time is "Dark Rapture" now being shown at the McCarthy theatre. Many of its scenes probably have never been pictured in so much detail and length as are shown in this film.

The picture shows a party of Americans, under the auspices of the Belgian Government leaving The Hague bound for the Belgian Congo travelling by means of large motor trucks and a light car. The expedition crosses into Africa at Gibraltar, moves across the Sahara Desert of which some interesting "shots" are shown including a sand storm and reception by natives at an oasis. After much difficulty the party eventually reaches their headquarters in the Belgian Congo from which many side trips are made and where the expedition stayed for over a year.

Of the numerous interesting scenes that are shown those of pygmies building a vine bridge across a wide stream, life among the pygmies showing them hunting with nets and pointed arrows, a visit to a little-known race of negroes most of whom stand seven feet or over, scenes taken on the edge of an active volcano, and an exciting elephant hunt which is much different from those that have been pictured before and the training of the animal for use by man after it has been captured, are probably the most outstanding although the whole picture is filled with interesting and instructive scenes. The fact that it was made with the co-operation of the Belgian Government lends authority to the film while the clearness of the pictures shows that it has been photographed by experts. This is a picture recommended for adults who have remained young in spirit and for children, also.

Presbyterial of the W.M.S. held in Belleville recently was presented by Mrs. Baker, official delegate to the gathering. A prayer from the "Glad Tidings" was offered by Mrs. M. Tompkins following the second hymn. The speaker of the day, Mrs. L. Munro gave an excellent address dealing with the life and work of the late Dr. Jonathan Goforth, famous Missionary of the Presbyterian Mission in China. # Pinkey Higgins of Tigers Blasts Trio of Homers on Successive Times at Bat

Detroit Beats League Leading Red Sox 10-7 With This Heavy Clouting

SCHOOLBOY ROWE WINS

Cincinnati Reds and Brooklyn Dodgers Beaten by Boston and Chicago

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Home run hitting being what it is today, a fellow just about has to collect them in clusters to get any notice.

There were an even 20 round trip tickets punched in the major leagues yesterday and the same number the day before, so you can see why most of them get lost in the shuffle. But you can't overlook three in one game, which is the stunt Pinky Higgins of Detroit Tigers showed Boston Red Sox in beating the American League leaders 10-7 yesterday.

The trio of homers came on consecutive times at bat and brought in four other runners for a total of seven tallies.

The victory was credited to Schoolboy Rowe who went to the mound in the fifth after Jimmy Foxx had hit his 10th home run of the season with the bases loaded off Tommy Bridges. Jeff Heath of Cleveland Indians hit two as the Tribe trimmed New York Yankees for the second straight time 10-2. The world champions yielded to their old weakness against left-handed pitching and were held to one hit for eight innings by Al Smith.

A's Put on Bombardment

Another home run bombardment originated from an unsuspected quarter, Philadelphia Athletics, as they stopped St. Louis Browns 8-4. Frank Hayes put together two of the game's five. The only game without a home run was the Chicago White Sox's 5-4 triumph over Washington Senators.

Cincinnati Reds were crushed 13-4 by Boston Bees, six of the runs coming on homers by Al Lopez and Carvell Rowell. Brooklyn Dodgers lost another chance to catch the National League leaders, by dropping a 6-4 decision to Chicago Cubs who beat a persistent 13-hit tattoo against four hurlers.

Pittsburgh Pirates lost another heart-breaker 8-7 to Philadelphia Phillies. The Pirates were leading 7-1 going into the ninth, the only run against Mace Brown being a homer by Chuck Klein. Then Brown developed a sore arm and three other Pittsburgh pitchers squandered the lead.

Cliff Melton, New York Giants' seasoned southpaw, shut out St. Louis Cardinals 6-0 on six hits.

WIN PUTS ORIOLES IN TIE FOR FIRST

Syracuse Chiefs, Team Beaten by Baltimore, Not Playing to Early Season Form

By the Associated Press

Although they played only a secondary role yesterday in sending Baltimore Orioles into a three-way virtual tie for the International League lead, the plight of the Chiefs this season must make Syracuse fans shudder.

Hailed before the campaign started as a team that was going to do some slugging, the Chiefs have made more than 13 hits in only one game this season. And since they no longer have last year's effective mound staff, they're in seventh place with 14 defeats in 22 games.

Yesterday's setback was perhaps a bit worse than usual. The game was rained out after six innings but in that time Baltimore had accumulated 11 runs and 10 hits, while the Chiefs had tossed in five errors and three walks while Orlin Collier limited Syracuse to two singles and three passes. The final count was 11-2.

Bill Nagel and Art Graham contributed home runs to the winning cause.

The only other game on yesterday's schedule and the season's first night encounter, Jersey City and Newark, was postponed by fog.

Yesterday's Stars

(By the Associated Press)

Al Smith, Indians, held Yankees to three hits, only one during first eight innings, as Cleveland smashed out 10-2 victory.

Cliff Melton and Harry Danning, Giants, former shut out Cardinals on six hits and latter batted in five runs with homer and triple.

Pinky Higgins, Tigers, hit three home runs to account for seven of Detroit's 10 tallies against Red Sox.

Frank Hayes, Athletics, hit two home runs to lead assault on Browns.

Merrill May, Phillies, made three hits in four times at bat against Pirates, including two doubles.

Al Todd, Cubs, batted in two runs with homer an dsingle to lead offensive against Dodgers.

John Rigney, White Sox, shut out Senators on two hits for seven innings and got only extra base hit of game, a double.

Al Lopez and Carvell Rowell, Bees, each hit home run with two on base in routing Reds 13-4.

BRITISH RACING 90 P.C. NORMAL

Flat Events Mostly as Usual Though Some Changes of Venue

London, May 21—(CP) — Britain's incurable racegoers will have a good season despite the war. The Jockey Club, after government consultation, has decided on an extension of the present flat racing program which provides 71 days racing between June 1 and Aug. 31. This is 90 per cent of the peacetime allotment.

Ascot will move over to Newmarket June 21-22 because the Ascot course is unavailable. It will be a meeting without traditional Ascot bands and toppers but among the races will be a substitute for the Gold Cup. The course, however, will be two miles, a half-mile shorter than ordinarily because that is the limit of the summer course at Newmarket.

The first day's program at Newmarket will include the Gold Cup, value 100 pounds, ($445) with 1,000 pounds ($4,445) added, Ribblesdale Stakes, King George Stakes, Coventry Stakes, Queen Elizabeth Stakes and Wokingham Stakes.

The two popular handicaps, the Royal Hunt Cup and the Ascot Stakes, will be run June 22. Other races then will be the Hardwicke Stakes, Queen Mary Stakes, Britannia Stakes and Windsor Castle Stakes.

V. P. Boot, British Empire Games, 880-yards track champion.

T. C. Lowrey, former New Zealand cricket captain.

WOOLER DOWNS TRENTON NINE IN SURPRISE WIN

"Villagers" Beat Packed Trenton Team Badly Winning 17-5

FLYERS STRONG

Trenton, May 21 —(Special)— Wooler pulled an early season surprise last night by trouncing the highly touted Canadian "Do-Nut" squad on their own battlefield at Bayshore diamond. The invaders came out of the north and inflicted a 17 to 5 defeat against their Trenton rivals who were left somewhat bewildered by the mode of play the farmer boys displayed. A large crowd saw the Fried Cake artists lose their first of the season when Wooler batters reached Bruce Burtt for a volley of hits before Fox replaced him when the northern town lads pounded his delivery for 13 runs in the first three innings. The Doughnut crew secured three runs in the first inning and one again in the second frame but failed to score again until late in the pastime. Stacey was on the hill for the winners throughout. The teams: Wooler—Austin, Ruttan, McColl, Redcliffe, Bryant, Stacey, Adams, May and Redcliffe. Canadian Doughnuts — Morin, LaMorre, Ellis, V. Burtt, Cain, S. Ellis, Townsend, B. Burtt, Fox and Belle. Umpires—O. Ward behind the bat and M. Kennedy on the bases.

R.C.A.F. Tops League

It's much too early to predict the outcome of the town softball league but sportsmen here are banking on the Trenton R.C.A.F. crew to finish in the money. At present the Air Force lads are leading and have defeated all comers including Wooler who smote the Canadian Doughnuts in a one-sided fixture here last night. The Airport lads downed Wooler 14 to 11 the first time they played here this season. So round and round she goes and where she stops nobody knows.

She only weight 53 pounds, and she's only 8, but Hollywood's Sheilah Brown can out-bowl most adult champions. International's speedray, shooting at 1-100,000th of a second, catches sweeping arm and body motion, as Sheilah demonstrated her bowling artistry in Boston. The ball weighs nine pounds, less than the regulation 16, and is a trifle smaller than standard.

FUTURE TENNIS STAR

London (CP)—There is tennis blood in the son of Captain P. F. Glover and Mrs. Glover whose birth was announced recently. Mrs. Glover, as Nancy Lyle, played on Britain's Wightman Cup team while Captain Glover won the championship of the Navy eight times.

"Hi, Slim, you're that!"

"I always get a kick out of meeting Ben. He may be fields away; but he's sure to yell, 'Hi, Slim, you're that!' Folks kid us, not knowing what it means . . . Back in '18, Ben's wife was pretty sick. I stuck around and did his chores. One sun-up he came into the barn staring oddly at the package of tobacco in his hand. I said, casual like, 'There's no other tobacco just like Old Chum.' But he was pointing to the name, Old Chum, 'You're just that!' he said . . . I always wave back my package meaning, 'You too, and happy days!' "

Available in packages, pocket pouches and ½ lb. tins.

JOEY ARCHIBALD SOUNDLY BEATEN BY HARRY JEFFRA

Maryland and N.B.A. Recognize Jaffra as the Featherweight Champ but Not the N.B.A.

SWEET REVENGE

Archibald on Verge of Knockout in Second When Floored Twice for Count of Nine

Baltimore, May 21—(AP)—They were calling Harry Jeffra "the champ" around Baltimore again today.

The wiry fighter won his second boxing crown last night by outpunching, out manoeuvring and outsmarting Joey Archibald of Providence, R.I., in 15 rounds of give-and-take mauling.

The Maryland and New York Boxing Commissions recognized it as a bout for the world's featherweight championship, although the National Boxing Association refused to sanction it. Petey Scalzo of Pittsburgh is the N.B.A.'s champion.

Jeffra, the former bantamweight champion, had things under control all the way and came within an eyelash of knocking Archibald out with a series of wicked rights in the second round.

It was sweet revenge for Jeffra. He went into the ring determined to atone for the controversial victory that Archibald scored over him in Washington last fall. Harry accomplished his aim with coolness and precision.

The 4,500 fans in the coliseum were still mumbling about the colorless first round when Jeffra uncorked a smoking overhand right that sent Archibald sprawling to the floor with a resounding thud.

His eyes glazed, Archibald took a count of nine, rose on wobbly legs and walked into another vicious right that floored him for another nine count. Just before the bell, Joey went down again for no count.

SOFTBALL GAME REVIEWED BY PAST PRESIDENT

E. B. Smith, Hamilton, Addresses Kinsmen Club at Fortnightly Meeting

35,000 PLAYERS

Speaker Said Game Incepted in Ontario in 1923 and Has Continually Progressed

The popularity of softball, now claimed to be one of the fastest games on the sports calendar, is not only spreading over Ontario, the western province, Quebec and the Maritimes, but to England and Australia as well, E. B. Smith, Hamilton, immediate Past-President of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association told the Belleville Kinsmen Club at their fortnightly banquet last night.

Last year, Mr. Smith said, 35,000 players participated in the game with one hundred and four teams engaged in final series in the various leagues throughout the province. These figures compared to 25 teams in 1925 speak volumes for the increasing popularity of the pastime. In Toronto alone 20,000 players were active last year. Hamilton boasted 8,000. This year, it is expected these figures will be increased due to the sponsorship of younger players by parent clubs, service clubs and other organizations.

Reviewed Game

Reviewing the game since its inception just after the turn of the century, the speaker told the clubmen, that the first ball used was of 16 inch circumference and covered with sheepskin. This ball was used when the famous Christy Mathewson toured Ontario and met defeat at the hands of a Hamilton softball team "The Scoundrels" with the famous Cecil Casey in the box. Casey's famous "saucer ball" completely baffled the American baseball players due to the fact, that the canny pitcher flattened the ball until it became almost a disc. His tremendous speed sent the object corkscrewing past the batters with lightning-like rapidity.

The ball gradually became smaller and harder due to different construction until the 13 inch ball was adopted, the speaker said.

Formed in 1923

The O.A.S.A. came into being in 1923, Mr. Smith said, and was composed of a group of Hamilton men. Now, it is a body, which is dictated to by its subsidiary associations. Rules, regulations, etc., can be changed only at annual meetings where full representation of the many parts of the province is present.

At its annual meetings an earnest endeavour is being made to spread the game throughout Ontario, the speaker pointed out. Its officers are spread all over the province. Many changes have been made in the rules with the sole desire to open up the game so as to make it more spectacular for the fans, and more interesting for the players. It is a much faster game than baseball, because players must move faster. The actual popularity of softball is the fact that so many people have played it at some time or other, in leagues, on picnics, at conventions, that their interest is quickened when league games are played.

All the facilities, organization, etc., of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association have been offered to the military authorities, Mr. Smith told the clubmen.

Advocated Floodlights

Predicting that the O.A.S.A. might in the near future have to officially sponsor play-off games under floodlights, the speaker advocated the installation of lights in cities and towns that can afford such a procedure. "In many places such as Simcoe, Brantford, and towns of that nature, floodlights had been installed on a shoestring, and in each instance the end of the season found all expenses paid," he said. "The actual cost of such installation is in the neighborhood of $1,000.00."

At this point, Mr. Smith, entertained his listeners with the famous poem "Casey at the Bat" made famous by the late De Wolf Hopper. He proved to be an excellent elocutionist (brogue included) and his effort elicited rounds of applause.

The reason, or one of the reasons why people should take more than a passing interest in softball is because it is synonymous with life, the speaker said in conclusion. "It is a sturdy, but a severe tutor, one which trains one to meet the vicissitudes of life. It has something, which gives you the determination and assurance to hang on until the last man is out, and staying in there knowing that the tide of victory will turn some time. The players will grasp a better and greater idea of the sterner things of life in their struggles on the softball diamond."

"That is the spirit the O.A.S.A. is trying to inculcate into the younger players of today. Gentlemen, that is softball."

The speaker was introduced by Kinsmen Harry Rollins, while the thanks of the club was appropriately expressed by Kinsmen Court Miller.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—Clint Brown, Chicago White Sox pitcher, broke the American League record for appearing in the most number of games in a season? . . . Brown appeared in 61 games last season, topping Braxton's old record of 59 games made in '25. . . . The Girls' City Softball League opens just one week from this evening? . . . It is said that as go Ruffing and Dickey so go the Yankees? . . . There is more apparent truth than poetry in that. . . . The shortest distance permitted in any major league ball park from home plate to fence or stand in the outfield in fair territory is 235 feet? . . . And from home plate to the nearest grandstand cannot be less than 60 feet? . . . May 24th, 1940, will be the first Victoria Day seen in Belleville for over 40 years that will not see a baseball game played here or a local team on the road? . . . And that the movement to build a strong junior hockey team in Belleville is being abandoned owing to the war?

We are indebted to His Worship Judge Deroche, for a current copy of "Who's Who in Major League Baseball," the 1940 edition of the history of all players and happenings in the big leagues. We wish to thank His Honour for another valuable piece of sports literature to add to our sports library. Incidentally the genial Judge is a keen baseball fan and a few years ago was personally acquainted with numerous major league stars. Judge Deroche spent many winters in Florida at the training camp site of the Philadelphia Athletics and the St. Louis Cardinals. Judge Deroche became well acquainted with Connie Mack and on more occassions than one, Mister Mack invited his Canadian Judge friend to sit on the A's bench during practice hours. Many major league ball players addressed Judge Deroche as "Your Honour" during Spring training periods some seasons ago. This year Judge and Mrs. Deroche journeyed to California for a change, but en route home the baseball minded judge, saw the National Leagues in Chicago and the American League play in Detroit. It was in the latter city he procured "Who's Who in Baseball" and today presented it to us with his compliments.

May 24th being a holiday and no daylight major sports on the local calendar, a goodly attendance is predicted for the weekly professional wrestling show at the Arena. Nick Pavick, the Detroit Grecian strongman, will make his Canadian debut here Friday night, when he meets "Nibs" Palmer, the former Montreal grappler, in the main go of the night. However, for our choice we like the semi-final battle between the colorful Eddie Sobul and Jim Beamish. The latter may be a veteran, but he possesses a world of ring knowledge with the result that a spirited bout can be almost assured. The wrestling bouts are the only local holiday sports attraction in Belleville.

When we spoke of a proposed war charities baseball game in Peterboro last week, we forgot to mention the most colorful player ever to appear in the C.O.B.L.—namely Harold "Duke" Dainty, of Oshawa. The Fair boys, "Kip" and "Doc" Rowden, Ty Tyson, Morrison and Joe Patton are other Oshawa veterans we forgot to mention.

Ernie Smith, Past President of the Ontario Softball Association, was the guest speaker at last night's fortnightly meeting of the local Kinsmen Club. Sometimes Ernie Smith is referred to as "the father of the O.A.S.A." based on his untiring efforts towards softball in the province. Mr. Smith spoke on the value of sports and athletics to a community. Incidentally Mr. Smith's presence in Belleville came just a few hours too early for him to participate in the opening of the Belleville Softball League, which swings into action with the 1939 champion "Oilers" meeting Corby's A.C. tomorrow night at the Flats. There is considerable rivalry between these two squads this year, simply because Art Cole and Eddie Schrieder bolted the Corby's to sign with the Bawden - coached nine. Connie Harris will doubtless be after the scalp of his old team-mate Cole and it will be interesting to watch the results. There will be no long-drawn-out official formal ceremonies, but nothing except straight unadulterated softball between these two ancient softball rivals.

Do you remember when Dizzy Dean made a strong comeback when he pitched a three-hit game in the National League to give the Chicago Cubs a 4-0 victory over Boston Bees one year ago today? Nearly 22,000 fans stood for hours in the rain to give "Dizz" a thunderous welcome. He started the 1940 season as relief pitcher with the Cubs.

The Jack Dempseys came to the parting of ways over the week end when Jack Dempsey and Hanna (Cheerful little earful) Williams decided to call off their marital connections and agreed to a seperation. Twice previously Dempsey has been in the divorce courts, Estelle Taylor, the actress, and Maxine Wayne were his other ventures on the sea of matrimony. All of the Dempsey sojourns into the voyage of love have crashed on the bitter rocks of despair.

Sport Spice — Although out-hit, the Tabby Gow's 'Tanners' beat the Clothiers 9-7 in the opening game of the Kingston softball loop last night ....Stan Scrutton, who hurled for the Tanners last year held his former teammates to nine hits, but his helpers failed as they booted the ball for four costly errors....Nobody seems willing to tangle with Maurice "The Angel" Tillet these days, so it was necessary to call off the weekly Toronto grappling show, but nevertheless the weekly grappling shows in Belleville continue Friday night....Pinky Higgins clouted three successive homers for the Detroit Tigers yesterday.

How To Overcome Piles
And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

ITALY APPEARS

The possibility of Italy's entrance into the conflict in the immediate future was indicated by the air raid drills, the first ordered since the opening days of the war last September.

The drills were ordered for Rome province, Terni, 45 miles northeast, where great arms and munitions factories are operating at top speed, Milan, Turin and Genoa.

The drills were to test anti-aircraft guns and to give Italians another taste of what to expect when the nation goes after its so-called "aspirations."

Fascists Ready for Patrol

Fascists were ready to patrol the streets and to see that pedestrians take shelter when sirens warn of pretended raids.

Anti-aircraft batteries were uncovered on the roofs to "fire" at sky invaders who might be expected to swoop in mock raids at any time during the next three days.

Along with these preparations for war there continued demonstrations against Britain and France which brought out troops and carabinieri. A shouting group of young Italians marched toward the British consulate, but was held back by helmeted soldiers.

For a time early today solid ranks of troops and carabinieri still were massed on the streets around the French and British embassies and the British consulate.

The demonstration began as a friendly welcome to a Japanese delegation which arrived on a combined good will and trade agreement mission. A group of about 1,000 youths, waving Japanese and Italian flags, suddenly changed the character of their demonstration by shouting "down with France!" The crowd then headed for the embassies and the consulate.

Nazi Motorcycle Troops Penetrate City of Abbeville

Abbeville is on Somme Estuary, 12 Miles From the English Channel and 25 Miles West of Arras and Amiens

REFUGEES CLOG ROADS

Paris, May 21—(AP)—Small detachments of German motorcycle troops have penetrated the outskirts of the Abbeville region near the English Channel, a French spokesman said tonight.

Abbeville is on the Somme Estuary 12 miles from the English Channel and about 25 miles west of Arras and Amiens, which Premier Reynaud announced are in German hands.

The spokesman said that the Germans had thrust long points (advance units) of motorcycle soldiers along chosen roads to the west of Arras and Amiens.

German planes, the spokesman said, bombed and machine-gunned these roads, and also others which were packed with civilian refugees.

WHOLESALE PRICE OF SUGAR ADVANCES

Montreal, May 21—(CP)—Wholesale price of standard white granulated sugar, whether made from cane or beet, will be increased from $4.80 to $5.15 per 100 pounds, Montreal basis, it was announced yesterday. The increase will become effective at the opening of business today.

S. R. Noble of Montreal, Dominion sugar controller, said the increase had been approved by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board on his recommendation.

MAY ALLOW NAME TO STAND

Ottawa, May 21—(CP)—Miss Agnes Macphail, long-time United Farmers of Ontario-Labor member of parliament for Grey-Bruce who was defeated at the last Dominion election, may contest the by-election in the Federal constituency of Saskatoon, it was learned today.

Nervous Bandit Foiled In Robbery Attempt

Hamilton, Ont., May 21 (CP)—A nervous, six-foot bandit was foiled in an attempt to rob the Delta Branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce on Main Street east here today when Charles Stewart, 27, backed out of the tellers' cage and yelled to his associated in the office. The robber ran from the bank and escaped in a car when he entered the bank he was garbed in a butcher's apron, a sand-colored windbreaker and a service station cap.

Ted Dorland, ledger-keeper, who watched the entire incident, grabbed a revolver and raced after the fleeing bandit, but was unable to reach the street in time to fire a shot at the departing automobile.

"I had to think in a hurry," said Stewart, when asked why he didn't heed the note scribbled by the bandit on a cheque form to, "act naturally, keep your hands down and hand over the money." The bandit kept one hand in his pocket as though he had a gun, but Stewart ignored the threatening missive, and backed out of his cage, broadcasting the warning to the staff.

Dosland reported that the robber must have been very nervous because of the speed of his departure. The man was tall, of slender build and of dark complexion, he said.

James Cooper, ledgerkeeper, said his first view of the thug was obtained when the teller shouted the warning and he watched him race through the bank entrance.

Parachute Armies May Become Flying Cavalry of Future, Each Trooper Using Helicopter

Noted Engineer Gives Demonstration of Direct-Lift Flying Machine, Rising, Descending, Turning and Moving it Forward at Will

Bridgeport, Conn., May 21—(AP)—The parachute armies of today will become the flying cavalrymen of tomorrow—each soldier equipped with a machine which rises and descends vertically—if a helicopter demonstrated here lives up to its promises.

For thirty minutes yesterday Igor I. Sikorsky engineering manager of the Vought-Sikorsky division of the United Aircraft Corp., floated around over the heads of several score of spectators in a direct-lift flying machine of his own design.

He rose descended, turned and moved forward at will, exhibiting first "windmill" plane in the United States in which power is allied directly to the supporting canopy of blades.

Helicopters differ from the more familiar autogiros in that in the latter the "windmill' is auto-rotative and a conventional airplane propeller draws them through the air. Moreover, an autogiro cannot rise and descend slowly on a patch of ground no bigger than a backyard, and hover motionless.

"Perhaps", suggested the 51-year-old engineer who built bombers for Imperial Russia during the first Great War, "this will be the vehicle of tomorrow's parachute armies".

British Fight Stubbornly to Ward Off Nazi Thrust to Channel Ports

By Drew Middleton

Associated Press Staff Writer

With the British Expeditionary Force in France, May 20—(AP)—(Delayed)—British troops fought stubbornly today along one side of a German salient thrusting northwestward toward English Channel ports.

(Note: This dispatch was written before Middleton returned to London with other correspondents.)

The Nazi salient, driven at headlong speed after the Sedan breakthrough, is many miles wide at its mouth and many miles deep.

Even if the status is no worse than it was 24 hours ago, its remains extremely grave.

One of the war's hottest actions was fought by the Allies against the Germans in a town on the edge of the salient, which is tactically important as a junction of the roads leading north and west to the low countries and south and east to the centre of France.

German troops in the salient, buttressed and screened by hundreds of tanks and armored cars, appeared to be gaining their second wind today.

Except for a big battle at the town mentioned above, there were no other large-scale engagements along the front which is still as inconstant and changeable as quicksilver.

Allies Need to Strike Quickly

The Allies tonight seemed faced with no other alternative than to strike—and strike quickly—at the base of the salient.

Such a counter-attack, delivered simultaneously by the British to the north and the French to the south, might end the danger for the moment at least.

If, however, the Germans have been moving fresh troops and ammunition into the area during the last 48 hours, the Allies will be forced to dig in, in front of the German steam-roller and continue to fight on the defensive.

The conflict in the town mentioned above exceeded in violence any other action fought by the Allies thus far.

The Allies and Germans sifted through the narrow cobblestoned streets, sniped from half-ruined houses and swept streets and plazas with showers of machine-gun fire.

As well as being important strategically, this town, which until a week ago had thousands of inhabitants, is of great historic importance.

Engagements of small bodies of troops occurred in numerous other locations in the Cambrai-St. Quentin area.

Mobile warfare of a type unseen in Europe since the first weeks of the first Great War is continuing on a large scale.

Like Cavalry Fighting

Except for the substitution of tanks and armored cars for horses it is cavalry fighting. Sudden dashes, raids on isolated posts and occasional full-dress attacks constitute the main German tactics, but ever behind this steel screen is the mass of the German army.

The British army is being reinforced every minute despite the fact that thousands of refugees continue to pour toward the coast in long columns.

There is no indication by either the British or French as to the extent of casualties, but one officer who toured the front remarked to me that he had seen few ambulances at the British front.

The Royal Air Force again tonight was playing a bad hand well against a force vastly superior in number of planes.

THREE MEN DROWN IN L. WAHNAPITAE

Sudden Squall Overturns Punt With Four Occupants but One Makes Shore

Sudbury, Ont., May 21—(CP)—A sudden squall on Lake Wahnapitae was believed today to have cost the lives of three Sudbury youths during a fishing trip on the lake, 12 miles east of here. The supposed victims were Johnny Lycan, Stan White and Walter Wright.

A companion, Bob Harrower, was discovered on the lakeshore at noon in an almost-exhausted condition. He had clung to their overturned boat from 9.30 yesterday morning until 2:30 in the afternoon when he finally made shore. He expressed the opinion the other three drowned while attempting to swim to safety.

A sudden squall overturned the boat some distance out in the lake. While the other three elected to swim for it, Harrower decided to stay with the boat.

The four set out from the Cyderman dock at Lake Wahnapitae station at six a.m. in a 15-foot, flat-bottom punt, rented from Mrs. Paul Lablatt, and equipped with their own outboard motor.

They had planned to return before four o'clock and when they failed to do so posses of police and forestry officials began to comb the district around the 120-square-mile lake.

"PEGS" REMAIN IN WHEAT FUTURES

Producers Can Sell in Open Market if Trading Above Pegged Prices

Ottawa, May 21 (CP)—The "Pegs" will remain in the Winnipeg wheat futures pending further developments, Trade and Commerce Minister McKinnon announced today. The government will continue to watch the whole situation closely, he said.

The Minister's statement said "the Canadian Wheat Board will make deliveries of producers up to the statutory limitation of 5,000 bushels.

"Producers having excesses above 5,000 bushels may deliver such amounts to the pools formed under the Wheat Cooperative marketing Act.

"When the futures market is trading at or above the "pegs' the producers can sell their wheat in the open market."

King of Norway Urges Continued Resistance to Nazis

Somewhere in Norway, May 21.—(CP-Havas)—King Haakon, Crown Prince Olav and Premier Johan Nygaarsvold of Norway addressed their countrymen today by radio urging continued resistance against Germany.

"Attacked by a nation which, because it does not know the meaning of personal liberty cannot understand what a terrible injustice it is committing against a small land which loves its liberty," said the King, "we were compelled to choose between enslavement and defence of all we hold sacred".

The Crown Prince said: "Each of use must do his duty, resist, and not lose courage. We were convinced in our naivete that humanity had arrived far enough so that differences could be settled without recourse to massacre. Our eyes were brutally opened".

The Premier concluded: "I shall not attempt to characterize the German attack on Norway. I leave this task to the judgment of history and do not doubt that the judgment will be an eternal shame to Germany."

CROCKERY RATTLES ON SHELVES

London, May 21—(CP)—Heavy rumbling like distant thunder was heard tonight in the east coast towns of Great Yarmouth and Gorleston, stirring speculation among residents that it was gunfire on the continent.

Doors were shaken and crockery homes. Old-times recalled they of-homes. Old-timers recaled they often heard continental artillery fire in the first Great War.

U. S. YOUTH EAGER TO ENLIST

Fort Erie, Ont., May 21—(CP)—A United States youth who hitch-hiked from Texas with the intention of joining the Canadian Active Service Force was admitted to Canada today by immigration authorities.

Immigration officers took up a collection and one of them gave the youth a coat, when he told them he had sold his to buy food en route. He left here for one of the larger cities where he hopes to enlist.

Text of Reynaud's Address To Members of Senate

Paris, May 21 (CP-Havas).—Following is the text of Premier Reynaud's speech before the senate today:

The country is in danger. The first of my duties is to tell the truth to the senate and the country.

You know that the fortifications which protected the country could be divided in two parts—the Maginot Line from Basel to Longwy on the Luxembourg border, and the line of lighter fortifications running from Longwy to the sea.

Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg having been invaded, the left wing of the French army left its fortifications between Sedan and the sea and, pivoting on Sedan, went into Belgium on a line running from Sedan to Antwerp and even to Bois-le-Duc (Hertogenbosch) in Holland.

Facing this situation which had been foreseen and discounted, what did the enemy do?

Attacked At Hinge.

He launched a formidable attack against the hinge of the French army behind the Meuse between Sedan and Namur. The Meuse, a river of difficult aspect, had wrongly been considered a redoubtable obstacle for the enemy. This is why the French divisions charged with defending it were few and therefore stretched out thin along the great length of the river.

Also, there had been placed here General Korap's army composed of divisions less solidly organized and less trained than the best troops, which had been attached to the wing marching into Belgium.

But if the Meuse is a river of difficult aspect, that is precisely why it is difficult to defend. Flanking machine gun fire is impossible, and on the other hand infiltrations are easy for manoeuvring troops.

Bridges Not Destroyed.

Add to this that more than half of the infantry divisions of General Korap army corps had not yet reached the Meuse, even though they had a shorter movement to make since they were closer to the pivot.

That is not all. As a result of inconceivable mistakes, which will be punished, the bridges across the Meuse had not been destroyed. Over these bridges passed Panzerdivisionen, preceded by fighting planes, on their way to attack divisions which were scattered, badly organized, and badly trained against these attacks.

Now you understand the disaster, the total disorganization of General Korap's army.

Explains Blow-Up of Army

That is how the hinge of the French Army was blown up. When the day before yesterday I arrived at the War Ministry, I was joined by Marshal Petain and General Weygand. What was the situation? A breach 100 kilometres (62 miles) wide was opened in our front. Through this breach poured the German Army, composed of armored divisions followed by motorized divisions which, after opening a large pocket in the direction of Paris, moved west toward the sea, outflanking our entire fortified system on the Franco-Belgian frontier and menacing the Allied forces still engaged in Belgium to whom the retreat order was given only in the evening of May 15.

Day before yesterday an armored division had reached the line Quesnac, Cambrai, Peronne, and the Somme up to Ham. During the last 48 hours, the German advance had continued. This morning at 8 a.m., the High Command informed me that Arras and Amiens were occupied. How did we come to this?

Is it the moral value of our army involved? Not at all. The fighting which took place in Belgium in the first days proved it. The truth is that our classic conception of the conduct of war has come up against a new conception.

Basically this conception is not only the massive use of armored divisions, not only co-operation between armored divisions and combat planes, but also the determination to disorganize the rear of the enemy by raids in depth by parachutists who in Holland almost took The Hague and in Belgium took the strongest Liege fort.

First is Intellectual Order

I do not speak to you of false news and orders given by telephone branches of the civil authorities, for example, to provoke precipitate evacuations.

The Senate understands that of all the efforts at recovery which are imperative, the first for us is of an intellectual order. It is necessary to think of the war as a new war which is made against us and to take immediate decisions. This is not the first surprise, which we have had to surmount in our history.

At the beginning of the last war we fought in spite of the inferiority, which resulted from the lack of heavy artillery. We suffered from too small a number of machine guns We underwent a great surprise from that unfair weapon—gas. Nevertheless we replied, we adapted ourselves and we ended by winning.

It will be the same today if everyone wills it, if every soldier understands the immense part he is playing, if every one of those workmen who today are working 12 hours a day bends over his machine tool with fierce passion, if every man and if every woman understands the seriousness of the hour in which we are living.

Abroad, they are beginning to understand. There are millions of far-off men, women and children who are beginning to understand that it is a question of themselves and of their own futures. May they not come to understand this too late!

Put Selves at Service

In the sorrow of our country, we are proud to think that two of its children who might have claimed the right to rest on their glory have come to put themselves at the service of the country in these tragic hours—Petain and Weygand.

Petain, conqueror of Verdun, a great leader who knew how to be human, who knows how victory for France can be snatched out of the abyss. Weygand, man of Foch, who stopped the German tide when the front was broken in 1918 and who later knew how to switch destiny and lead us to victory. I have thanked them both in the name of France.

General Weygand yesterday took over his command. He is today on the field of battle. The conduct of military operations is his alone. What I want to say to the Senate is that on the plan of conduct of the war there is a complete community of ideas among Marshal Petain, General Weygand and myself. It is a task of public salvation that has been undertaken. The government has already made its decisions. You know its first acts.

No Shortcomings Tolerated

No shortcomings will be tolerated. Death is a feeble enough punishment for any failure against the vital interest of the country. While our soldiers are dying, there will be no more dilatory procedure for traitors, saboteurs or cowards. No private interest has the floor. Let us all raise ourselves to the height of the misfortunes of the country.

I have told you that truth because it alone can save us by giving us the strength to act. We have confidence in the great leader who has taken command of our armies. We have confidence in the soldier of France. He will be worthy of his forebears. Our aviators are covering themselves with glory and I may be permitted here to thank the admirable Royal Air Force for the total aid it is lending to France both in its action on the field of battle and against enemy sources of supply.

These two great peoples, two great empires united like a fasces cannot be defeated. France cannot die. As for me, if I am told tomorrow that only a miracle can save France I would say:

"I believe in miracles because I believe in France."

Physical Culture Classes to Open In the Capital

Ottawa, May 21—(CP)—There will be no "fifth column" for Ottawa citizens if Mayor Stanley Lewis has his way. Their main columns will be those in which His Honor hopes they will line up to do "physical jerks."

Mr. Lewis, who also is President of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities had issued a call for Ottawans 15 years of age and over to gather at Cartier Square in the downtown area tomorrow evening to take part in public physical culture classes.

"If people are sound of body and mind as physical training can make them, they will have no time to indulge in subversive activities," the mayor said. "This physical culture movement has been a great success in many European countries, and I don't see why we can't make a go of it here."

The turnout will be purely voluntary and the mayor does not know yet what persons will heed the call, but "I'll be there myself," he said.

Cases Settled By Mutual Consent

Settlement by mutual consent was agreed in the majority of the cases listed for trial at the Non-Jury Sittings of the Supreme Court, held before His Lordship Mr. Justice MacKay here this week. The court adjourned after a two-day sitting at noon.

Three actions for damages claimed were listed for trial, all being settled by consent of the parties concerned. The cases of Sandercock vs. the Village of Madoc and Bankey versus the City of Belleville were actions claiming damages following injuries sustained by the plaintiffs as the result of falling on icy streets in the respective communities The amounts of settlement were not made available Mutual settlement by consent was also agreed upon in the damage action of Dulmage versus the Globe Publishing Company, this action being entered as the result of an accident in which the late W. H. Dulmage sustained fatal injuries in the town of Trenton last fall.

Two uncontested divorce decrees, Tamlin versus Tamlin and Robinson versus Robinson were granted and recommended by His Lordship. Only one damage action was heard.

ACTION AGAINST FIFTH COLUMN ELEMENTS URGED

Minister of Justice Tells House of Commons Committee to Study 'Whole Question'

By the Canadian Press

Demands for restrictive action against suspected "fifth column" elements gained momentum throughout Canada today following an Ottawa announcement that this wartime problem will be considered by a special Parliamentary committee.

Justice Minister Ernest Lapointe told the House of Commons a committee would be set up to deal with proposed changes in the defence of Canada Regulations and "the whole question" of action against Communists, Fascists, Nazis and others who would undermine the nation would be considered.

Conant Asks Action

Attorney-General Gordon Conant of Ontario, has been a leader in the rising demand for internment of all persons connected with subversive organizations. He has urged Federal authorities to action under the defence regulation and put "fifth columnists" behind barbed wire as is already done in the case of enemy aliens.

The Canadian Corps Association has appointed General Victor Williams, former Ontario Provincial Police Commissioner, to head a "general staff" in a drive against possible "quislings" (named for the traitorous Norwegian Nazi) and for a more unified and quickened war effort.

Nation-wide mass meetings are planned by the Association and General Williams has called upon ex-servicemen to reconstitute the Canadian Expeditionary Force of 1914-18 to form a spearhead in this new effort.

LARGE CASTING FOUND ON ISLAND

City and Provincial Police Investigate Finding of Shaft on Zwick's Island

Mystery surrounds the finding of a four-ton dual shaft machine casting on Zwick's Island by Ernest McPherson, 162 James Street, early today. City and Provincial Police were notified of the discovery of the large piece of casted machinery and are mystified as to how the heavy article could have been abandoned at this point.

Provincial Constable W. E. Smith and Destective Fred Isard investigated the finding of the machinery and called City Engineer Charles Mott into consultation. No reports of such a large machine having been stolen in this part of the province have been reported to police, who are of the opinion the machinery was stolen and cached on Zwick's Island in hopes it would not be discovered until it could be dismantled and disposed of.

George Ketcheson, Foxboro, told police today that the machinery was not on the island yesterday when he visited it, which prompts the authorities to conclude that the machine was cached some time last night.

Mission Renewal For Men Opens at St. Michael's Church

The conclusion of the women's Mission was held at St. Michael's Church on Sunday afternoon and the spacious edifice was filled. An edifying part of the service was the renewal of the Baptismal Vows by those present, holding lighted candles. An eloquent sermon on the significance of Baptism was given by Rev. Father Coll, C. SS. R. Solemn Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was given by Very Rev. Dean Leacy, Napanee, assisted by Mather Coll and Father Gallery. The occasion was graced by the presence of Most Rev. Archbishop O'Brien, who was attended by Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., and Rev. J. J. Collins. At the conclusion of the service, Archbishop O'Brien gave a forceful address emphasizing the great spiritual benefits accruing from a renewal of the mission.

On Sunday night at seven-thirty a large number of men were present in St. Michael's Church for the opening exercises of the renewal of the Mission for the men. A splendid sermon was given by Father Gallery, C. SS. R., on the "Aim of Life." The mission Masses each morning this week are at five-thirty with the parish Mass at seven o'clock.

OWNERLESS ROWBOAT FOUND ON RIVER

A small rowboat was discovered drifting aimlessly down the Moira River early today. The boat—seen by Douglas Fraser apparently had broken loose from its owner's moorings "somewhere upriver" and had two oars in it when found.

At present the boat is tied up behind 144 Front Street.

Veritable Army of Parachutists Drifts Down Back of French Line

Military Circles in Paris Say These Invaders Have Attacked Bridges, Railway Stations and Public Buildings — Parachutists Carry Incendiary and Explosive Materials

Paris, May 21 (CP-Havas)—Parachutists in such numbers as to constitute a veritable army have been drifting down behind the French lines with telling effect, military quarters here said tonight after Premier Paul Reynaud had revealed for the first time that Germany was using parachute troops in present operations.

The parachutists have come down at many points in the French rear, it was learned. Carrying incendiary and explosive materials in addition to their regular arms, they have attacked bridges, railroad stations and public buildings.

A semi-official report said "the whole region behind Cambrai', east of the German thrust through Arras and Amiens, "is being burned systematically by incendiary bombs".

Parachutists Train Like Football Players

By Edwin Shanke

Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, May 21.—(AP)—German parachute troops undergoing their initial training look like football players engaged in toughening up exercises.

How they are groomed for their work was disclosed in a motion picture film on parachute jumping shown to the foreign press and soon to be released to theatres.

Besides the training of men, the picture showed cases of rifles and light machine guns landed separately in attacks.

As soon as the parachute troopers hit the ground, they rip off their parachutes and rush to these weapons. They also carry light arms.

Beginning their careers, the troopers first are given thorough infantry training.

Then they are introduced to the art of parachute jumping indoors.

Tumble and Perform Somersaults

They tumble and perform somersaults on heavy mats. They are dragged along the ground and then struggle to their feet against a tugging rope.

Then, suspended from cords just a few feet above the ground, they experience the sensation of swinging through the air and learn how to land properly in capricious winds.

The technique of jumping at intervals from an airplane so that they will not become entangled is practised by diving from the doorway of a transport on the ground into a sandpit.

Then the troopers in this new type of war are ready for the real thing.

BRIDGES ON MEUSE

"No shortcomings will be tolerated," the premier said in his fighting speech. "There will no longer be any dilatory procedure for traitors, saboteurs and cowards.

"I have told you the truth. We have confidence in our great chief, in our soldiers, in our aviators who are covering themselves with glory. I thank the Royal Air Force."

The Senators at this point stood and applauded.

Great Empires Cannot Die.

"These two great peoples, two great empires, cannot be defeated, cannot die. If I am told: 'A miracle is needed to save France', then I believe in miracles because I believe in France'."

Reynaud said that "two men who had the right to rest on their laurels have just placed themselves in the service of the country, Petain (Marshal Henri Petain, new vice premier) and Weygand (General Maxime Weygand, the new commander-in-chief)."

"Weygand, the man of Foch who stopped the German army in 1918, is today on the field of battle. Among Petain, Weygand, and myself there is complete agreement.

"The country is in danger and I will tell the truth to the senate and to the country. The territory of Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg having been violated, the enemy launched a formidable attack on the hinge of the French army at Sedan. French divisions were few on the Meuse. Gen. Korap's army defended it, better troops having been sent into Belgium.

Meuse Bridges Not Blown Up.

"Infiltration of the Meuse is easy for mobile troops. As a result of incredible mistakes which will be punished, the bridges across the Meuse were not blown up. Through the breach the motorized divisions passed."

The premier spoke of the disorganization of Gen. Korap's army and when he went on to mention the name of Marshal Petain, the Senators shouted "at last!" and rose to applaud the hero of Verdun.

Tribute To French, Belgians.

Jules Jeanneny, President of the Senate, paid tribute to the heroism of the French soldiers and, in the name of the Senate, expressed admiration for the Belgian people and saluted their fortitude and heroism.

The Senate then adjourned.

HIGH TENSION LINE TO PASS THRU WEST HUNTINGDON DISTRICT

West Huntingdon (Special)— The appearance of a number of surveyors through the south portion of this district aroused much curiosity. It was learned that a high power tension line coming from Quebec and going to Hamilton is soon to be erected. Steel towers will be built. These towers will be erected in some of the best fields of the farms. It is feared that much interference wil lbe felt with the radios.

Government inspected shipments of the two top grades moved at 1 cent premium.

Fair trading kept the generally light offerings clearing steadily on the butter market. Prices held previous levels, but the undertone was firmer. Prints moved through retail channels at former quotations.

Sows were $4.25-$4.75. Hogs sold on rail grade brought $11.30 hot weight.

mans in the present operation. The Nazi air force, raiding deep in the Allied rear, has dropped parachute units which in certain localities seized railway stations and bridges.

On the highly fluid battle front itself there was little change from the confused melee of the past three days. The German westward push toward the Channel continued but at a slower pace. The French evacuated Laon, 15 miles southeast of La Fere, and the Germans took it without fighting.

German Attempts Repulsed

Fresh German attempts to cross the Aisne in the vicinity of Rethel and new attacks on the main Maginot fortifications at Montmedy were repulsed.

The German operations during the day were carried out by their lighter motorized units, which advanced to some depth while between the Oise and the Meuse the French fell back slightly.

For the heavier German armored units yesterday was a day for rest, repairs and provisioning— a task becoming increasingly difficult for the Nazis. The assembling of large numbers of tanks and provided the Allied air forces with other motorized vehicles naturally first rate targets and yesterday full advantage was taken of this fact.

Unleash Tremendous Attack.

At numerous places along the front Allied reconnaissance planes spotted the great vehicles gathering in close to tank cars and mobile repair shops. Yesterday, with each target carefully selected, the Allied air forces unleashed a tremendous attack on the massed tanks and trucks. The French military spokesman said that the results were "magnificent".

The war in the air actually increased in intensity and German losses were huge. The spokesman said that the ratio of three German planes downed to every Allied ship had now been far exceeded. The German air force continued its main role as a key arm of the battle itself, attacking roads and railways and coastal ports.

The Allied Air Force was carrying the fighting behind the German positions, attacking troops and motorized units on the march. The British Air Force carried out large scale and effective bombing attacks in the Rhineland and elsewhere in Germany.

Concentrated Near Swiss Border.

The general reserve force of the German army is concentrated along the upper Rhine close to the Swiss frontier. It is supposed to amount to twenty to thirty divisions. According to information here, the Germans, encountering obstacles in France, have already transferred three to four divisions from this reserve to the fighting zone.

The morning general staff communique said: "Despite numerous engagements, the night produced no important changes in the situation, which remains confused between the Somme and the region of Cambrai. Enemy attacks were repulsed at various other points of the front, notably on the Aisne in the vicinity of Rethel. Our air force during the night continued its intense bombings of the enemy rear."

Fortunes of War Surge.

The swiftly changing fortunes of war surged around the little Picardy town of Peronne, 60 miles from the English Channel, as the Allies battled furiously to halt a German offensive jabbing westward across the plains of northern France.

So fast was the pace of fighting on this shifting front that authorities found it difficult to keep abreast of developments, but French military sources said that Peronne itself, which was reached yesterday by Nazi motorcycle troops, remained in Allied hands.

They also said they were in possession of Cambrai, 20 miles northeast of Peronne, and La Fere, 25 miles to the southeast.

A War Ministry spokesman said an Allied counter-attack on the German left flank had been launched from La Fere in the general direction of German-occupied St. Quentin, 13 miles to the north.

Spearhead Halted.

At the same time the spokesman reported that the German spearhead in the Laon region, 15 miles southeast of La Fere, had been halted about 80 miles northeast of Paris.

The advance units of the German army, which filtered into Peronne yesterday led by hard-riding motorcycle troops, paid for their advance with terrific losses.

Allied planes swooped low over the Germans, bombing them and strafing them with machine-gun fire. French tanks aided in beating off the Germans cutting wide swaths in their lines.

Swift Daylight Sallies

The technique employed by the Germans was said to hinge on swift daylight sallies by mechanized units, which returned to temporary bases after nightfall.

On discovering these methods, the French by sudden slicing attacks, cut off the retreat of many of the units and destroyed them.

Fresh motorized divisions of French and British troops were rolling up to join the fighting in the La Fere-Cambrai sector, which was one of the famous battlegrounds of the first Great War.

It was at Cambrai that the first large scale attack by tanks — a British development—was launched in the last conflict.

Thousands of vehicles jammed the roads behind the lines on both sides of the front in this sector. Heavy forces of French infantry were being massed around the salient by the new Allied commander-in-chief, General Maxime Weygand.

Fight at Eastern End

Sharp fighting continued at the eastern end of the pocket which the Germans, have driven into France through the border defence system just north of the heavily fortified Maginot Line, which ends at the junction of the Belgian, Luxembourg and French frontiers.

At Rethel, 100 miles from Paris on the lower fringe of this pocket, the Germans succeeded in crossing the Aisne River, but the French drove them back by fierce counter-attacks.

A number of Germans were taken prisoner in this action.

In Belgium, where the forts at Liege and Namur held out still, the British and Belgians continued a strategic withdrawal necessitated by the German advances in the St. Quentin sector, which threatened to cut them off.

Allied sources said the withdrawal was being executed with a minimum of casualties.

9TH FRENCH ARMY

Informed Quarters Deny Claim

(Well-informed quarters in Paris today, denied German claims that General Henri Giraud, Commander of the 9th army, and his staff had been captured.)

(In London a military spokesman said the situation "is more confused than ever with everybody behind everybody else's lines." There has been no indication, however, that any engagement of a decisive character has been fought.)

"The army staff and General Giraud, hitherto commander of the 7th French army, who assumed command over the 9th army, have been captured.

(There was no confirmation of this claim available in Paris or London. General Henri Giraud is the commander of the Allied forces opposing the German advance in the "battle of the bulge.")

"German divisions flow into the breach forced by the German thrust. German armored cars and motorised troops at their head took Arras, Amiens and Abbeville.

(These claims could not be confirmed. As regards Amiens, a vital communications centre, the British military spokesman said: "It may well be true that a few isolated tanks reached Amiens but there certainly are no large German columns." Abbeville, which is northwest of Amiens, is 15 miles from the English channel.)

"Thus the Germans began crowding toward the channel coast all the French and Belgian armies still to be found north of the Somme.

"In Belgium our troops attacked the enemy, which again accepted the fight east of Ghent and farther south of the Scheldt River. Enemy attempts to force a way out southward from the Valenciennes region foundered."

Laon Taken

"On the southern wing of our attack, German troops, as previously reported in a special announcement, took Laon and stormed over the Chemin Des Dames as far as the Aisne-Oise canal.

(Laon, 75 miles northeast of Paris, was evacuated by the French and occupied by the Germans without fighting. All attempts by the Germans to cross the Aisne have been repulsed, it was announced in Paris.)

"Here, during a defence against French counter-attacks, numerous armored cars were destroyed. The city of Rethel, which was still contolled by enemy units, was taken."

(There was no comment in Paris regarding the City of Rethel, but numerous enemy attacks in the vicinity of Rethel were repulsed.)

"The air force shares outstandingly in the victory of the army.

"The air force, through complete control of the air, througn destruction of river crossings and traffic connections, and through attacks on marching and transport columns, speeded up dissolution of the 9th French army.

(The Air Ministry in London announced that the Royal Air Force had caused heavy German losses in battles fought with "matchless courage" against the numerically superior German air forces.)

"All attempts at endangering the flanks of our break-through were nipped in the bud."

No Allied Counter Offensive

(The expected Allied counter-offensive on the German flanks has not yet been made. The Allied commander, General Maxime Weygand, is now believed to be assembling his forces for this undertaking.)

"During reconnaissance over the sea before the French coast one French destroyer, the French navy tanker Niger of 5,482 tons, the French freighter Pavon and two additional freighters were seriously damaged.

"In the course of the night in the Dover-Calais straits, six transports and one tanker, with a tonnage of 43,000, were sunk by bombs and four additional ships of approximately 13,000 tons were severely damaged.

(None of the above claims of Allied losses at sea could be confirmed.)

"Total losses of the opponents in the air yesterday amounted to 47 planes. Fifteen German planes were missing."

(The Royal Air Force losses yesterday were two bombers and 14 fighters. Thirty German planes were destroyed by the R.A.F.)

London Says Claims Exaggerated

London, May 21—(CP)—An authoritative source said today that the claims made by today's German communique which declared the Germans had captured Abbeville, 15 miles from the English channel) were regarded as grossly exaggerated.

FRONT OF DOCK BEING REFACED

Workmen are employed repairing the cement face of the Government dock. Wooden forms have been erected along the front of the dock and the work of refacing the pier commenced yesterday. The cement facing of the dock was badly in need of repairs, the facing having completely disappeared from the continued water and weather conditions. The entire front of the dock, facing Prince Edward County, is being repaired and refaced with cement.

KINGSTON MOTORIST EVADES SIGNAL

It fell the unfortunate lot of a Kingston motorist to be apprehended for evading the traffic stop light signal at the intersection of Front and Bridge Sts, yesterday. It has been the practice of some motorists to drive through Holway's service station entrance whenever the main intersection traffic light is red, indicating no through traffic. Yesterday afternoon P.C. Arnott observed Frank Lem, Kingston motorist, evading this traffic signal by cutting through the service station property, without stopping. The motorist was apprehended and taken to the police station, where he was warned against such practices in Belleville. Other motorists should take this as a warning as fines will be levied against future infractions of this practice, police warned today.

BEAR REPORTED SEEN NEAR WALLBRIDGE

What was said to be a medium sized bear was seen browsing in the garden of a family named Riley on the Frankford road near Wallbridge this week, according to reports from that district.

Bruin, apparently, had wandered far from his natural habitat, but his new environment appeared to have little effect on him. After sniffing about the garden, the amiable bear ambled off into a nearby thicket and was lost from sight.

Wallbridge, according to oldtimers is the most southerly point that bears have been seen within a number of years. Residents of Stirling, last year reported visits of the animals, but these were rare.

DOES TRIPLE DUTY AGAINST NAZIS

Flying in great numbers over Belgium and France combatting the enemy are Great Britain's aerial "triple threat" Bristol-Beaufort bombers. These planes are built to secret specifications but this much is known of them. They are armed with machine-guns firing from forward positions and from a power-operated gun turret in the tail. It is the fastest twin-engined bomber in operation and carries a crew of four. It is known as the "jack of all trades" inasmuch as it can be used as a long-range bomber, torpedo bomber or general reconnaissance plane.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, May 22

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DAY OF progress and opportunity for much surprising productive work is read from the prevailing mutual aspects. This may operate in business as well as in all pertaining to writings, publishing, publicity and promotional enterprises. Satisfactory new contracts are in sight, with promotion and the friendly support of those in prestige and power. Cultivate these and work with groups of exalted ambitions. March definitely upon high goals.

Those whose birthday it is are assured of a year of definite opportunity for growth and expansion, especially in all sorts of business or employment in which sharp mentality and insight as well as literary ability are required. Writing, publishing, promotions, should attract the generous support of capital or other solid endorsement of those in standing. Seek these, but reach for high objectives, in which social welfare or public good are stressed. Propitious for renewing contracts and at enhanced profit and personal popularity.

A child born on this day may have exceptional talent in a professional line, legal, literary or financial, with much prospect of progress and preferment at the hands of those in place and power. Its aims should be advanced and progressive.

AT THE BELLE

"Dr. Cyclops"

Paramount's daring excursion into the realm of film fantasy, "Dr. Cyclops" the picture whose background, plot and characters have been a closely-guarded secret these many months, is now being shown at the Belle theatre. Filmed in technicolor, with color effects and photographic illusions never attempted before, the new adventure thriller promises to be one of the most novel and exciting experiences ever afforded filmgoers.

Illusion though it is, "Dr. Cyclops" has little in common with such past fantasies as "Snow White" or "Gulliver's Travels," for the new picture is a story about real people, played by real people. Its central figure is a diabolical doctor who discovers a way to "shrink" human beings into miniscule creatures one-fifth their normal size, and its other characters are the scientist's five hapless victims.

The hair-raising plot, which Paramount kept secret for so long, and with good reason, tells of four men and a beautiful young woman who recklessly invade "Dr. Cyclops'" weird laboratory high up in the Peruvian Andes, are turned into humanettes fourteen inches tall by the infamous savant and undergo horrible experiences in a world suddenly magnified five times its customary size.

To the doctor's helpless little victims, hitherto familiar objects are now stark terrors. The house cat is a gigantic monster to threaten their very lives. The doctor is a evil titan, from whom they vainly but frantically attempt to flee. A specimen case serves as a dungeon to incarcerate them all.

Knocking over past Hollywood conventions like nine-pins, "Dr. Cyclops" is a million-dollar production without a single familiar "movie name" in its cast. Director Ernest Shoedsack, the man who made "King Kong," passed up all the celebrities in filmdom and selected players solely for their fitness to portray the year's most unusual and exacting roles.

"And One Was Beautiful"

Beautiful women in a struggle for the love of a man who faces prison to save one of them from the same fate, form the dramatic triangle in "And One Was Beautiful," drama of love, sacrifice and intrigues of the smart set, the second good feature on the same program. Based on the novel by Alice Duer Miller, it tells the story of a man who faces prison for a girl, while her sister, who knows the truth, is torn between love for the man and loyalty to the sister. Robert Cummings plays the man in the case, the part offering him a powerfully dramatic part in contrast to his recent comedy portrayal with Sonja Henie in "Everything Happens at Night." The sister roles are filled by Laraine Day, fast-rising starlet who has achieved great popularity as the pretty nurse of the "Dr. Kildare" pictures, and Jean Muir who returns to the screen work in this picture following two years on the New York and London stage. Billie Burke plays the mother of the two girls and others prominently cast include Ann Morriss, Esther Dale, Charles Waldron, Frank Milan, Rand Brooks, Paul Stanton and Ruth Tobey. Directed by Robert B. Sinclair, the picture weaves tense drama amid gay night clubs and glamorous pleasures of New York's smart set.

Highlights of the Belle News of the hour includes pictures of the Holland-Belgium invasion; President Roosevelt sees perils to all Americans and other up-to-the-minute world news events.

ANOTHER TARGET FOR NAZI BOMBS

Just another of many such buildings to feel the smash of Nazi bombs, this wrecked church in Northern France was a target for Nazi bombers.—Passed by French Censor.

BLITZKRIEG KNOWS NO NON-COMBATANTS

Crushed beds, half buried in debris of the wrecked interior of a maternity hospital in Northern France, stands as mute evidence of the savagery of Nazi aerial attacks which are being launched against non-military objectives.—Passed by French Censor.

THEY DID NO WRONG, BUT WERE MURDERED

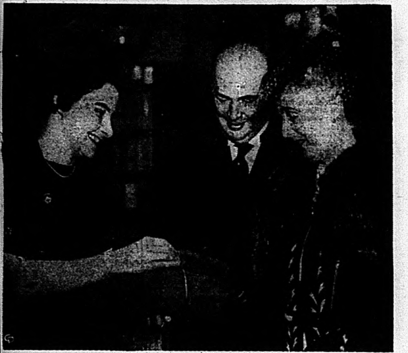
The war is over for them, a French woman and her babe, innocent victims of Nazi savagery. Their bodies rest beside the road in northern France where they died during a Nazi air raid in which fleeing refugees were mercilessly bombed and machine gunned by German warplanes.—Passed by French Censor.

Countess of Athlone Visits Canadian Red Cross Headquarters



Princess Alice, Countess of Athlone and wife of the governor-general designate of Canada, is pictured here during a visit to the Canadian Red Coss headquarters in London. Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, former prime minister of Canada and now chairman of the Canadian Red Cross, is shown with the countess as she examines a pair of sox to be sent to Canadian troops.—Passed by British Censor.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Dark Rapture"

A picture made to thrill every member of the family, is now showing at the McCarthy theatre. It is "Dark Rapture" which is not, as one might suppose, a story of romance in Harlem. It is a medium-length travelogue of a pictorial account of an expedition, sponsored by the late King Alfred of Belgium, into the Belgian Congo, and has more authentic thrills than an exciting gangster picture.

Some of the animal photography is reminiscent of picturees taken by Osa and Martin Johnson, but most of the Congo pictures are entirely new. Shots of the capture and patient training of wild elephants are terrifically exciting, and there are interesting revelations on the lives of the pygmies and a little known race of jungle giants. The sight of those pygmies building a bridge of vines over a crocodile-infested river is as wonderful as watching any steel structure that ever went up. We recommend that you see "Dark Rapture" it is different and completely fascinating screen entertainment. Phil Regan, Jean Parker, Col. Roscoe Turner and Noah Beery, Jr. in "Flight at Midnight" is a second feature offering on the program that is also highly worth seeing and combines plenty of fun and laughs with thrills and excitement. Latest Fox News Events of important happenings both in Canada and the United States as well as at the war fronts, is shown preceding the above feature presentations.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Mad Empress"

The vivid story of Maximilian and Carlota is told dramatically by Medea Novara, Austrian-born star, Conrad Nagel and Lionel Atwill in "The Mad Empress," now playing at the Capitol.

Authentic in every detail, producer-director Miguel Torres was granted unprecedented co-operation by the Mexican government in the use of national museums, historic palaces, jewels, costumes, and the Mexican army itself for battle scenes.

In the title role, Medea Novara is captivating as the consort of Maximilian, convincing her husband to accept a Mexican monarchy for the good they are led to believe they can accomplish in that country.

When they discover that Napoleon had tricked and used them as foils for conquering Mexico, it is too late to save Mexico and themselves.

In the able supporting cast are Guy Bates Post, Jason Robards, Evelyn Brent and Duncan Renaldo.

On the same programme Stuart Erwin is seen as the "All American Chump", an uproarious comedy from start to finish. Robert Armstrong and Betty Furness ably support him.

PRESTO MUSIC CLUB

The last regular meeting of the 1939-40 season was held at the home of Miss Lazelle Brown and Miss N. Ketcheson, 229 Albert St., on Monday evening, May 20. The program was arranged by Phyllis May and consisted of the following numbers:— (1) Piano, Chas. Kilgour, Lento (Cyril Scott); (2) Vocal Mrs. Houston, (a) God's Garden, (Lambert); (b) Wake Up! (Philips); (3) Piano, Mr. V. P. Hunt, (a) Clair de lune (Debussy); (b) Nocturne (Grieg); (4) Vocal, Doris Houston, There will Always be an England, (Charles); (5) Piano, S. Alec Gordon, (a) Etude (Heller); (b) The Tides (Cowell); (6) Vocal, Ann Brown, (a) May Day Carol, (Deems-Taylor); (b) Love's a Merchant, (Carew); (7) Piano, Wm. G. Connor, Scherzo in C Sharp minor (Chopin); (8) Piano Duet, S. Alec Gordon and Wm. G. Connor, Three Spanish Dances, (Moszkowski; (9) ladies' chorus, Land of Hope and Glory, (Elgar).

Very tasty refreshments with Mrs. Houston pouring coffee, and a social hour brought the meeting to a close.

FEARING INVASION, SWISS ARMED FORCES STAND TO THEIR GUNS

Fearing that they may be next on the Nazi list of invasions, the Swiss are grimly standing to their guns determined to resist any violation of their neutrality to the best of their ability. A Swiss anti-aircraft gun, LEFT, bangs out its message of death somewhere among Switzerland's mountains. Swiss planes, such as the one pictured, ABOVE, are reported to have battled a German bombing plane squadron flying over Zurich and to have shot down one Nazi bomber. The crew of the bomber burnt their plane after crashing and have been interned. A close watch is being kept on the frontier of Switzerland and Germany, where swastika-marked Nazi guards, ABOVE, do sentry duty. Barbed wire entanglements have been moved back on the German side of the boundary heightening fears that the Nazis are preparing a jumping off place for their troops to invade Switzerland.

NOTHING NEW TO BELGIUM

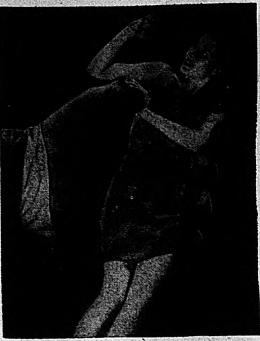
Nazi bombers make no exceptions between civilians and soldiers as they roar across Belgian skies bombing and machine-gunning everything within range. A farm cart, loaded with few pitiful belongings she had attempted to save, stands beside the body of a Belgian peasant woman where she had been struck down while fleeing from the path of the Nazi blitzkrieg. The current martyrdom, of Belgium, is strikingly similar to its crucifixion in 1914.—Passed by Britsh Censor.

BELGIAN CITIES FALL VICTIMS OF NAZI BOMBERS

Stark evidence of the ruthlessness of Germany's aerial attack on Belgium, the ruined street shown here is on the outskirts of Louvain, the Belgian city east of Brussels from which Nazi troops were driven by the British. Later the British troops were ordered to withdraw to prepared positions and Louvain is now in German hands.



In the palm of his hand—and scared out of her wits, Janice Logan struggles against her relentless master, "Dr. Cyclops," in the technicolor thrill drama of the same name, in which the characters are revealed as fourteen inches tall. Now at the Belle Theatre.

"Lover Come Back"

by BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

After Kemp and Chris had both left, Sondra turned to her grandfather. "I wonder what ails Kemp lately."

"So ye've noticed it too? He covers it well, but there's a bottled-up tension underneath. 'Tis as if he watched his heart's treasure slippin' away, and he helpless behind his mask." He darted a sharp look at Sondra. "Ye haven't been quarrelin' —the pair of ye?"

"No, lamb." She hesitated, then rushed on earnestly, "I like Kemp, Dynamite. He's a perfectly grand person. But there's something—I don't know why, but I just can't find it in me to really love him."

"Mm-m-m. Me own reactions are similar," the captain commented dryly. "But—belike the boy's only worried about his fish and Reynall's competition. If that be all, he'll soon be restin' easy. I've promised to break Reynall and take his cannery—and I will."

"Dynamite!" Sondra leaned across the table and spoke with sudden sharpness. "I don't like this way of running a business. It isn't—sporting. It—oh, darling, let's not fight the Reynalls any more. Let's just go ahead and attend to our own business, and have peace."

"Peace! Holy sailor, Sondy, I'm too young a man to be enjoyin' peace. And even if I wasn't"—a grimness crept into his voice —"there'd be no peace for me so long as the Glory lies disgraced there, under me nose."

Sondra shook her head at him and, feeling baffled and beaten, turned to the window. Her grandfather would go his way, and there was nothing she could do about it. She knew he never felt the joy of life so completely as when engaged in battle. But, confound it, why had Pate selected Jean Reynall for him to fight with?

That afternoon Sondra left the village and her depression behind her as she turned her speeding cruiser into the channel that led to the Forest Man's camp in the Place of Trees.

Sondra swung the Spindrift in between two wooded points, and headed for the small boat-landing at the farther end of the U-shaped cove. As she drew near, she could see a boom of peeled timbers fastened by long ropes to a giant cedar not far from the landing. In the little crescent meadow between beach and forest, lay a pile of foundation logs for the new cabin; and near the big cedar, rising above some alders, was a tiny house on stilts—the cache where provisions were kept. But neither the Forest Man nor his boat were anywhere in evidence. Should she turn back at once, or wait here a few hours on the chance that he might return?

While she hesitated, the decision was taken out of her hands; for the Spindrift gave a sudden lurch, a series of bumps, and came to a stop with mud from her churning propeller boiling up through the green water under her stern.

"Darn it!" cried Sondra, aloud. "I forgot that bar!"

She stopped the engine and with an Indian paddle sounded the depth of water alongside. Barely two feet, and the tide running out for several more hours!

She rolled up the legs of her slacks, piled overboard, and tried to shove the cruiser back into the channel; but the Spindrift was stuck hard and fast.

Hot, breathless, soaked to the waist, she clambered back into the cockpit and considered how many hours it would take the tide to ebb and come in again high enough to float her boat. "Stymied—until after midnight," she concluded.

Searching the lockers for something to help her while away the time. she came on a new harmonica she had bought for Katlean's small brother; and while the Spindrift slowly settled on its side, she blew in and out until she achieved something faintly reminiscent of "Home, Sweet Home".

A large tepid raindrop splashed on her cheek. By the time she got into her jacket and beret, a steady, gentle downpour was silvering the green of the cove.

She considered the possibility of shelter ashore. The only place that offered was the giant cedar above the landing; and to reach it she must wade the narrow channel between the bar and the beach.

"Can do," she decided cheerfully.

She made sure of her boat by slipping a coil of rope over her arm, and tying one end of it to the Spindrift. Then, with trail-axe thrust through her belt and the Indian paddle as a staff, she set forth.

Half an hour later, she had a campfire going under the wide-spreading cedar, and enough driftwood piled near it to last for hours. Her slacks, tennis shoes and anklets hung drying on a branch above the fire. There was no wind, and not a drop of rain penetrated the heavy green boughs that reached out as far as the creamy blossoms on the elderberry bushes along the creek.

"Cozy!" pronounced Sondra, sitting down on her coat and stretching her slender bare legs to the warmth of the fire. "But gash! I wish I had something to eat!"

She turned a considering eye on the Forest Man's cache. Food was there, if she could climb to the little door, ten feet above the ground. There was no ladder, of course. But nearby lay two slender poles, rough with bark and stubs of branches. Why not drag the poles over to the cache and slant them up to the little door?

It was an unstable device at best, when she got it in place, but with unabated enthusiasm she began creeping up it on hands and knees. Two feet . . . three . . . five feet she "cooned", wincing as the bark bit into her soft skin. Then, quick as a flash, one of the poles turned, throwing her off balance. The back of her pullover snagged on one of the stiff, spiky stubs as she fell, and she found herself hung there as if on a hook, her toes barely touching the ground.

Her predicament was ludicrous but, she realized, it might also prove serious. She dropped her full weight against the pole, hoping either to tear the pullover or break the stub; but neither gave way and she speedily resumed her position on tip-toe to realize the pressure against her throat. With forced calmness she was considering what to do next, when her ears caught the welcome rut-tut-tut of a boat's engine at the mouth of the cove. The Forest Man coming back, thank heaven!

Sondra could turn her head enough to see across the narrow meadow to the edge of the forest where he must appear. Almost at once she heard him approaching, whistling something surprisingly modern and gay. She was about to call his name, when her startled eyes told her the man, emerging from the trees was not the bland-bearded logger.

He wore a short yellow slicker, white rubber hip boots, a yellow sou'wester pushed back from his dark, beardless face. And the swashbuckling way he wore them made Sondra dismally certain of the man's identity even before she saw the yellow marsh daisy, big as a sunflower, thrust through the buttonhole of his slicker. Jean Reynall—of all people on the North American Continent!

She kept silent, trying to make herself smaller behind the fringe of alders. She wished she could sink into the ground, melt in the rain—anything rather than have him find her, in pullover and satin panties, ridiculously dangling from a pole. The creature had a positive genius for catching her at disadvantage. What was he doing here, anyway?

Her question was answered when he swung down through the meadow to the boom of logs now stranded on the bared beach near the little landing. He went about in a stooped position, closely examining each one. It was not until his inspection was finished that his gaze was caught and held by the Spindrift, careened high and dry on the bar. He took a step forward; then his eyes followed the rope from the cruiser up to the dying campfire, with her slacks dangling from the limb above. With an air of puzzlement, he peered anxiously about, and at last caught a glimpse of her through the alders. His face lighted, and he came toward her on the run.

"Sondra! Gash, infant, you gave me a scare!" There was no hint that he had noticed her plight or her costume, and the way his eyes went softly brilliant when he looked down at her almost made her forget all her grievances against him. "Are you alone here, darling?"

She ignored the endearment and remembered the cut hawser. "No, indeed!" she retorted flippantly. "As you see, I'm completely in the bosom of my family."

He shook his head slowly and grinned. "What gal!" Then, matter-of-factly, he placed a hand under each of her arms, lifted her up until her sweater pulled clear of the impaling stub, and dropped her gently back to earth.

She managed a very casual "thank you", and walked to her campfire with all the dignity possible to a bare-legged young woman who has just been plucked off a hook by the most exasperating man of her acquaintance.

She was giving rapt attention to rebuilding the fire, when he came rustling up in his oilskins, slapping the sou-wester against his knee to dislodge the rain. "The Forest Man won't be back here for several days, Sondra—he told me so himself, this morning. It's lucky I popped over for a look at the spruce he's getting out for me. The Baltic is waiting for me in deep water on the other side of the peninsula."

"Indeed? Then don't let me detain you, captain," she said politely.

He laughed. "I should have said 'waiting for us'. You'll let me take you back to Sitka, of course, and send someone out after the Spindrift?"

"On the contrary, I shall wait right here until the Spindrift floats. And I prefer waiting alone—if that can be arranged."

Jean jammed the sou'wester on his head and, without another word, strode back the way he had come.

Her heart sank as she watched the forest shadows close behind him. She hadn't expected him to leave her. She sat looking at the place where he had vanished, almost certain he must reappear there, coming back to her. But minutes passed; then the Baltic's exhaust echoed suddenly against the hills . . . receded . . . gradually faded into silence. He was gone.

That he should coolly abandon her after she had ordered him to do so, seemed somehow a deeper affront than all his former flouting of the O'Moores. "The brute!" she exclaimed angrily, and was doubly angered to find herself blinking back tears of unreasonable disappointment. "He doesn't care what happens to me. He might at least have argued a little to see if I'd change my mind!"

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103

Paris, May 22—(AP) — A new wave of optimism swept over France today as reports reached the capital that the French army had retaken Arras and chased a strong advance force of Germans out of Abbeville, 12 miles from the English Channel.

The Ministry of Information, rallying Frenchmen from the gloom that followed the setbacks of the last few days, announced also that the bridges of the Somme River had been destroyed and a strong stand taken by French troops to halt any southward push.

The first note of optimism was sounded by General Maxime Weygand, Allied Commander-in-Chief, after a visit to the front, and every hour as the day wore on his words to Reynaud were repeated over the Humidity! All of the gaseous constituents of the air except water vapor and carbon dioxide are present in invariable proportions. Water vapor varies not only from place to place, but from time to time and is, of course, very important. Sometimes the air is fully charged with moisture, and we then say the humidity is 100 per cent; but even then it is not visible, and the air does not feel wet unless it condenses on the skin as visible water. Half of the water vapor is below the 8,000-foot level. At the surface the amount in the air may vary from almost nothing to about 4 per cent by volume or about 5.7 grains to every cubic foot if the temperature is 60 degrees.

Administration School to Remain At Trenton, Ontario

Ottawa, May 22.—(CP)—The Department of National Defence today announced that the School of Administration in connection with the British Commonwealth Air Training plan would remain at Trenton, Ont. It was originally planned to move the school to Camp Borden.

Since then it has been decided the accommodation and facilities at Trenton are sufficient for the establishment which is in charge of Wing Commander Frederick J. Mawdesley.

The school provides training for administrative officers who will serve in the expanding establishment of the training plan and throughout the Royal Canadian Air Force. Already members of the first class to pass through the school have been posted to administrative positions in various parts of the country. Capacity of the school is 40 officers.

Proposer Alone Votes For Sale by U. S. Of Army, Navy Planes

Washington, May 22 —(AP)— By a vote of 12 to 1, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee shelved today a proposal that the United States sell army and navy planes to the Allies.

Only Senator Claude Papper (Dem-Florida), the author, voted for the proposal.

Chairman Key Pittman, Nevada Democrat said it was the consensus of the committee members that the Legislation would violate international law and would constitute "intervention by the United States" in the war.

Pepper, Pittman said, agreed with this view but argued that "Hitler had violated all the rules of international law and that the success of the Allies was of vital importance to us."

'Kill Murdering Swine' Angry Women Scream At German Prisoners

London, May 22 (CP)—Angry women screamed "kill the murdering swine" as 22 captured German fliers were landed in England today from two Belgian ships.

Military police held the women back. The prisoners, captured 30 miles from Dieppe, France, were led off to internment camps.

A Briton, who travelled in the same ship, said Dieppe had been heavily bombed, and that hospital ships and other vessels in port were unable to leave because of mines laid outside.

LONDON PRESS HOPEFUL GERMANS CAN BE CHECKED

No Attempt Made, However, to Minimize the Seriousness of the Situation

COURAGE NEEDED

London, May 22 (CP).—London press made no attempt today to minimize the seriousness of the situation on the western front but, as one, their editorials were hopeful that the situation could be restored.

The Times summed up the worst side of the situation but concluded that although chances for restoring it appear bad they still exist. There had been an impression for several days that reports from the battlefront did not reveal the full gravity of the situation, the editorial added. Many commentators had been overhopeful in their view of the extent to which supply difficulties would check the German advance.

The Express, Britain's most widely circulated daily, told its readers the "tenacity of our race will be our salvation."

"Is Hitler going to win the war?" the Express asked, and answered its question: "No! Here is the reason: For eight months warning voices have told Englishmen not to be too sure of success against Hitler. But they always refused to believe they could lose. Now in the hour of sudden defeats, when we must expect further blows and buffetings, they'll refuse to believe they've lost."

All papers featured reports that the Germans are at Amiens and that they claimed to have taken Abbeville.

The Times noted that Amiens is the most important railway junction in northern France, and added that it cannot be doubted that the 'enemy has gained possession of vast stores of both food and fuel.'

It found the most hopeful aspect of the situation in the fact that considerable numbers of French troops are holding out although the enemy dashed past them.

The News Chronicle said the news was black and at such a time as this there is only one virtue for us all and that is courage; only one vice and that is to breathe the word defeat.

OPTIONS TAKEN ON LAND

Foreign Exchange Pours into Ottawa, Old Socks, Crannies Give up Hoard

Ottawa, May 22 (CP). — Amazement at the amounts and varieties of foreign exchange in the form of bills, cheques and certificates which Canadians have been storing away for safe keeping was expressed today by officials of the Foreign Exchange Control Board.

Under an order-in-council passed April 30, Canadian residents have until May 31 to transfer all their holdings of foreign exchange to the Board in exchange for Canadian funds.

Since the order was announced, securities of every shape and form have been pouring in to the chartered banks and thence to the Foreign Exchange Control Board, from old socks, nooks, crannies and safety deposit boxes across the continent.

Among thousands of dollars' worth of exchange turned in officials found a large number of traveller's cheques as much as ten years old, and bundles of old bank notes from many countries, including Germany.

From a rail worker in the Maritimes came two dividend cheques, both for amounts of more than $1,000, on which he has been losing interest since their dating in April and July, 1938. Another Canadian exchanged $35,000 in United States currency which he had been storing in a safety deposit box.

Officials said they would have no idea of the total amount of foreign exchange turned in until after May 31.

'Hard Battles Ahead' Expected by Germans In Allied Counter Blow

AP Correspondent With German Armies Says Germans Are Aware of This—German Commander is Said to Await Hitler's Telephoned Order to Attack 500,000 Allied Troops in Flanders

By the Canadian Press

Associated Press dispatches from Berlin today reflected a more subdued tone in the pronouncements of the German military leaders.

The main German army in northern France was said to be bracing itself for a hard counter-attack by the Allied forces under the command of General Maxime Weygand.

"It may be that our present movements will come to a temporary halt," General Walther von Reichenau, German Field Commander, was quoted as saying. "Weygand has ordered every man to stand his ground. That may mean hard fights ahead."

Louis P. Lochner, Associated Press correspondent with the German armies, reported today that "the Germans are aware that they have not yet made contact with the main Allied forces."

Colonel General Walther von Reichenau was represented as waiting for a telephoned order from Hitler to attack with the German right wing against 500,000 Allied troops in Flanders.

People Reminded Battle Not Yet Over and That Back in World War Allies Emerged Victorious From More Precarious Positions

NEED MORE PLANES

Beaverbrook Appeals to Aircraft Workers to Operate on Seven-Day Schedule Around the Clock

London, May 22—(CP)—British and Belgian troops fought today with "their backs to the wall" in Flanders and northwestern France to keep the German Blitzkrieg army from winning channel ports and attacking the United Kingdom.

However, Britain's hopes of stemming the German march to the sea and the vital channel ports rose with reports of new air force successes and the slowing down of the intensive German mechanized drive.

The nation was cheered by these developments:

The French recapture of Arras.

A widespread attack on targets in the industrial Rhineland area by Royal Air Force bombers.

The lessening force of the German thrust over soggy fields in Northern France.

The arrival of a new contingent of Canadians in England.

The high morale of the R.A.F. was indicated in an air ministry announcement that one British pilot had attacked 20 German bombers, damaged two and escaped.

The Allied forces in Flanders and Northern France are fighting desperately to keep the Germans from winning their way to the channel.

Commentators reminded the people the battle was not over and that the troops were in more precarious-looking situations in the First Great War, yet emerged victorious.

Even if the Germans should consolidate positions along the English channel, observers said, the Allied main armies still remain intact and the British navy and air force still pack plenty of punch.

The military commentator of The Daily Herald in discussing the chances of success of a German invasion of the British Isles remarked: "There have been continental conquerors in the past but in some strange indefinable way their magic touch has seemed to cease at the shoreline."

2nd OFFICER CALLED

Parkland, Alta., May 22—(CP)—Constable P. G. P. Counsell, of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, was shot in the head and killed when with other officers he raided the barricaded home of Charles Hansen, wanted for the wounding of his son, George, last night.

Shot Bursting into Home

Counsell wos shot as he and a party of police officers burst into Hansen's home after they had thrown tear gas into the house in an effort to dislodge him. Hansen, barricaded in the attic poked a rifle through an opening and shot Counsell in the head as the men started to search the lower floor of the house.

The other policemen retired to reform their lines and attempt a new ottack.

The farmer, prominent resident of this district 60 miles south of Calgary, barricaded himself in his home early today. His son, George, is near death in hospital with a bullet wound in the stomach.

Hansen's other two sons, Benny, 24, and Carl, 30, told police that late last night their father ordered them aa gunpoint to take him to George's farm. On arrival he alighted from their automobile and, seeing George outside, shot at him, the sons said. The bullet struck the younger farmer in the stomach.

The sons notified neighbors who telephoned Corporal G. Wilson of the R.C.M.P. at Claresholm. Wilson hurried to Hansen's home and when Hansen refused to surrender, Wilson fired several shots into the house.

Police said Mrs. Charles Hansen and her daughter, May, fled from their home and are now with friends. George Hansen's wife died in March.

NEW DESTROYERS LARGEST OF CLASS IN THE DOMINION

2 Warships Are Sisterships of Famous H. M. S. Cossack of Altmark Fame

OF 1,870 TONS

New War Vessels Will Have Complement of 190 Officers and Men Each

Ottawa, May 22 (CP)—Sisterships of the illustrious H.M.S. Cossack of Altmark fame, the two Tribal class destroyers now under construction in Great Britain for the Royal Canadian Navy will be the largest, fastest and most heavily armed destroyers in the service of this Dominion, it was learned today.

Like the graceful, high-bowed Cossack which earned fame in rescue of imprisoned British seamen on the German prison ship Altmark in a Norwegian Fjord and later participated in the Narvik campaign in Norwegian waters, the new Canadian vessels will mount eight 4.7 inch guns, four 21-inch torpedo tubes, and seven smaller quick-firing guns. The speed will be 36.5 knots.

Additions Announced

Defence Minister Rogers announced the pending additions to the navy in a speech before parliament last night. While he was in England recently, he said, he had discussed with the Admiralty "the terms under which two new Tribal class destroyers are being constructed for the Canadian government. The order for these destroyers has already been placed and a beginning has been made upon their construction."

The Minister did not say when they would be ready for their Canadian crews.

The new destroyers will be of 1,870 tons displacement compared with the 1,390 tons of the flotilla leader, H. M. C. S. Assiniboine, purchased earlier in the war and hitherto the largest Canadian destroyer.

Armament of Warship

Assiniboine's main armament is four 4.7 inch guns, half of the number of the tribal class and the flotilla leader has six smaller guns compared with four in the tribal class. Assiniboine's top speed is 35.75 knots compared with 36.5 for the tribal class.

The new vessels will have a complement of 190 officers and ratings compared with 175 for the Assiniboine, and 44,000 horse-power from their turbines compared with 36,000 turned up by Assiniboine. The tribal class overall waterline length is 355 1-2 feet, beam 36 1-2 and draught nine feet compared with 326 feet length, 33 feet beam and 8 2-3 feet draught of the flotilla leader.

(By J. F. Sanderson, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 22 (CP)—Parliament tonight invested the government with powers to conscript labor and wealth to strengthen the nation's shield against German invasion.

Within three hours the House of Commons and the House of Lords passed and the King approved a bill giving the government sweeping emergency powers demanded "in view of the grave peril in which the nation stands today."

Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, acting for Prime Minister Churchill, introduced a bill conferring on the government complete control of persons and property, and at the same time announced formation of a committee under Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor, to push munitions production.

The legislation would require all persons "to place themselves, their services and their property at the disposal of His Majesty for securing the public safety, the defence of the realm, the maintenance of public order, the efficient prosecution of the war and for maintaining supplies or services essential to the life of the community.

AIR PILOT BLOCKS NAZI VANGUARD

Hurls 'Kiss' (Grenade) at Nazis and Escapes With Bullets Pattering About Feet

London, May 22.—(CP)—A Royal Air Force pilot told today of standing alone in the midst of a burning French town and, for one long moment, blocking the vanguard of German hosts advancing toward the sea.

Red-eyed and weary from 10 days of "hell on land and in the air", the pilot said he had "thrown a kiss at them"—a hand grenade —and then escaped with bullets pattering about his feet. Here's his story:

"In a town that lay directly ahead of their drive to the channel I was checking to see that nothing had been left behind for Jerry to use. Standing in the street by my car I looked over my shoulder and there they were.

"There were 12 of them walking through the smoke of burning buildings. There were no tanks or armored cars or even planes, although three junkers 88's had bombed the town to blazes a few minutes before. These fellows walked on steadily out of the smoke into the sunlight.

"I saw their grey uniforms, heavy black boots and flat helmets. They held rifles at their hips like a lot of deer staulkers.

"There wasn't much I could do. I couldn't get in my car because it was pointing towards them. I grabbed a grenade off a rack at the wheel and let it fly.

"They hadn't even fired a shot. It got one on the left and blew in the side of a farm cart and—damned important to me—gave me an exit.

"I legged it up the street to the first turn, dashed down there, climbed through a ruined house and ran across a field beyond.

"Their bullets were knocking the spots out of the ground under my feet and look—one clipped my hair and took off my hat. Finally I ran into some of our chaps in a truck and they took me off."

"Let Us Have Confidence" Entire French Press Urges

Paris, May 22 (CP-Havas)—"Let us have confidence!" The entire French press urged today.

"A great country with 1,000 years' history does not let itself be effaced from the map in 10 days," wrote Menri De Kerillis in L'Epoque. "We are millions and millions of Frenchmen who still believe with all the strength of our being that victory is possible and will be won.

"This is a war of material, to be sure, and soon, thanks to America, we will have superiority in material. to be sure, and soon, thanks to America, we will have superiority in material. But it is also a moral war and it is the destiny of our people to attain its heights in sorrow and trials.

"Is the battle of the north lost? No, not yet. It is not two peoples which confront each other, but two immense factories advancing against each other. Ours must in the end be the strongest, extending now to the United States and Canada."

Le Journal said: "The Allies have the triple industry of France, England and America, and have money to produce and buy. They have in their hands the elements of victory."

Pertinax, in L'Ordre, wrote: "Frenchmen are called upon to surmount a crisis reminiscent of the worst vicissitudes in their history. Let this thought sustain us—the present juncture is as gave for our enemies as for us. Behind France and Great Britain, immense resources will be mobilized against the invader."

Vladimir Dormesson wrote in Le Figaro: "Many times our country has been at the edge of the abyss. Always by a surge of all its being, it surmounted the evil and restored the situation. This surge France will make again. Under the command of Weygand our armies are defending themselves fiercely. Every one of us must contain our emotion and aid France so that God will aid it."

TRIBUTE PAID TO REG. HINCHEY

Tribute to Mr. Reg. Hinchey, popular Belleville composer, was paid on Monday by the conductor and members of the Toronto Symphony Band over a Canadian radio network, when Mr. Hinchey's arrangement of the famous "Liebestraum" was played by the organization.

Two weeks ago, the band played Mr. Hinchey's arrangement of 'Blue Danube' and on a future broadcast, the overture "Riggsonia," dedicated by the composer to Mr. Leo Riggs, one of this city's outstanding musicians, will be sent over the airways.

The conductor of the Toronto Symphony Band is Mr. Laidlaw Addison, who is an ex-member of the famous Belleville Kilties Band, and well known in musical circles of this city and district.

ANGLICAN CLERGYMEN ORDAINED AT KINGSTON

An impressive and inspiring service was held in St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, Tuesday morning when the Rev. W. J. Robinson, B.A., Trenton, and the Rev. H. B. Snell, B.A., Plevna, were ordained.

The Rt. Rev. Dr. J. Lyons, Bishop of Ontario, was assisted by the Very Rev. Dean Craig, Rev. Dr. J. H. H. Coleman, Archdeacon of Kingston, and the Revs. Canon W. E. Kidd, Canon T. A. Smith, Trenton, and the Bishop's chaplain, Rev. Canon A. E. Smart.

An eloquent and instructive sermon was delivered by the Rev. H. K. Coleman, rector of Newburgh.

GOV'T'S. WAR WORK WILL BE DISCUSSED AT OPEN MEETING

Realising the seriousness of the situation in Europe and the dark clouds that are now menacing the Empire, members of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Belleville branch, are throwing their clubrooms open to all ex-service men, and the general public tomorrow night, when an open discussion will be held regarding the conduct of war work of the Federal government.

A number of members have signified their willingness to once more serve their country in whatever capacity they may be needed. Action on the part of the government is demanded by the old soldiers, and in all probability a number of resolutions to this effect will be passed at the meeting.

Machine Taken To Zwick's Island To be Dismantled

What at first was believed to have been an attempt to cache a large section of machinery weighing four tons, later turned out to be legitimate business being carried out in the protection of life and property.

Yesterday afternoon local and Provincial Police were informed that a large four-ton section of a machine had been abandoned on Zwick's Island. Subsequent investigations by police led the authorities to suspect the large metallic bulk of scrap machinery had been stolen and cached on the island, where it was to have later been dismantled at the leisure of those responsible.

Later in the afternoon, however, it was disclosed that the machine was the property of J. Samuels, local junk dealer, who had hauled the large machine to Zwick's Island for the express purpose of breaking it up for scrap iron. Mr. Samuels broke the machine up by blowing up the pieces with a charge of dynamite and later hauled the broken pieces of scrap iron back to his junk yard.

"Mr. Samuels took the machine to the island purely as a precaution against damage to property had he blown it into pieces within the city limits," police revealed after investigations.

Picton (Special)—Children must be off the streets of the town by nine o'clock unless accompanied by a parent or guardian appointed by them, the town council has decided and police have been instructed to begin their check up at once. All children under the age of sixteen or appearing to be under that age, who are found on the streets at that hour or in places of public entertainment, will be taken to their homes by the police and the parents are liable to penalties under the Children's Protection Act if convicted. Many young children on the streets late at night, has led the town to take this action.

Ragweed Extermination Urged by Health Dept.

Eradication of ragweed by the combined effort of city and county is being urged by the Department of Health of Ontario, according to a communication received by Dr. G. S. Cronk, M.O.H.

The weed is said to be a cause or predisposing factor in that bane of a number of residents, hay fever, and health authorities are of the opinion that determined efforts should be made to eliminate it as far as possible. This responsibility, the department contends, rests with the municipalities and the provincial departments feel that they are not in a position to offer anything but advice and appeal.

W. R. Reek, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, will be in the city within a few days, and is expected to confer with city and county officials. Dr. Cronk has been asked to address the Hastings County Council at its June session on the question of the extermination of the ragweed.

Child Care and Training Theme of Interesting Meeting

Under the leadership of Senior Regent Mrs. J. Chapman, the Women of the Moose, Belleville Chapter 435, held a meeting in the Moose Auditorium on Tuesday evening. A good number of co-workers were present for the nomination of officers.

A communication was read from Honorable James J. Davis, based on the subject of Alumni Association activities. An official program from Mr. Norman G. Heyd, Past Supreme Governor of Ontario, had been received to the effect that the annual Ontario Convention of the Loyal Order of Moose will be held in Chatham, Ont. in August.

"The Child Care and Training Chapter Night", program was in charge of Mrs. B. Mossman and a very interesting paper was read illustrating their care and health problems and how they are solved at Mooseheart.

Mr. H. Allison was the winner of the Sunshine prize, and the lucky draw on the lace table cover was captured by Bobby White. At the close of the business session, cards were enjoyed. First prize for euchre went to Mrs. B. Mossman, and Mrs. E. White, second. Rummy prize was won by Mrs. L. Connell and Mrs. J. Chapman won second prize. The co-workers were invited to the supper, assisted by Mrs. J. Jeffrey of the Home-making Committee and Mrs. Woodacre poured tea. The table was quite unique in keeping with the evening's program. The centre piece was a baby doll sitting wrapped in a bath robe and the favors were tiny dolls, wrapped with little cakes of soap, in small bath towels and pastel colored candles added to the decorations. The pleasant evening was brought to an end at a late hour.

Cool looking black and white are combined in an afternoon ensemble in penguin print. Tiny peguins make buttons on the coat and the dress clips in rhinestone and black enamel.

Due to unforeseen circumstances, the mammoth Garden Bros. Circus taking place in the Hume Arena, Belleville, next week will not start until Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 p.m. Monday's two performances being cancelled. ## Huge Wave Strikes Salmon Point Shore

South Bay, May 22 — Accompanied by a heavy electrical storm a huge wave struck the Salmon Point fishery Sunday evening carrying fishing craft from their moorings and tossing them some distance away upon the rocky shore in an undamaged condition.

Two boats belonging to fishermen Watson and VanCott, were swept off their racks by the huge wave and carried a considerable distance from their landings before their owners were able to salvage them from serious damage.

No damage was done to any fishing craft at the Point Traverse harbor by the high tide, but being sheltered from the open lake the colony escaped the full force of the storm.

So great was the tide at the Outlet, famed county bathing spot, that water rose for more than seventy feet over the beach, flooding booths along the lake front.

The lake was tranquil following the heavy blow and storm and an impenetrable fog settled over the district for many hours, impeding all lake traffic.

PART OF NATION'S EFFORT

The Legislation was quickly rushed through three readings in the House of Commons and sent to the House of Lords which was awaiting it. It is expected to receive royal assent before night fall.

Mr. Attlee stressed that the government was not seeking these drastic powers in any sense of panic but in full realization of the seriousness of the military situation and in determination to mobilise the resources of the nation to meet the German challenge.

The Munitions Production Council will start operating immediately under Mr. Bevin and Arthur Greenwood, minister without portfolio in the war cabinet. This will mean a wholesale speed-up of production of planes, munitions ond supplies of all sorts, and the government hopes organized labor will co-operate in the effort.

The Excess Profits Tax will be raised to 100 per cent to prevent anyone profitting from the crisis.

Terms of remuneration, hours of labor and conditions of service will be prescribed by the government, Mr. Attlee declared.

Some establishments will be controlled altogether at once, he said, and others later as the need arises.

Mr. Attlee told the House that the object of the bill is to make effective the whole resources of the nation "for whatever task may fall upon it."

Immediate Consent

The House gave immediate consent to considering and enacting the bill in one day.

Mr. Attlee said the government is not asking these powers in "any spirit of panic," but that instant action is necessary "in view of the grave peril in which the nation stands today."

The measure, known as the Emergency Powers Bill, was published simultaneously with his announcement. It provides an extension of powers which may be exercised by the King under the 1939 Emergency Powers Defence Act.

Everyone should continue in his job until ordered to do otherwise, Mr. Attlee emphasized.

"There must be power to carry on essential services," he said. "Over a wide field, industry will be carried on for the community and not for private purposes."

"Wages and profits will be under government control," Mr. Attlee declared.

The House cheered.

Conscription of labor and wealth, he continued, will "apply to everybody."

"At this time everything for which we stand is in jeopardy."

"A great battle is now proceeding," Mr. Attlee said. "Our men at sea, on land, and in the air are fighting with splendid devotion and spirit.

"The government is convinced that now is the time that we must mobilize to the full the whole resources of this country. We must throw all our weight into the struggle.

"It must be clear to all that the next few weeks are critical. Our ruthless enemy, who is restrained by no considerations of international law, justice or humanity, is throwing everything into the scale to force a decision.

"We are resolved that he shall not succeed.

"Whatever may come, we shall meet it as the British people in the past have done.

"It is necessary that the government should be given complete control over persons and property, not only of some persons but over all persons, rich or poor, employer or worker, man or woman.

Not in Spirit of Panic

"These powers I am asking the House to give I do not ask for in the spirit of panic. There is no need for panic but we are asking that in this emergency we should be given the requisite powers that may be needed."

In order to pass the bill through all stages, Mr. Attlee said, it would be necessary to move a procedure resolution without notice and the government asked parliament to acquiesce in this procedure in view of the "grave peril in which the nation stands today."

"We introduce this not because we are in any doubt of the willingness of the people," Mr. Attlee said, "but because in an emergency like this there must be the necessary power in government hands."

It was proposed that the Labor Ministry set up at once a production council to be presided over by Arthur Greenwood, Minister Without Portfolio.

Control of banks would be required either through a central agency or regional commissioners, Mr. Attlee continued.

Production councils to speed munitions, supplies, aircraft and direct labor for agriculture and mines would be set up and, Mr. Attlee said munitions boards should meet tonight and "get on with the job."

He warned that questions of compensation would be difficult but said there would be interim compensation.

"It is not only industrial business that will be under control, or may be under control," he continued. "There will have to be control of the finances of the country and of the banks.

This will be done under the orders of the government and the competent authorities in each case will be the ministers concerned.

"Broadly speaking, we are taking control in a time of emergency so that in the national interest we may utilize all resources for the common weal."

The House of Lords met at 4 p.m. (11 a.m. E.D.T.) and adjourned to await the War Emergency Powers bill from the Commons, which was expected to pass the bill before nightfall.

Essential Objects

Essential objects of the far-reaching measure, Mr. Attlee said, were:

1. To eliminate waste in skilled labor;

2. To assure that industry be carried on for the community as a whole and not for private profit.

"I believe in this critical time," he said, "the vast majority of the people of this country willingly will give their services to the country and will do all that is asked."

Mr. Attlee dropped a hint that branches of the munitions industry might be taken over by the State.

All sections of the House spoke approvingly of the measure.

Hastings Lees-Smith, Labor, said "it is not a time for lengthy discussion but a time for action, a time for showing that the House of Commons can be a completely efficient instrument for the conduct of war."

Never More Imminent

Justification of the drastic powers sought, said Sir Percy Harris, Liberal, was the fact that the danger to Britain never was more real or imminent.

William Gallacher, Communist, said the bill was a deliberate effort on the part of the ruling class to conquer the working class despite Mr. Attlee's assurance that "it is essential that everyone be satisfied that the rights he had the rights he had shall remain alive."

Mr. Gallacher's words brought immediate condemnation from David Logan, Labor, who declared "it is about time that voice like that was silenced under the emergency powers."

Another Declaration

Mr. Attlee also declared:

"It is proposed that there should be an addition to the fair wages clause whereby employers who do not at the end of this war restore any customs or conditions set aside for the war will be ineligible to come on the list of government contractors."

David Kirkwood, Labor, objected that the working classes would "be tied hand and foot" but that private property would not.

"I am going to defeat that to the best of my ability," he said, "and I don't happen to represent Russia, Rome or Jerusalem."

"Nor reason!" interjected Mr. Logan.

Mr. Attlee said the Production Council headed by Mr. Greenwood would include representatives of trade unions and employers and that labor supply committees also would be set up.

"Firms will be grouped for the full utilization of labor and to prevent waste," he said. "There will be compulsory notification of all men stood off (laid off) or on short time."

He said a "bold and comprehensive scheme of training" would be launched by the Labor Ministry.

Dummy is Hung On Telephone Pole

Whether or not it was supposed to be an effigy of Herr Hitler, the madman of Europe, is not exactly clear, but the residents in the vicinity of the corner of Albert and Queen Street, were surprised to see what appeared to be the form of a person hanging from a telephone pole on Queen Street early last evening.

In the darkness the form resembled that of a human dangling in mid-air. Anxious residents informed police of their suspicions and Constable Evans and Taylor hastened to the scene to mount the pole, only to discover that the effigy was merely a large windbreaker that had been stuffed with dried grass and was hanging from the top of the pole. The dummy was cut down and taken to the police station.

No person saw the pranksters place the stuffed dummy in its hanging position, but its presence looked so life-like in the semi-darkness that residents became frightened, but their suspicions of a probably serious crime were fortunately unfounded.

Ban Placed on Short Selling by Toronto Stock Exchange

Toronto, May 22—(CP)— The Toronto Stock Exchange issued an order to members this morning to permit no further short selling of stocks until the ban is lifted. This measure was taken by the management committee before the opening this morning, in an effort to stem the decline of prices that has been under way since the Germans started intensified warfare.

This order means that clients must be the owners of stocks before they can sell them.

KING'S BROTHER ESCAPES DEATH

Duke of Gloucester in French Town Sunday Night Which Was Raided by Nazis

(By Drew Middleton, Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, May 22—(AP) — The Duke of Gloucester narrowly escaped death in an air raid on a French town Sunday night.

The hotel in which he was staying was hit by two German bombs. A third exploded in the roadway outside.

I was 100 yards away when the bombs exploded, and saw the Duke, unshaken and calm, emerge from the cellar where he had had supper with cavalry officer friends.

A short time later he helped get out messages to general headquarters, working side by side at an improved desk with a grizzled sergeant major, while a burning truck lit the street.

This was the fourth bombing the soldierly third son of the late King George V has undergone. Once he was wounded in the right hand by a bomb splinter. Now he offers his left hand in greeting. Still "Henry" to his old friends, he is popular with all ranks.

The morning after the bombing he told me he was "getting used to it" and commented:

"The Boche put on quite a show for us, didn't he"

The Duke expects to return from London to the British Expeditionary Force soon to resume his duties as chief liaison officer between the British and French armies.

NIAGARA FALLS PARK IS CLOSED

Extra Precaution is Taken to Safeguard Vital Hydro Plants

Toronto, May 22 (CP)—Attorney General Gordon Conant announced today the closing to traffic of Queen Victoria Park at Niagara Falls, Ont., "in view of the present war situation as an extra precaution to the vital Hydro plants involved."

His statement reads:

"Earlier this spring Queen Victoria Park at Niagara Falls was opened and Table Rock House was made available to the public by the erection of extensive barricades and the employment of a number of additional guards. At the same time the boulevard through the Chippawa (Hydro-Electric) plant was opened for buses only under strict control.

"This was all done to accommodate the public and facilitate tourist traffic.

"In view of the present war situation and as an extra precaution to the vital Hydro plants involved, the park has again been closed and access for buses through the Chippawa plant has been discontinued. The former and somewhat improved system of barricades and guarding has been resumed."

NAVAL TRAWLER SUNK

London, May 22 —(CP)— The Admiralty announced today that the naval trawler Rifsness had been sunk in a bomb attack.

A statement said there were three casualties but gave no further details of the attack.

AS THE GREAT BATTLE GOES ON

One of the greatest battles in the history of the world is being waged in northern France and Belgium, in which men by millions and all manner of weapons of the latest development in science, airplanes, parachutes, tanks, artillery and other lethal weapons have been used. In it democratic nations, whose very air is liberty, are in the bitter struggle against the mechanism of totalitarian Germany. The story is so great that it cannot be told in full as the tales of other wars were told. The power of the human mind to grasp the scene and to depict it for the people distant from the firing lines is inadequate. What is known is that the Allies are fighting like heroes for the rights of freedom and are paying for it with sacrifice which is counting for freedom.

It is a time in which the people will not lose faith in their democratic institutions. The determination of the democracies to preserve themselves by heroic sacrifices will not falter. In the recent words of Mr. Churchill, British Prime Minister foolish optimism and dark pessimism are both unwarranted.

Those who listened to the broadcast of Mr. Duff Cooper, the new British Minister of Information, heard him stress this that if Germany lost the present battle, she lost the war, but that even an Allied defeat in this battle could not mean the loss of the war by the Allies.

It was only last week that Mr. Churchill in his address to the Commons warned of possible events to come. He said—"I have nothing to offer but blood, toil, tears and sweat," and then he spoke of "war at all costs in spite of all terrors." He spoke of the "war to victory."

The Royal Air Force and the British army and navy have been doing heroic service in the mighty battle as have the French, Belgians and the Dutch forces. The great story of their struggle with the foe may yet be told in its fulness. Britain and the other Allies are proud of them for their courage and daring have stirred the hearts of the democratic peoples of the world in this trying hour.

Mr. Churchill's words "wage war to victory" are the battlecry of freedom of the democracies against the enemy which knows not what liberty is.

King Haakon, in Norway, who knows what the Hun aggressor is, urges on the battle against the Huns using these words, "Attacked by a nation which, because it does not know the meaning of personal liberty, cannot understand what a terrible injustice it is committing against a small land which loves its liberty, we were compelled to choose between enslavement and defence of all we hold sacred."

Premier Reynaud of France in his Senate statement breathed the inspiration of the French spirit of liberty and confidence and faith.

Such words from the great men of the day cheer the people's hearts and fire their determination to struggle through dark days and fair days to victory which will assuredly come. The democratic peoples will possess their hearts in faith, courage and decision. They have faith in their men and their command.

Mr. Duff Cooper in a broadcast last night used the encouraging words, "the armies of Britain and France are undefeated." Again he said, "I think these grave events will act, indeed as they have already acted, as a tonic to the nation. I find wherever I go, the calm spirit of inflexible determination," and "we here behind the lines must play our part as worthily as those who are keeping watch tonight in the front line or those who may spring to the attack at dawn tomorrow."

"Let them feel, let them know, that behind their steady lines and stalwart hearts there exists the vast reserve of a calm, a faithful and a united people."

The statement of the Allied commander, General Weygand, "I am full of confidence if each man does his duty with a fierce energy" and that of Premier Reynaud, together with the news of the recapture of Arras ring with confidence and determination.

FOOD VALUES MADE KNOWN

In one Canadian university, the freshmen of today are one and a half inches taller and five and a quarter pounds heavier, than freshmen of twenty years ago, it was stated by Dr. Frederick F. Tisdall, chairman of the nutrition committee of the Canadian Medical Association, in a radio address. This supports the view held by many that the people of today in most instances are larger than their parents. Observations show that children receiving foods rich in minerals and vitamins grow more rapidly than other children on a diet which is not so rich in these food substances.

Canada is fortunate in that the 34 food substances or constituents necessary for the normal life and health of a human being are all found in foods grown or produced in Canada, said Dr. Tisdall. He explained that what the average householder is interested in is that the foodstuffs bought are the correct ones for essential nutrition and in the proper quantities. If any one of the 34 substances, vitamins and so forth is not present in sufficient quantities, the health will be impaired. It is unfortunately the case that if there is only a slight or moderate lack, as in many Canadian diets, the ill-effects on health are seldom connected with the food eaten. Lack of calcium in ample quantities over a period of years will eventually result in lack of strength in the bones. Lack of other foods will cause impairment of vision and lack of another substance has been shown to be directly connected with certain types of mental derangement.

One does not have to eat huge quantities of the substances. For instance, the body needs copper but one pound of it in foods, as in apricots, would last one person 540 years.

Dr. Tisdall brought attention to the fact that the information necessary as to foods and nutrition can be had by reading the booklet of the association "Food for Health in Peace and War." Knowledge of the facts will improve the health and efficiency of the people and help Canada financially in this national crisis.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Some Excellent Foods Cause Digestive Disturbances

When a patient thinks he has ulcer or cancer of the stomach, many physicians feel that they will save much time for the patient and themselves if they make food tests and give patient the barium meal, following this meal by the use of the Xrays. When the patients find that the tests and the Xrays show no cancer or ulcer it is found, in most cases, that the symptoms disappear. It has been nervousness, fear of cancer or ulcer, that has caused the symptoms. The spasms and the irregular movements of the stomach walls caused the distress and uneasiness in the stomach region.

However, there are cases which, while not due to organic disease or to nervousness, still persist.

What is likely the cause if not due to disease or nervousness?

When it is realized that about one in every four individuals who have uneasiness, distress or pain in abdomen, are sensitive or allergic to certain foods, it can be seen that if tests are made, and the food or foods at fault are removed from their diet, the symptoms should disappear.

The commonest foods that cause distress or pain in the abdomen are milk, eggs, and wheat.

I have spoken before of the research work done by Dr. Walter Alvarez, Mayo Clinic, on the stomach and intestines.

Dr. Alvarez, in Ohio State Medical Journal, states that there are two principal ways of finding the foods causing the symptoms. When the pain or indigestion or headache comes in attacks at intervals of weeks or months, a "written" record should be kept of the "unusual" foods, not eaten every day, which were eaten during the twenty-four hours before the upset occurred. Suspicion should fall particularly on foods eaten at the meal just before attack occurred. After three or four attacks, examine the record to see if there is any one food that was eaten before each upset. If there was this food should not be eaten to see if relief is obtained.

Dr. Alvarez tells us that if the distress is present every day, he begins their diet with lamb, rice, butter, sugar, canned pears, which seldom give trouble. If the patient is comfortable on this diet, he begins to add beef, potato, gelatine, carrots, turnips, asparagus, string beans, arrowroot cookies, rye krisps, thin toast, and oatmeal, watching for trouble after adding each food.

I am repeating this simple method suggested by Dr. Alvarez as it should give relief of symptoms and relieve the mind of many "dyspeptics".

American Looks at the War From Angle of United States

Writer to New York Times Asserts U.S.A. Should Consider Possibilities of War Situation, Its Consequences and the Need for Preparation for all Contingencies

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is there a clear and direct relation between the outcome of this war and the maintenance of free institutions in the United States? Is it really important from the standpoint of safeguarding our civil right—which constitute so vital a part of free institutions—that the Allies shall not be defeated?

What do we mean by an Allied "defeat" or a "serious defeat"? What would be the effects on us, the people of the country, and upon our children and grandchildren? If we deem it vitally important for us that the Allies shall not be seriously be defeated, what shall we do about it? If we conclude to do nothing and let events take their course, what will be the position of the United States if Hitler wins?

These are the crucial questions now confronting the American people. They have been smothered and evaded. But now, under the pressure of events, they return inexorably for an answer; and at last they must be faced up to with all the clarity of mind we can command.

I affirm that the people of this country have a vital concern that Germany shall not decisively win this war and that this conclusion rests on solid ground. I affirm that to ignore the reasons would evidence a lack of reasonable intelligence unworthy of the American people. If this conclusion be sound, the further issue arises as to what we can and should do to prevent the result, or alternatively to meet the contingency of a Hitler victory.

Definition a Factor

All other public questions, from the standpoint of American values and the lives of all of us and our descendants, sink into insignificance before these.

Why is it important to us that the Allies shall not be defeated? We cannot discuss that question until we know what we mean when we say "defeat." If we mean that neither side can impose its will on the other, and that a "negotiated peace" is concluded, that is one thing which would be serious enough for us and the world.

But if we mean an Allied defeat of the same character as that suffered by Germany in 1918, it is a situation the implications of which have been envisaged by only a small fraction of our people. It is of the latter contingency that I write.

It is difficult to visualize what a serious defeat of the Allied Powers—in the sense mentioned—would really mean. It is hard because the consequences for the whole world would be so vast that we tend to shrink even from contemplating them. But that does not mean that it is wise any longer to hide our heads in the sand.

Will any one be so naive as to suppose that, if Nazi Germany compels the Allies to submit so completely as did Imperial Germany in 1918, the imposed terms would be less severe? Surely we can now all see that they would be far more ruthless.

In the supposed contingency it is certain that the Allied naval fleets and most, if not all, of their merchant fleets would be surrendered or destroyed, their air fleets taken over, their armies disbanded. Thus they would be literally helpless before any enemy.

Europe in Bondage

It is difficult then to perceive why virtually any desired demands could not be imposed. It is hard to see how the surrender of all colonial possessions or even the dominions could be resisted—with the exception of Canada and the West Indian islands, which we must prevent, and the possible exception of Australia and New Zealand, which we might prevent.

It is hard to see what could stop the actual occupation of a disarmed England and France and their subjection to the same status as Western Poland and Czecho-Slovakia. If any one revolts at this possibility, has he not forgotten the power of modern weapons—the machine gun, the tank and the airplane—in the hands of a ruthless enemy against an unarmed people, no matter how brave or numerous?

It is hard to see what would prevent the complete occupancy or domination by Germany of all Europe and the Near East and of all Africa. It is hard to see why the whole world outside the Western Hemisphere would not be held or completely dominated by three great authoritarian powers—Germany, Russia and Japan. It is hard to see how any free government could exist outside of North America and Latin America. It is hard to see how England and France, disarmed and held in bondage, could hevive their power for generations, if at all.

If this whole picture be deemed too dark, let the flaw be pointed out. But let us squarely meet the hypothesis of a serious defeat for the Allied Powers instead of any longer sidestepping the issue.

The putting of the case does not imply that I believe these dire results must come to pass. It does mean that they may come to pass and that there is sufficient possibility of their occurrence to require immediate consideration of our course.

What, then, would be the position of the United States if a serious defeat of the Allies had actually occurred?

It is certain as possible that in the event of an Allied defeat as serious as that imagined, we would not permit Germany to occupy the West Indies. We would without doubt have to take over, either directly or as agent for the Pan American Union, Bermuda, Jamaica, Barbados and Trinidad and the other British, French and Dutch possessions in the West Indies.

Rather than have Greenland in German hands, we would try, at least, to take it over, and also probably Iceland.

In short, we would secure our outposts almost as a matter of course. We would enter a firm alliance with Canada and perhaps with Australia and New Zealand, if their independence survived. We would seek to cement our relations with Latin America. At the same time we would proceed to arm on a scale never dreamed of in this country in time of peace, to organize our industry and train our young men especially, by hundreds of thousands, for the air service.

There is no real chance that the United States would lie down in a world in which the rule of force alone had just triumphed. The American people, while highly unmilitary, are by no means unwilling to fight when definitely threatened (which is a very different thing); and we would not wish to go down without a struggle. Considering our vast resources of materials and men, we might well organise a power that could stand off the world.

But even if by great effort we could organize that power, what must also give us pause are the consequences to the American way of life if we stood virtually alone in a world in which the efficacy of naked force had been demonstrated.

Cost Considered

In the material realm, what would it cost to defend our interests and commitments in such a world? The mere money cost for military and naval preparation alone would amount to not less than ten billions per annum. The figure may seem fantastic; but let us consider.

We are about to spend three billions per annum now while at this writing the fleets, the air forces and the armies of the Allies are mainly intact. If those forces had vanished, is it not certain that a modern two-ocean navy would be deemed essential?

Is it not certain, too, that our air force would need to be multiplied on a vast scale? Is it not certain that universal compulsory service would be deemed necessary almost as a matter of course? Are not these things clear? If not, what alternative would there be except submission to the enormous military resources at the command of the dominant powers?

These things in our land of high wages and prices cost money. Even in the last year of peace England was spending for armament a sum equivalent to seven to nine billion dollars per annum for us; and her preparations were even then insufficient. How could we with any degree of safety do less? From the standpoint of taxation alone our people would be subjected to burdens never before even thought of.

But it would be in the intangible field of American values that the real revolution would come. The necessary preparation would involve organization. The pick of our young men would be in uniform; our industry would be largely harnessed to military preparation. We would live in a state of constant tension. Under the pressure of self-preservation many of our customary liberties would necessarily be restricted.

Aid to Allies Needed

It would be a counsel of despair to say that this would be the end of the "American way." But one thing is certain—that the dangers to free institutions would be such as we have never encountered.

If this diagnosis is sound, what should be done? Obviously the prevention of an Allied catastrophe is the remedy. But how?

It may be that there is still time—though not for long—by measures short of war to furnish sufficient aid to the Allies to forestall a German victory. I submit that it is in our purely selfish national interest to take these measures at once. Being weary of generalities, I offer the following concrete suggestions:

1. Repeal the Johnson act so as to permit private loans to the Allies. If we really want them not to be defeated, what difference does it make that years ago they defaulted on their vast debts from the last war? If we really believe that it is in our national interest that they shall not be defeated, is it not common sense to aid them, at least with private credit voluntarily supplied by our citizens?

2. Let the law that prohibits American volunteering in the Allied armies be forthwith repealed. Since there are aviators and others who feel the call to serve against Hitler, why should we forbid it? Their aid might be invaluable.

3. Let our government facilitate in every way the procurement by the Allies of the most modern planes and arms we can supply. Let no "secrets" be withheld; let permission be given freely for the sale or charter of our shipping in order to safeguard their lines of supply by sea.

4. Let immediate steps be taken to stop entirely the export of copper, tin, rubber and other war materials to Russia or other countries, whence these materials may find their way to Germany. What sense does it make to aid with war materials the formidable enemy of the Allies—if we really wish them to be saved from defeat?

5. Let our government see to the doubling, at least, of our merchant shipbuilding capacity so that, in a long war, a new supply of ships may be forthcoming to insure communications. Let these new ships be sold or chartered to the Allies on reasonable terms, without profit.

6. Let a great public discussion be begun as to the advisability of governmental grants of all the money required. Let this question relate to outright grants, not loans. For what is the use of piling up new debts that we know cannot be repaid? Let discussion proceed as to all other ways to place our full resources, short of actual military participation, at the disposal of the Allies. Let Congress remain in session continuously, so that it may respond to the national need.

Our Interests Paramount

All these measures would be "short of war," in the sense that they would involve no military action. There is, indeed, no use in saying that they would be within the bounds of impartial neutrality. But let the nation first decide whether it is a major national interest that the Allies shall not be defeated. If so, we ought not to fool ourselves by pretending to be strictly neutral.

It is, of course, impossible to say whether the application of all measures short of military participation would turn the scale. However, this is no sound reason why these measures should not be forthwith applied. Meanwhile let there be a searching national debate as to whether it is in the national interest to go further and, if so, to what extent and by what means, or whether we shall stop at measures short of military action and permit the war to come out as it may.

In any event, simultaneously with the measures just mentioned, it will be only common sense greatly to enlarge our own military preparations and to solidify our national unity. Ordinary prudence requires that the nation should get ready, whatever the national decision may be.

If that decision be to take a military part in the war, it is apparent that our contribution should not be "too little and too late." On the other hand, if the decision be not to participate with arms, it is none the less vital that we prepare to meet the vast threat with which we would be confronted in case of a catastrophe to the Allied cause.

I submit that the foregoing represents a coherent program which we owe to ourselves as a matter of mere common prudence—if we really value our safety and our institutions.

War Trend Denied

If it be said that such a program tends towards war, as compared with a policy of drift and strict "neutrality," I deny the proposition. I sincerely believe that full aid to the Allies, without military participation, instead of drifting us toward active war constitutes the best chance of avoiding it. Rather it is the blind isolationists whose views, if they prevailed, would most likely create a situation in which, as a last resort, we would find ourselves involved in mortal combat or in a complete revolution of the national life as a means of self-preservation.

We have made some progress in facing up to the facts of life in the world of today. Many have been blind, many ill informed.

Now at last even the most blind of us knows what the thoughtful and informed knew from the start—that this is a cruel and a bitter war. And even the most ignorant must now perceive that a German victory, with all that it would imply, would be a grave threat, if not to our immediate safety, at least to the maintenance of the "American way" of life. Yet our public opinion has still a long way to go before it realises the full measure of the issue and before it will be able to form coherent ideas as to what should be done.

It is willingness to face the facts, to think them out, to use our knowledge and foresight and imagination, that most of all is needed now. Will our people rise to the occasion?

On the dark side it was recently said: "The United States is dangerously unprepared in its mind, its economic organization and in its defences to survive the twentieth century." On the brighter side we can remember that we have not in the past been helpless in emergencies when we saw the light in time.

We can be neither confident nor hopeless as to whether the American people will show sufficient intelligence and resolution to meet this crisis. We only know that our first duty is humbly to confess our past complacence and blindness and humbly pray that the clear vision of the best days of our past will return to us anew.—Grenville Clarke, New York, May 17, 1940.

TROOPS GREETED BY LARGE CROWD

A West Coast British Port, May 22—(CP-Cable)—When a new contingent of Canadian troops arrived here yesterday they were greeted at the quayside by relatives of the Tommies fighting with the backs to the wall on the other side of the narrow English channel.

As on earlier occasions when Dominion fighting men reached these shores there were enthusiastic cheers and smiles. But this welcome was more impressive perhaps than any other; the crowds were sobered by news of Germany's thrust toward the Motherland.

The contingent comprised a number of auxiliary units and further reinforcements for several branches of the Canadian Active Service Force. The men were recruited in many parts of the Dominion.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

As the German drive through France nears the English Channel about the mouth of the Somme the present battle reaches a critical stage. Each day brings closer the battle of the British people for their own islands about which Prime Minister Churchill spoke the other day.

The German forces apparently are open to a serious counter-attack on either flank if sufficient tanks and mechanized units can be assembled by the Allies to deliver it.

German air superiority is a big factor in protecting the invading forces from a serious counter-attack in force. Ranging far and wide over the area German reconnaissance pilots keep the high command informed about Allied troop movements. Thus it is probably impossible to organize an attack in secret.

One reaction to the German push was an intensification of Great Britain's home defence preparations and institution of the death penalty for treachery.

With the new type of warfare, it is difficult for commanders to know the exact status of the campaign at all times. With Allied forces operating behind the German advance and the Germans moving widely behind the recognized Allied defence lines the fighting takes on the aspect of a gigantic melee.

During the early part of the evening cards and dancing were enjoyed by those present. About midnight, Dr. Welsh called the gathering to order, Gordon and Mrs. Grey were seated and Mr. Brett read an address. The address was signed on behalf of friends and neighbors by Charlie Dawe, Carman Bailey, Donald Foote and John Hart.

Mr. John Hart and Mr. Harold Hart furnished music for dancing during the evening.

A revival of real millinery workmanship is noted in summer hats. A large low-crowned model of black starched, hand-blocked net has a brim overlaid with white, cutout embroidered pique. The pique also edges top of the crown.

How To Answer A Formal Wedding Invitation

At this time of the year, more than any other, problems arise concerning proper procedures in the matter of answering correctly invitations to weddings. Today we take up specifically the manner of answering a formal wedding invitation.

A formal invitation to the church only—the invitation that "requests the honour of your presence"—requires no answer. However, a formal invitation to the reception or wedding breakfast—the invitation that "requests the pleasure of your company"—does require an answer, as do all invitations that incorporate this phrase.

The fundamental rules is that invitations should be answered "in kind"; a formal reply to a formal invitation; an informal reply to an informal invitation.

A formal invitation is an invitation worded in the third person (the full name is used, not the pronoun "I"); our reply should also be worded in the third person. Since conventionally, the words of a formal invitation are placed on designated lines and are centered as evenly as possible, the lines of our reply, although written by hand, should as nearly as possible follow the spacing of the words on the invitation.

The reply to a formal invitation should be written on the first page of a double-sheeted letter-paper of fine quality, preferably white. The writing should be in the centre of the page, with even margins above, below, and on the sides.

The reply should be sent promptly, and should be addressed to the person or persons in whose name the invitation is issued.

This is a correct form of acceptance:

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Robinson
accept with pleasure
Mr. and Mrs. Philip Lee King's kind invitation
for Tuesday, the fourth of June
at five o'clock
at Ten Home Place

This is a correct form for the regret:

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Robinson regret that they are unable to accept
Mr. and Mrs. Philip Lee King's kind invitation
for Tuesday, the fourth of June

Sometimes, especially for a country wedding, the invitation to the reception or wedding breakfast is added to (that is, included on the same page with) the invitation to the ceremony. The correct form of accetpance to this invitation is:

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Robinson
accept with pleasure
Mr. and Mrs. Philip Lee King's kind invitation to be present at the marriage of their daughter Mary Elizabeth
to
Mr. William Alan Brooks on Tuesday, the fourth of June
at half after four o'clock and afterward at the wedding reception.

The regret:

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Robinson
regret that they are unable to

Courtesy Tip

Don't offer your congratulations to a bride-elect or to a bride. It is the bridegroom-elect or the bridegroom who receives the congratulations. To the bride-elect or to the bride you offer best wishes.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Marriage Provides No Immediate Change of Character

A letter in this morning's mail is from a man who says he's very much in love with his fiancee, but hopes to change certain things about her, after they are "comfortably married."

Is any marriage likely to be comfortable where one of the parties is reconditioning the other? It is much safer to get what you want beforehand than to attempt the making-over process afterwards. Making over, matrimonially speaking, is improbable, these days, unless you choose something spineless.

Much of the friction in married life is due to the fact that women have changed in their attitude toward marriage while men remain stand-patters. It was the woman's influence that dropped the word "obey" from the ceremony. Although a man may agree to drop a word his bride found obnoxious, he still expects the woman he marries to look up to him as an oracle and quote him to her women friends.

The highly educated college woman or the successful professional or business woman is not going to quote her husband to other women. She may even think the fact that they differ on questions and can discuss them like civilized human beings is highly stimulating.

It would be revealing to know actually how men regard wives who can hold their own in discussions. It's still the exceptional man who wants his wife to be his mental equal.

If I were a man, I should always question what was brewing when the lady wife asked to be told all about something self-evident, and swallowed the explanation hook, line and sinker. To ask the big he-man to tell her all about something might suggest that she had reasons of her own for drawing him out and conspicuously agreeing with him. It might be just one of her many ways of getting her own way about something else.

In spite of dropping the word "obey" from the marriage ceremony and making up their own minds in advance about things, and never quoting "my husband says", the modern woman is no different from her great-grandmother in what she wants in marriage.

She wants affection—loads and loads of affection; she wants appreciation, compliments, to be told how charming she is, and that she doesn't look a day older than when they were married. She wants freedom and companionship.

As for men, they seem more bewildered by the honorable estate than do women. While they'd like to have their wives look up to them and regard them as oracles, they marry foolish women less frequently than their grandfathers did. Still, these same foolish women have their place in the masculine cosmos, especially in the restless forties and fifties.

Take Claire Booth's play "The Women." The husband had an ideal wife, and yet he deserted her for a silly vamp he picked up from behind a perfumery counter. Whether you like "The Women" or not, there was a great amount of revealing truth concerning marriage in the play.

Say what you will, marriage is the only solution for human nature in its present state of development, for founding homes and rearing children. There are bound to be wrecks, just as there are wrecks with automobiles. Still it would be as absurd to advocate abolishing their manufacture as it is to offer sordid solutions other than marriage.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Is Your Child Underfed?

Malnutrition is something likely to be associated in the uniformed lay mind only with the children of poor families. Any doctor of wide experience knows that it is to be found also in some of what are commonly regarded as the better homes. For wrong as well as scanty diets cause malnutrition. A child may be getting plenty to eat and still be undernourished.

I am often asked to what extent a child must be underweight to be considered a victim of malnutrition. It is a very interesting question because, of course, children do not weigh the same at the same age or height. Heredity, previous history of the child, climatical factors and other things affect it.

You have all seen tables of the average heights and weights of children in certain age groups, and in each group the normal variations are allowed. All parents would do well to use such a table in checking up on the progress of a child. These tables are based upon studies of thousands of children.

To be safe, parents should consult their physician about any child whose weight falls below the average for his height and age. It may be that your child is of such a build or type that it is normal for him to be under the average weight. If so, your doctor will be able to determine. But if your child is ten percent under the average weight for his group, he is at least on the border line of malnutrition and should receive special care and extra food.

If the child's weight is fifteen percent or more below average, then he must be treated with very special care, for when such a child gets any infection at all it is likely to be serious. Even diseases which the ordinary child takes in his stride might well be fatal to such a youngster.

If the child's dietary habits are at fault they should be corrected at once. It may be he has been allowed to eat when and about as he pleased. Strict schedules of feeding times have not been kept. He perhaps has been in the habit of going to the kitchen and stuffing on sweets whenever he chose. As a result, when his regular mealtime came around he wasn't hungry and wouldn't eat necessary foods.

Of course, his whims, if he has any, may not be at fault at all. A child may be badly nourished because a parent mistakenly supposes that the type and quantity of food being served adults in the home is satisfactory for the child.

A child of five to ten years needs from 25 to 35 calories a day for every pound of weight. An adult needs only 15 or even less, as he grows older. An active child of seven years will have no difficulty in using up 1800 calories per day. A child needs enough calories to give him energy for his play, to repair his body tissues and to build new tissues as he grows. An adult needs them for exercise, too, but not to the same extent as a child. The adult must repair body tissues, too, but the child needs even more for this purpose. The adult doesn't need any for growth but the child does.

When you have a child to feed, it is a good thing to know the caloric values of certain common foods. A child's meals do not have to be so very bulky for him to get the calories he needs, if he gets the right foods.

Some foods contain far more calories than others in proportion to weight or bulk. But you can't just pick out those with high calories to feed him. If you did, he'd get sick of them in a few days and refuse them. So you need to provide a varied diet. Besides, a diet might contain an ample supply of calories but lack some important vitamin or mineral.

Another Canadian Contingent Arrives in England, Defence Minister Rogers Tells House

Two New Destroyers for Canadian Navy Being Built in England, House is Informed

GOV'T. CRITICIZED

Two Units of C.A.S.F. Were Ready to Proceed to Norway When Plan Altered by War Office

Ottawa, May 22 (CP)—More men, more money and more ships formed the government's answer today to charges of complacency towards the struggle right now in its most crucial stage in France.

The picture of what Canada has done and plans to do in this war was made clearer as Defence Minister Rogers and Finance Minister Ralston yesterday outlined to the House of Commons the government's immediate war plans.

While the measure before the House was the appropriations bill, providing for expenditure of $700,000,000 on war in 1940-41, the Defence Minister revealed that:

Another contingent of Canadian troops had arrived in the United Kingdom.

Two new destroyers of the Tribal class "are being constructed" in Britain for Canada.

Two units of the Canadian Active Service Force, the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry and the Edmonton Regiment, were at a Scottish port of embarkation ready to sail for Norway when plans were altered. No Canadian troops actually took part in the Norwegian campaign.

(Despite insistent reports of an American News Service that Canadian troops were in Norway The Canadian Press at no time said Canadian forces were there.)

Recruiting of corps troops will begin immediately. Recruiting of the 3rd Division will proceed progressively as units are selected to make up the division, the first of these selections to be made "as soon as possible."

The day also included:

Announcement by Prime Minister Mackenzie King that Hon. C. G. Power, present Postmaster-General, would be named Minister of National Defence for Air.

Adopt Resolution

Adoption of a resolution giving government business precedence over all private members' business.

A demand by Alan Cockeram (Con. York South) that the Prime Minister follow the example of Neville Chamberlain and make way for someone "better able to lead" at this time.

Withdrawal by the Prime Minister of a resolution for a committee on procedure, to study ways of speeding up business, after J. H. Harris (Con. Toronto-Danforth) charged it intended to shorten the session so the government could carry on without parliament.

The word "complacency" was bandied about during the early part of the day's session, a notable outburst coming from a Liberal member, Ralph Maybank, (Winnipeg south centre).

In seconding the address last Friday, James Sinclair (Lib. Vancouver north) said the present was no time for complacency.

"I am not satisfied," Mr. Mayband said, condemning a suggestion from Conservative leader Hanson that a measure giving government business precedent over all private members' business, be postponed. Mr. Maybank said the government's war program should not be delayed a minute.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King said charges of "complacency" on the part of the government would not be made if the public knew the full details of Canada's war effort. To give the full story to the public was to give it to the enemy.

"The people are clamoring for action from this parliament," Mr. Maybank said. "There has been talk of too much complacency and I am in agreement in spite of what was said here yesterday." He referred to the Prime Minister's review of the war effort and future plans.

Reference to Idle Words

"We hear too much of private members? Where the devil will private members' right be if we lost this war?" Mr. Maybank asked.

Mr. Rogers made brief reference to "some idle words" spoken in the House and urged Members to avoid recrimination.

"No men, whatever their party affiliations might be, could hold positions of responsibility at this time without having a keen sense of duty and without being desirous at all times to put forth the maximum effort which this country can summon to the aid of the Allied powers," he said.

As to the Government's record, he urged the closest scrutiny. "We desire it because we believe that when it is known in all its details, as these are presented from time to time, it will be accepted as a progressive developing effort entirely worthy of the people of this country."

Mr. Rogers described much of his recent trip to the United Kingdom and France, his inspections of Canadian troops at Aldershot, discussions with leading British officials. He praised the Canadian officers and men and described how numbers under mobilization had risen from 22,878 four days before Canada entered the war to 83,394, exclusive of reinforcements, on May 20.

Mr. Rogers expressed confidence that the French Army would recover from the present lightning mechanized thrust of the Germans and reform its front to meet the enemy with ultimate success.

"The French military genius is capable of adapting itself to a war of rapid movement without the defensive aid of concrete blockhouses and fixed emplacements," he said. "It has been done before. If our lines are threatened, so are theirs; and every mile of penetration extends their lines of communication and exposes them to the flank attacks of fresh troops and the telling blows of the bombers of the Royal Air Force.

Allies Shouldering Burden

"The Allied countries are shouldering the burden of mankind. There can be no mistake about that. There can be no question that we are approaching a great climacteric period in world history."

The Defence Minister said in concluding, that he had no words of peroration "except those which have comforted nations and men in many high moments of peril: 'Wherefore take unto you the whole armor of God that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day and, having done all, stand.'"

The British Government had welcomed the decision of the Canadian Government to send the 2nd Division overseas at an early date and had agreed to facilitate its movement, said Mr. Rogers. This did not mean the division would move immediately. The transport problem alone presented some difficulty.

Like the 1st and 2nd Divisions the 3rd would be formed out of the units of the non-permanent active militia. Selection of units would be made as before with a view to giving representation to the various sections of the country and to the ease with which reinforcements might be recruited.

He paid special tribute to the work of the Royal Canadian Navy which has been on continuous and arduous service since the start of hostilities.

The acquisition of two new destroyers will bring the destroyer strength of the navy to nine. At present there are seven such ships, including the flotilla leader.

While the destroyers are being built in England scores of smaller vessels, submarine chasers and mine sweepers are being built for the navy in Canadian shipyards. The navy also has scores of auxiliary vessels in service now.

Air Plan Accelerated

In the field of aviation the British Commonwealth Air Training plan was being accelerated and supplemented and No. 112 Squadron Royal Canadian Air Force, would be sent overseas.

First reinforcements of the 1st division were now overseas and further reinforcements to replace battle casualties were in training in Canada. Recruiting of reinforcements for the 2nd Division would start June 7 so that that body would be as well supplied with reinforcements when the time came as the 1st Division.

The 110th Army Co-operation Squadron of the Royal Canadian Air Force, now in England, was the first Canadian unit ever sent overseas and he was proud of it. It was particularly anxious to be attached to the Canadian Corps in action and its wish would be satisfied.

CANADA TO SPEND $700,000,000 IN CURRENT YEAR

Col. Ralston Denied Reports in House It Was Proposed to Borrow Whole Amount

ELIMINATE RED TAPE

Ottawa, May 22—(CP)— Canada's war effort will be limited "only by our strength and capacity" to assist in meeting "this the greatest world crisis of all time," Finance Minister Ralston told the House of Commons yesterday.

Putting through a Government measure authorizing expenditure of $700,000,000 on war operations during the current fiscal year Col. Ralston denied reports that it was proposed to borrow the entire amount.

"It is true we are taking adequate authority to borrow as much as may be necessary but the policy is still to pay as we go so far as that may be found possible," he said.

"Taxation will be our first method, then we will borrow whatever amounts we must raise in that way."

When Col. Ralston concluded explanation of his war appropriation measure Dr. H. A. Bruce (Con. Toronto-Parkdale) declared "we will vote any amount of money asked for to make the maximum war effort and get factories to work."

Difficult to Estimate

It was difficult to estimate what the actual cost of Canada's war effort would be for any particular period, Col. Ralston said, but it was necessary to fix a figure.

It was estimated the army would cost $265,000,000, the navy $100,000,000, the Royal Canadian Air Force $100,000,000, the Commonwealth air training plan $120,000,000, the Canadian Corps Formation announced yesterday up to $65,000,000 and the third division soon to be recruited, $30,000,000.

In addition to more than $100,000,000 already spent on the war effort commitments had been given for $267,000,000 as from Sept 1, 1939 to March 31, 1940.

Mr. Ralston said every effort had been made to eliminate red tape, to shorten procedure. Because he felt the people of Canada would endorse his action, he said he had made commitments beyond the first year of the war and even beyond the first fiscal year, to speed up the provision of war materials.

ONE INJURED IN EXPLOSION

Occurs in Woolwich Arsenal the Largest in Great Britain

London, May 22.—(CP)—A slight explosion occurred early today in a section of Woolwich Arsenal and one man was reported injured. A fire followed the blast but was quickly extinguished.

The explosion occurred about 2 a.m. (8 p.m. E.S.T. Tuesday).

As a precautionary measure electric lights in the section affected were turned off and measures taken to isolate the area from other parts of the building.

It was stated the general output of the department would not be seriously affected.

The Royal Arsenal in Woolwich, one of the boroughs of London, is the largest in Great Britain.

The Woolwich explosion was the seventh in British munitions and gunpowder factories since the start of the war.

In each of the two worst of these five men were killed and a number were injured in North London

Ballots Cast Silent Answer Says Dandurand

Ottawa, May 22—(CP)—Ballots cast in the Dominion election are viewed by Hon. Raoul Dandurand, Government Senate leader, as the silent answer to a suggestion from Senator Arthur Meighen that the Mackenzie King Government must be reorganized, but not on a party basis, before it can gain the people's confidence.

Mr. Meighen, Conservative leader in the Upper Chamber, made his suggestion yesterday when he opened the Throne speech debate. He was followed by Mr. Dandurand and today Senator John T. Haig (Con. Manitoba) will continue the debate.

"Until this government is reorganized or changed, until it is placed on a basis best adapted to gain the following of every war element in this country, it cannot have the confidence of Canada," said Senator Meighen.

"I do not want it changed on a party basis no matter what the party is," he added.

WANTED FOR QUESTIONING

Prescott, Ont., May 22—(CP) — Joseph Kayan, 56, of Montreal was taken into custody here last night for questioning and taken back to that city by three Montreal detectives.

Kayan was arrested in a local hotel by the Montreal officers who came here following receipt of word that he was in this St. Lawrence River town.

It was understood the Montreal detectives came here after intercepting a wire, allegedly sent by Kayan, to friends in Montreal asking them to forward him some money.

The Montreal officers were Sergeant-Detectives Thomas Shuttleworth, William Fitzpatrick and Albert Laroche.

'NIBS' PALMER TO MEET PAVICH

Detroit Strongman Has Wrestled Some of the Best in the Game

Fresh from a successful tour of the middle western States, Nick Pavich, the Detroit Greek strongman, will make his initial Canadian wrestling debut at the Hume Arena on Friday night versus "Nibs" Palmer, former Montreal wrestler, now a member of the R.C.A.F., at Trenton.

Palmer has wrestled such outstanding matmen as Yvon Roberts, former world's champion wrestler, Jack Washburn and other top-ranking grapplers while he was stamping as a professional wrestler. Pavich, on the other hand, is a newcomer to the game, and is enjoying a successful season wherever he appears. Pavich prides himself in his super-strength ability and features the flying headscissors to conquer his opponents. This main bout attraction for Friday night's weekly wrestling show at the Arena is being heralded as the perfect match and will test Pavich's ability in Canadian wrestling circles.

Eddie Sobul, the Hartford badman, will clash with Jim Beamish, the veteran Toronto grappler, in the semi-final bout, both men being veteran matmen and clever exponents of the game. A preliminary bout is also included on the card.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, May 22—(AP)— Sam Snead is skipping the Metropolitan Open this week to toughen up for the National by doing road work, just like a fighter......the other National League clubs are getting ready to clip the Dodgers' wings by passing a no-flying rule.......fight manager Al Weill, who has lost two champs in two weeks—Lou Ambers and Joey Archibald—is fit to be tied. And another of his meal tickets figures to be well punched when Arture Godoy goes against Joe Louis again.

The smart money boys along Broadway are gobbling up the 13-5 odds on the Garcia-Overlin middleweight bout tomorrow night. Not that they don't like Garcia, the price just appeals to them.... Nate Druxman is in from Seattle to talk a Garcia-Al Hostak fight with Mike Jacobs.........A San Francisco sports writer visited Joe DiMaggio's restaurant out there and found all hands crying in their suds.

Tony Galento told 'em down south he has no manager— that Harry Mendel and Herman Taylor are only doing a little temporary fronting for him. Also, that he doesn't intend to do a lick of training for Max Baer until two weeks before the fight......the U.S.L.T.A. is afraid Elwood Cooke is getting ready to leave 'em flat by retiring and going into the sporting goods bis.

CEFERINO GARCIA MEETS K. OVERLIN

Middleweight Championship Will be on the Line When Boys Hook Up

New York, May 22.—(AP)—The fight game's version of "Beauty and the Beast"—a boxer standing up to a slugger— unwinds in Madison Square Garden tomorrow night for the second time in as many weeks, this time with the middleweight championship on the line.

On the last occasion, the honors went to the knocker-outer, Lew Jenkins, who put Lou Ambers to sleep in three rounds and took the lightweight championship. And that time, the Texas thin man was the betting underdog.

Tomorrow, the boxer, Ken Overlin, born in Decatur, Ill., resident of Washington and Norfolk, is the short-ender. If you think he can take the New York and California portion of the world middleweight Crown from Ceferino Garcia, $5 will get you $10—if he does it.

He might, at that. He knows all the answers about ring generalship. Only ex-champion Freddie Steele has put him to sleep and he insists he was a sick man on that occasion.

The point he'll have to prove for 15 rounds tomorrow is whether he knows what to do when the Bolo punch comes whistling at him. This playful little poke is Garcia's chief stock in trade.

Jimmy Foxx Hits Four-Baser With Bases Loaded to Defeat Tigers, Boston's Lead Increases

With 15 Years in Big League Foxx is Setting Opposing Hurlers Crazy With His Hitting

CHAMPIONS WIN

Yankees Sparked in 12-Hit Attack by George Selkirk and Charlie Keller

(By Judson Bailey)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Maybe it's nostalgia creeping up, but a fellow can't escape feeling every once in a while that the old heroes are the best heroes.

There's Jimmie Foxx of Boston Red Sox. In the 15 years he has been swashbuckling around the American League, a lot of fine new faces have appeared and a lot of them have passed right on out.

But old "Double X" still is setting the opposing pitchers crazy with his terrific slugging. He hit a home run with the bases loaded yesterday for the second straight day to help Boston beat Detroit Tigers 11-3 and get a stronger grip on first place.

He has hit 11 homers and batted in 34 runs already this spring to set a spectacular pace for the American League. For a whole he even was on top in percentage batting, runs scored and other departments including stolen bases.

For a fellow who is 32 years old that's going mighty fast early in the season, and he is one of the principal reasons the Red Sox are in front. His blow yesterday came in the third inning when Boston was two runs behind. It was what the Sox needed to set them sparking and they punched out three other homers to Detroit's two to win.

Yanks Belt Indians

In the meantime the world champion New York Yankees took some of the pressure off Boston by belting Cleveland Indians 10-2 with a 12-hit attack, led by George Selkirk and Charley Keller. Manager Joe McCarthy re-instated his World Series line-up in spite of the fact the tribe started a lefthander, Al Milnar, the League's leading pitcher, and the move proved propitious. The performance was all the more impressive because of the three-hit pitching of young Marius Russo.

The victory was not sufficient to get the Yanks out of the cellar, however, because Chicago White Sox edged out Washington Senators 9-8. Joe Kuhel led the Sox's 15-hit assault with five hits including a home run.

These were the only completed games in the American League. Philadelphia Athletics were leading 6-0 when rain washed out their game with St. Louis Browns in the fifth.

In the only contest the weather allowed in the National League Brooklyn Dodgers squeezed past Chicago Cubs 4-3 to end a three-game losing streak. Dolph Camilli rapped out a single with the bases loaded in the ninth inning to score three runs.

JERSEY GIANTS IN THIRD PLACE LOSING TO BEARS

Rochester Red Wings in Top Spot With Orioles Firmly in Second Place

ROYALS BEATEN

Lester McCrabbe Allowed Two Hits When Toronto Shutout Bisons 2-0

(By the Associated Press)

The Jersey City Giants, after leading the International League for a month, are in third place today—and to make matters worse their "best enemies" Newark Bears are responsible for it. Two successive losses to their bitter rivals dropped them a full game behind Rochester and Baltimore.

Bears handed Jersey City a 6-1 beating yesterday, while the Red Wings defeated Montreal 5-4 to increase their lead to one game and Baltimore clubbed out a 5-2 victory over Syracuse to move into second place, a few percentage points behind Rochester.

Tommy Reis held the luckless little Giants to five hits in his International League debut. His mates pounded Hal Feldman and Alta Cohen for 12 safeties, coming from behind with a three-run attack in the seventh, and adding the extra three in the ninth when Ed Levy homered with two aboard.

A home run by Elvin Adams, with two on in the first inning, gave Rochester an early lead over Montreal. The blow came off Lee Grissom, who started for the Royals and was the losing pitcher. Herschel Lyons received credit for the Wing victory although he had to be rescued by Hank Gornicki in the eighth.

Lester McCrabb held the Buffalo Bisons to a pair of singles to give Toronto Maple Leafs a 2-0 victory at Toronto. Lloyd Stromme started for Buffalo and allowed three hits in five innings, but two walks and a triple by Milt Gray in the fifth finished him—and the ball game.

The Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. annual field day and track meet at Stirling on June 1st may not exactly see the cream of the district's athletes in action after all and perhaps it will be for the benefit of all concerned at that. Bill Pigden, crack middle distance runner and pole vault star at the Belleville Collegiate, intends to compete that day in the Eastern Canadian track and field meet at Molson Stadium, in Montreal. Pigden features the 440 and 880 on the track and the pole vault in the field events, but may only compete in one track event in Montreal. Bill has been training vigorously all spring and is in splendid condition. He made all qualifying records at the O.A.C. summer camp at Lake Couchiching last summer and will also compete in the Eastern Interscholastic track and field meet at Kingston this Saturday. "Pete" Beach, athletic director at Albert College, is grooming a trio of athletes from that school to compete in Montreal also. The fleet-footed Tom Wooley will enter the hundred and 220 dashes, Jim Brisbane the 440 and 880 middle distances, while "Zed" Powell will enter in the high and broad jumps, giving Belleville fine representation in the Eastern Canadian field day finals this year.

We expect to see practically a whole new infield trot out in the Corby's A.C. jerseys tonight. Harold Reid is being switched from third to first, Murray remains at second, while either Tony Meraw of Tweed or Cy Barriage at short and Chuck Barriage perhaps covering the hot corner. On the other side of the opening day softball picture we find elongated Art Cole with the "Oilers" this year. It seems Coach "George" Bawden is still seeking a shortstop and hasn't given up hopes of signing Nicky Sero for another season, but the Ox Point infielder just ain't a-talking with his "John Henry" on the dotted line as yet. If Sero remains outside the "Oilers" realm, Cole may be used at short and Frank O'Neill brought back from Toronto to cover the initial sack, while Jack Moon at second and the reliable Johnnie Ronsky picking up the "bullets" along the third base line. Johnnie Bawden and Connie Harris are the probable starting pitchers, while Eddie Schrieder and Freddie Vasil in the respective relief roles tonight.

Do you remember when Bud Donovan, 20-year-old Winnipegger stood alone of 10 representatives as Canada's standard-bearer in the fourth round of the British amateur golf championship at St. Annes-on-the-Sea five years ago today. He put up a gallant fight before being eliminated in the fifth round.

Did you know that Carl Hubbell's outstanding pitching feat came on July 2nd, 1933 when he beat St. Louis Cardinals 1 to 0 in 18 innings. Hubbell yielded only six hits, four of them scratchy, and didn't walk one. That year he set a new league record for pitching consecutive scoreless innings, 46 in a row and that? . . . And that all baseballs used in a major league game are provided by the home club, but the last ball used is always kept by the winning team?

We were talking to Eddie Sobul, the Hartford grappler, after last week's wrestling show at the Arena, "What I like is to meet these so-called rough and tough hombres. This wrestling in the old-time orthodox manner is just so much eye-wash; why the fans can't get any kick out of that cat-mawling. I wish the promoters would get me an opponent who isn't afraid to mix matters up a bit and spill a little blood occasionally," bewailed Sobul and apparently his boasting reached the right ears, as Eddie meets Jim Beamish, the veteran Toronto lightheavy here on Victoria Day night at the Arena. Beamish has long since been recognized as a trial horse for the best wrestlers in the business, so maybe Sobul will regret his egotistic attitude. The main bout brings a new face to Belleville wrestling circles, when Nick Pavick, the Greek lad from Detroit, meets Nibs Palmer, former Montreal grappler.

The Belleville Softball Association made a move in the right direction when they assumed the supervision of the City Industrial League last night. After all it remains the solemn duty of any parent organization to foster and support the less fortunate. Had baseball and hockey assumed interest in the minority groups of their respective sports in Belleville in years passed, perhaps this city would have enjoyed a more predominate picture in all categories of sport today. There is an old saying—"When you want a job done, give it to a busy man" and apparently the local Softball Association realize the prolific results of helping the underdog.

Sport Spice — Since the opening of the major leagues a little over a month ago, the Chicago Cubs have had 227 men left stranded on the diamond runways....As the Cubs have played 25 games, this means Gabby Hartnett's charges have had an average of nine players left on base each game, which comes rather high when it is considered that runs are the chief dividend in baseball....The Yankee big hitters broke out to garner 12 hits and beat Cleveland 10-2 yesterday as Johnnie, the office boy says—"Well, the opposition pitchers had to hit their bats sooner or latter"....Jimmy Foxx hit a home run with the bases loaded yesterday giving the Red Sox an 11 to 8 win over the Tigers....It was Foxx's second circuit blow with the corners fully populated and in doing so he equalled this record held jointly by Babe Ruth and Bill Dickey....Incidentally there were six circuit blows hit at Detroit yesterday and so we go over to the Flats.

LONG past is the day when a hole in the ground was regarded as the best place in which to keep savings. Modern banking, evolved by man as a convenience to serve his developing needs, now provides the solution. As a depository for his money today the Canadian relies upon his bank. ℭ From the days of the old-world goldsmiths of centuries ago, to banks, bank notes and deposit accounts which meet so efficiently the greater business and human needs of today, is a far cry indeed. ℭ Canada's chartered banks, with their wide distribution of branches throughout the Dominion, now provide deposit and other banking services in line with up-to-date requirements and in keeping with Canada's position as an important factor in world trade.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE
For Thursday, May 23

SWIFT-STIRRING events, with things moving under excitement and high tempo, are forecast from this day's astral operations. Probably new ventures of major importance, requiring not only much skill and practical creative ability but as well as fine initiative and enterprise are to the fore. These may be sure of attracting the generous support of those in position and authority to promote and give all needed means for launching and expanding. But in all transactions leave no loophole for craft, duplicity or hazardous entanglements.

Those whose birthday it is are justified in anticipating a year of definite progress and expansion in new directions, with every prospect of important propositions and projects of a practical nature meeting the approval and financial backing of influential personages. Bold inititave and sound constrictive ability will be supported and generouslly, but in all dealings be wary as to treachery, fraud or subtle entanglements, even in high places.

A child born on this day should have much practical talent and creative ability as well as high ambitions. Its enthusiasm, generous and expansive nature, will win it sucecss and much personal popularity with important persons.

AT THE CAPITOL

"$1,000 A TOUCHDOWN"

Lovers of good, old-fashioned roll-'em-in-the-aisle comedy, and those moviegoers who take their football seriously will both be pleased by the new Joe E. Brown-Martha Raye campus comedy, "$1,000 a Touchdown." With those famous mouthfuls, Joe and Martha, co-starred for the first time, and a supporting cast which includes such talented players as Eric Blore, Susan Hayward, John Hartley and Joyce Mathews, showing next at the Capitol.

The comedy aspects of the story are cleverly interwoven with the football activities. Joe, a failure as a thespian because he loses his voice when confronted with more than ten people, joins up with Martha, whose only asset is a bankrupt college. To attract a student body, they "recruit" a football team, and Joe becomes coach. But no school will play Joe's and Martha's team because of the way it was rounded up.

Martha, never at a loss in such a situation, hires a champion pro outfit to play a game with Madison. Then she bets all she has on the outcome of the game. With Madison behind by about ten touchdowns, Martha has an inspiration. She bets the old skinflint who holds the mortgage on the school $1,000 that her team will score a touchdown. Then she promises the captain of the pro outfit $1,000 for every touchdown Madison scores. The result of all the wagering is too hilarious to reveal.

Adding a moment of melody to the picture, Martha sings a new Robin-Wainger hit, "I Spell Love With a Capital You." James Hogan directed from an original screenplay by Delmar Daves.

On the same programme is shown the 3 Mesquiteers in their latest Western "Covered Wagon Days" starring Robert Livingston, Raymond Hatton and Duncan Renaldo.

The 5th chapter of the thrilling serial "The Phantom Creeps" and a Looney tune cartoon "The Film Fan" completes the bill.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Dark Rapture"

The three star smash hit, the most exciting jolt of entertainment the screen has provided in a decade, "Dark Rapture" the educational film into the Belgium Congo which was sponsored by the late King Albert of Belgium, is now showing at the McCarthy theatre. In addition the comedy-drama "Flight at Midnight" featuring Phil Regan, Jean Parker and Col. Roscoe Turner, plus latest Fox Movietone News Events from the war zones, complete a program of merit which every man, woman and child will enjoy, so come prepared to see a swell evening of outstanding screen entertainment.

"Little Orvie"

On the screen for the first time Booth Tarkington's famous story "Little Orvie" will be presented next at the McCarthy theatre and in advance we warn you that you are going to see a movie that will warm your heart, as no other picture could.

"Little Orvie", part angel, part rascal...Mother's little darling... Dad's problem child....the neighbor's holy terror...the gangs "Patsy"...every strange dog's best pal...You'll want to spank him, but you'll love him...You'll shriek with laughter and cry with sympathy....And you'll applaud the inspired performance of this new boy wonder who lives the character of the book which has been read by millions, John Sheffield, an overnight star in his first featured role, Do not miss "Little Orvie."

Ernest Truex, Dorothy Tree, Ann Todd and Emma Dunn, have excellent supporting parts in the production, but we would like to stress that John Sheffield is the boy around which the story is framed and that we believe that you will not only wish to see him most, but will also wish that you could call him your own. Charles Starrett one of Hollywood's finest outdoor stars and a real favorite with the boys and girls of school age, in the city, in his newest western production "Blazing Six Shooters" will be presented in addition to "Little Orvie" and the weekly chapter-play "The Shadow."

AT THE BELLE

"Johnny Apollo"

"Johnny Apollo"—college hero, banker's son—mobster!

That's the powerful role that brings Tyrone Power next to the Belle theatre in the 20th Century-Fox drama of that title, which co-stars him with Dorothy Lamour.

Not since "Jesse James" has Tyrone had a part like this, and never in his career has he given such a great performance. And lovely Lamour reveals her true allure for the first time as "Lucky" Dubarry, the night club entertainer who falls hard for "Jahnny Apollo."

When the story opens Power is an idealistic college man, but he doesn't remain that long. For when the banker father he idolized (played by Edward Arnold) is sent to prison for embezzlement the boy's whole world crashes about his ears.

Spurned by his wealthy friends, broke and unable to get a job because of the stigma against his name, the young man assumes an alias, "Johnny Apollo," and joins the mob of Mickey Dwyer, brilliantly played by Lloyd Nolan. It is here that Johnny meets "Lucky" Dubarry, Mickey's girl, who understands and loves Johnny—regardless.

He also meets Judge Brennan, a tippling ex-judge turned underworld lawyer, who boasts a talent for "springing" his clients from jail. Charley Grapewin, who scored such a hit as Grampa in Darryl F. Zanuck's production of John Steinbeck's "The Grapes of Wrath," scores again in this role. And Lionel Atwill is excellent as the banker's helpless lawyer, McLaughlin.

The boy works tirelessly to help free the father who has turned against him because of his underworld connections, and the story works up to one of the most thrilling climaxes in screen history.

Lamour puts over two smash new song hits, "Dancing for Nickels and Dimes" by Lionel Newman and Frank Loesser, and "This is the Beginning of the End" by Mack Gordon.

Vatican of Pope Pius XII

An all new edition of the March of Time, and greatest one yet, will be presented on the same program when the first official motion pictures of "The Vatican of Pope Pius XII" will be exhibited.

Here is an opoprtunity to see what His Holiness, the Pontiff is doing in behalf of peace in a war-wracked world.

"Harvest Time," a clever Terrytoon cartoon will be exhibited on the same program.

Pictures with wild themes and wilder backgrounds are nothing new to Ernest Schoedsack, chosen by Paramount to direct its technicolor fantasy, "Dr. Cyclops," which is now at the Belle.

Alice Duer Miller's widely read novel, "And One Was Beautiful," is announced as the second feature attraction with a cast headed by Robert Cummings, Laraine Day, Jean Muirs and Billie Burke.

The Belle news of the hour will also be exhibited.

WHY ARGUE? NEW GOODRICH TIRE PROTECTS AGAINST BOTH SKIDS AND BLOW-OUTS

● Here's an argument you can't win. Because when figures prove that thousands are killed or injured every year by skids and blow-outs, you need to watch out for both!

Ever see a tire sweep wet roads dry? As the never-ending spiral bars of the Silvertown Life-Saver Tread roll over the wet road, they act like a whole battery of windshield wipers—sweep the water right and left from under the tire—actually leave a track so dry you can light a match on it. It's easy to see why you get the quickest non-skid stops you've ever had.

But inside every Silvertown is another great invention just as vital to your driving safety—the new improved Golden Ply. This exclusive Goodrich feature resists the terrific internal tire heat that causes so many of today's high-speed blow-outs—provides you with scientific protection against these blow-outs.

Don't take chances on skids OR blow-outs. See your nearest Goodrich Dealer about putting Silvertowns on your car now.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, May 22—(AP)— The bull army counter-attacked in the stock market today and stemmed the disorderly price rout that yesterday brought the worst break in two years.

Aircrafts and steels were the strongest weapons in the turn against the bears, and a number of specialties were also bought. The advance was not uniform. In a number of sectors prices wavered or fell back toward the fourth hour.

In favor most of the time—though there was considerable bobbing about in an obviously "thin" market—were such issues as Glenn Martin, Douglas, Chrysler, U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, Sperry, Lockheed, Allied Chemical, Johns Manville and Eastman.

Lagging most of the day were American Telephone, J. C. Penney, Consolidated Edison, U. S. Gypsum and Santa Fe.

Hiram Walker and Distillers, among Canadian issues, advanced fractions. Canadian Pacific and Dome Mines were easy and Lake Shore Mines held unchanged while Canada 4s, in the bond market, dipped slightly.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 22 (CP)—More cheerful war news pulled Toronto exchange out of another slump today. Prices staged a sizeable rally.

British American Oil recovered to 16¾, up two points from Tuesday's close and Imperial and International Pete gained ½ to a point. National Steel Car recovered 3 points to 40 and most of the steels ruled higher. Gold shares cut their early losses and a few, including Macassa, Central Patricia, San Antonio, Aunor and MacLeod Cockshutt, turned early losses into gains.

Sherritt, Steep Rock, Pend Oreille, Ventures and Smelters all displayed net gains at early afternoon.

Hog Quotations

Three Charges Attempted Murder Against J. Kayan

Montreal, May 22—(CP)— Joseph Kayan, 43, arrested last night at Prescott, Ont., was arraigned today on three charges of attempted murder, arising from a shooting affray in which two women and a man were injured here last week-end.

Police said Kayan, who will appear for preliminary hearing May 28, had been sought since Harry Merakiam and his sister-in-law, Navart Cosaglenian, were shot and Merakiam's wife was struck about the head with a revolver by a man who allegedly was the rejected suitor of Miss Cosaglenian.

Merakiam, 56, is in critical condition in hospital with a bullet wound in his head, while his sister-in-law is recovering from less severe wounds in the arm and breast. Merakiam's wife was not injured seriously.

DINGHY UPSETS, BOYS ARE SAFE

Two Wellington Youths Make Long Swim Ashore in West Lake

Two Wellington youths had a narrow escape this morning from drowning in West Lake near Wellington, when their dinghy capsized about one-quarter or a half-mile off shore. Mack Grier, 16, and Allan Wannamaker, 18, were forced to swim the distance nearly half a mile to the shore with all their clothing on them. Wannamaker made shore but Grier seemed to be on the point of collapse from exhaustion when a motorist, discovering his plight, went into the water for about twenty feet and brought Grier in.

The water was very cold and the boys were in consequence chilled by the exposure.

They were taken to their homes.

VIMY MEMORIAL TO CANADIANS STILL INTACT

For the Present the Memorial Has Escaped the Fury of Present War

London, May 22 (CP Cable) — Canada's Vimy Memorial, unveiled on the famous Ridge in 1936 by King Edward VIII, apparently has escaped the fury of the present war—temporarily at least.

Correspondents returning to London Tuesday from the northern French-Belgian front said the giant monument, 11 miles from Arras which fell to the Germans yesterday, has just missed the fighting now going on in the area.

Thus far the fighting has taken place at a point south of and parallel to the Ridge.

Drew Middleton, Associated Press staff writer, who returned to the British Capital from the front said that he saw the monument standing intact earlier this week, sandbagged just as it was when Hon. Norman Rogers Canada's Defence Minister, and Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton, General Officer Commanding the 1st Division, Canadian Active Service Force, saw it during their recent visit to the continent.

On that historic setting, recalled yesterday by the German capture of Arras, 100,000 soldiers from the Dominion stormed to victory April 9, 1917 and during that week 11,297 Canadian officers and other ranks were killed, wounded or missing.

Familiar Names

Amiens, also in the news as having fallen to the Nazis, St. Quentin, scene of fierce fighting two days ago, Bapaume and scores of other towns and villages mentioned in dispatches since the Germans began their drive to the channel, are familiar names to thousands of Canada's veterans of 1914-18.

At Vimy Ridge Canada's four divisions led the assault over a 7,000-yard front and after three days of fierce fighting the whole of the Ridge was in the possession of the Allies.

They captured more than 4,000 prisoners, 54 light and heavy guns, 100 trench mortars and 124 machine-guns. One German division lost 3,133 of all ranks during the operation and another 3,473.

In 1918 the Canadians took up positions at Telegraph Hill and the ridges of Neuville Vitasse to stop a push on Arras, one of Germany's last drives before the November surrender.

The Canadian corps liberated Cambrai Oct. 8, 1918 following a series of battles which in intensity and in losses were unparalleled in war. The Canadians entered the city after storming across Canal Du Nord Sept. 27 1918.

Britain Nerves Self For Greatest Struggle Says Vincent Massey

London, May 22—(CP Cable) — Hon. Vincent Massey said last night in an Empire broadcast that Britain has nerved herself for the greatest struggle she has ever faced but "there is not a shadow of despair, not a thought of defeat, only an unshakeable faith in the ultimate victory."

"There is more than faith," said the Canadian High Commissioner to London. Now new measures have been taken to meet the new perils and the wheels of industry, harnessed to the war effort, are moving faster today than ever before. Above all, the private interest and personal happiness of all the million hopes and fears which make up the daily life of men and women, have been put to one side and the British nation concentrated as one man upon a supreme object."

On this one campaign in which he has suffered already vast losses of men and munitions, Hitler has staked his fortunes in the belief he can end the conflict by one crushing blow, the High Commissioner said.

Profound Miscalculation

"Never was there a more profound miscalculation. As has been well said, if we lose this battle we will not lose the war, but should Hitler lose this battle he knows he will have lost the war."

Paying tribute to the courage and devotion of the Royal Air Force, Mr. Massey said Canada already has taken her part in this effort.

"The first Canadians to be in action in this war were the men from our Dominion who came over here many months and even years ago to equip themselves for the conflict in the air that was to come. Their's is a stirring tale of gallantry and sacrifice.

"You are wondering tonight how the people of this island are feeling and thinking. Britain has nerved herself for the greatest ordeal she has ever faced. The threat of an attack from the air now lies over this land. What such an attack can mean, we all know. It is a nightmare of cruelty and destruction which hangs heavy on the air these lovely days of the English Spring. But its nightmare is powerless against the steady spirit of the British people."

Nazis Not Interested Says Ambassador

Tokyo, May 22.—(AP). — Major-General Eugene Ott, German Ambassador to Japan, told Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita today that Germany was not interested in the Dutch East Indies and had no intention of interfering with their status quo.

The Japanese Government announced on May 11 that it had notified all powers concerned that Japan would insist upon maintenance of the status quo in the Dutch East Indies, despite the invasion of the Netherlands by Germany on the day before.

The United States, Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and the Netherlands were notified to this effect.

It was to reply to this that the Germany envoy called at the foreign office today.

Bill Carrying Death Penalty For Treachery Ready For Passing

London, May 22—(CP) — Prime Minister Churchill announced today that a bill carrying the death penalty for treachery will be hurried through its second and third readings tomorrow to hasten its enactment as a move against any "fifth column" activity.

The Prime Minister said a bill covering the new local defence volunteers—a home guard against the threat of parachute invasion—will be introduced in the House of Commons tomorrow. He asked that it be enacted the same day.

Mr. Churchill assured James Maxton, Independent Labor, that if any attempt had been made to suppress criticism or opposition in the Commons, it was apparent that it already had failed.

MAIN ARMIES

Apathy Chased Away

The German successes, however, chased away any remaining traces of apathy in this island, which once found much comfort in its channel defences. Both employers and Labor expressed themselves as ready to accept any sacrifices demanded by the government.

To remedy the weakest spot in Britain's defence—a lack of fighting and bombing planes—the hustling publisher, Lord Beaverbrook, Minister for Aircraft Production, appealed to aircraft workers to operate on a seven-day schedule with shifts around the clock.

His newspaper, The Daily Express, declared; "The tenacity of our race will be our salvation. For if we can hold on and hold out for the next few weeks and months ours is the assurance of final victory."

Newspapers also pointed to supplies from the United States as a valuable asset for the Allies.

The News Chronicle commented: "The great nation of the United States is awakening from its isolation and help in ever-increasing strength will soon be on its way across the ocean."

Unloads Bombs

German bombs were jettisoned on British soil during the night. No casualties were reported. A communique indicated that the raiding planes were unloading bombs without aiming at any target when they were beaten back by anti-aircraft fire.

The planes dropped explosives offshore and on land at two places along the southeast coast. Some bombs fell near a village, shattering window panes and awakening inhabitants.

One inhabitant related: "The bombs were all dropped within about a minute and a half. I was awakened by terrific explosions and saw searchlights across the sky. Window panes were shattered in the village, but I don't think there has been much damage to property. We feel as though we are on the western front now."

Firing Heard at Estuary

Further air activity along the southeast coast indicated attacks were being made on shipping. Anti-aircraft fire was heard along the Thames Estuary but no alarms were sounded.

Alfred Duff Cooper, Minister of Information, told the nation last night that the war news was grave but that there was "no cause for serious alarm and still less for panic."

The Ministry of Home Security ordered everyone to sign their names and write in their addresses on their identity cards and to be ready to show if called upon at any time. Cards previously have carried simply the name of the holder and the registration number.

British preparedness in the Mediterranean area was emphasized by a transfer scheme put into effect for Gibraltar, British fortress guarding the western entrance to the Mediterranean. Women and children began to leave for French Morocco under the plan.

Spain Still Neutral

An official announcement said that there was "no need for anxiety" over the intentions of Spain, along which Gibraltar lies, and that Spain had "reiterated her strict neutrality."

The British Broadcasting Corporation issued a warning to the public against precipitate conclusions regarding the situation on the continent.

Its commentator said it was realized in London that it was "far too early" to say that the enemy "has consolidated or can consolidate the gains he has achieved and, until he can, the position he occupies is extremely dangerous."

He also cautioned against belief in German broadcast claims which might be made without foundation in fact, but merely with the idea of causing unease amongst their opponents.

Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner to the United Kingdom, told an Empire radio audience that in Britain "there is not a shadow of despair, not a thought of defeat, only an unshakeable faith in the ultimate victory."

War correspondents and others returning from France said they believed Canada's war memorial at Vimy, near Amiens, had not been damaged and that the fighting had swirled around it, missing its particular locality.

The situation in France and Belgium was in such a state of confusion that military authorities sent all war correspondents back to England, saying they could not provide them with working facilities.

Mr. Duff Cooper said three facts stand out at the moment:

"First, that the present objective of the enemy is the Channel ports from which they hope to launch war upon these islands.

"Second, that small parts of the (German) mechanized troops have succeeded in eluding their opponents, in advancing great distances, and coming near to their objectives.

Allies Have Superior Numbers

"Third, that the armies of France and Great Britain are undefeated."

He said the Allies occupied the battlefield "in enormously superior numbers" and that when the counter attack comes it "should prove formidable."

"We and the French have to fight on, no doubt grievously handicapped by what has just passed, but still determined and still undismayed," The Times said editorially.

The most encouraging prospect is "perhaps to be found," the newspaper said, "in the fact that a considerable number of French troops appear to be still holding out, though the enemy have dashed past them, leaving his supporting infantry to carry out the process of mopping up.

"In the event of strong Allied counter-attacks on the German ranks, these islands of resistance might be able to afford them valuable aid.

"The most valuable of all legacies Foch bequeathed to the French Army was that in war one should never allow the enemy's will to dictate events.

Reynaud's Speech Praised

"You are not beaten until you admit you are beaten. It was largely because he succeeded in instilling this doctrine that Foch weathered the storms of early 1918. The French Army has since wandered after some strange materialistic gods, but the return of the Marshal's tried and trusted disciple, General Weygand, may help revive the old spirit of opportunism, self-help and trust in the initiatives of subordinates."

Emphasizing the calmness and energy of the British, the newspaper said:

"It seems that the French spirit is equally firm and confident and that they are ready to strain every nerve to repair the errors and weakness of the past few days.

"Reynaud's speech is a trumpet call to the nation."

France Must Be Saved

The News Chronicle said: "France is our ally and France is not destroyed. Her ninth army met a grave reverse, but the whole of the rest of the magnificent fighting force remains intact and has not yet tried conclusions with the enemy.

"The area of French soil yielded to the invader is rich in resources and strategically valuable, but represents less than one-thirtieth of France. The remainder is a land of vast wealth and productive capacity.

"This immense area, peopled by a free democracy and defended by supersoldiery, must and will be saved. So will our own soil.

"Our navy stands supreme, our heroic air force grows. That great nation, the United States is awakening from isolation, and help in ever-increasing strength will soon be on its way across the ocean."

The military expert of The Daily Express wrote: "Great masses of the Allies' divisions have not yet had a chance to fight. They are efficient and in fine mettle, and their morale is good. We may be on the eve of a second Marne. Our eyes are on that alert and brilliant Generalissimo, Weygand. He it is who has to make the big decision and select that ripe moment for his counter-stroke."

'IF WE CAN HOLD' —REYNAUD

National radio system:

"I am full of confidence if each man does his duty with a fierce energy."

Blitzkrieg Stopped by Rain

The perfect weather which favored Hitler's Polish campaign and the Blitzkrieg which he hurled against the Low Countries 12 days ago was broken last night by heavy rains.

Skies were clear again today, although fields and roads over which heavy tanks and armored cars had to move were soggy.

That break in the weather gave a slight rise to the French optimism, even though tempered by the belief that the Germans may be consolidating their forces for a new and more furious lunge.

As the Germans pushed their attack westward towards the vital channel ports, the French army established a new front along the Somme and Aisne Rivers, 200 miles across northern France.

With this defence system firmly established, the Allies began their counter attack to relieve Allied troops from pressure of the German push. Their first success, announced in a brief communique, was the recapture of Arras. Shortly afterward the Ministry of Information announced the taking of Abbeville.

Germans Forced to Move

A military spokesman said the destruction of the Somme bridges would force the Germans to bring up much heavier forces than they seem to have if they intended to cross the river.

The communique telling of the capture of Arras merely said:

"Enemy pressure, continued in the direction of the coast, taking the form of raids carried out by small motorized detachments. Arras is now in our hands."

The taking of Abbeville, where German motorcyclists and French troops had fought for possession of the railroad station, was announced by the Ministry of Information. A spokesman there said grimly the Germans had been "chased out" of the town.

Fighting was also going on in the region of Neufchatel Sur Aisne ten miles directly north of Rheims the Ministry of Information said. Details were lacking.

A military spokesman, commenting on the destruction of the Somme bridges, said the Germans would have to bring up much heavier forces than they seem to have if they intended crossing the stream, roughly 70 miles north of Paris.

Recapture of Arras was the first reported success of the new command headed by General Maxime Weygand, disciple of the late Marshal Foch and lately commander of the Allied forces in the near east.

Struggle to Form Lines

The Allied armies were struggling to re-establish lines disorganized by a German offensive which brought the invaders dangerously near the English Channel and spread desolation across northern France. Many frightened citizens left Paris to seek safety in the south.

Military officials described the situation in the battle zone as highly confused, with Allied and German troops mingled in a general melee. Amiens on the edge of the coastal plain leading to the Channel apparently was in German hands still.

A War Ministry spokesman said "light elements" composed of 3,000 to 4,000 men had participated in the original capture of both cities.

He declared that German motorcycle troops had reached Abbeville on the Somme estuary, 12 miles from the Channel and 25 miles west of Amiens. No one could say for certain whether the Nazis actually had occupied the town.

The French declared that they were holding out at Cambrai, approximately 45 miles northeast of Amiens and 20 miles east of Arras.

Fighting was reported in many sectors far behind the advance positions to which the fast-moving German mechanized columns penetrated yesterday.

Difficult Task Ahead

"The immediate task facing General Weygand is to close the breach in the Allied lines through which the Germans swept westward along the Somme valley before the Nazis can rush sufficient reinforcements through the hole to consolidate their positions.

The situation was complicated by the speed with which the armored German units fanned out in all directions after their break through, striking at unexpected places, putting the torch to towns and desolating the countryside.

The Germans were said to be dropping parachute troops and German bombing planes kept up a continual, harassing attack, smashing at Allied lines of communication and troop concentrations.

The French charged that the German planes attacked many non-military objectives, bombing defenceless hamlets and strafing refugees on the open highways.

Despite the admitted gravity of the situation, there was no indication of official lack of faith in Weygand's ability to save the nation.

British Bearing Brunt

The British Expeditionary Force was said to be bearing the brunt of the fighting in the coastal sector, fighting with rifles and machine guns against the power of Nazi mechanized forces in a last stand to keep them from gaining a foothold on the channel.

The fate of General Goraud, commander of the Meuse River sector, who was reported yesterday by the Germans to have been captured, remained uncertain.

A War Ministry spokesman said he could neither confirm nor deny the report, but it was understood that some members of Goraud's staff had been taken prisoner.

The Ministry of National Defence meanwhile, announced a plan to enlist women between 21 and 55 years of age as army auxiliaries. They will assist the work of corps and regimental staffs, the quartermaster service, transportation service and the medical corps and will be paid on the same basis as women already employed in munitions factories.

Aberhart Gov't. and Many Bodies in Canada Urge Action to 'Smother' Any Subversive Elements

(By The Canadian Press)

A movement for the establishment of a solid home front to smother any "fifth column activities in Canada has been embraced officially by one provincial government and an increasing umber of municipalities and public bodies across the Dominion.

Premier Aberhart of Alberta has pledged the full co-operation of his Social Credit G vernment in any drive the Dominion Government may undertake to crush subversive activities. Mr. Aberhart, who is also Provincial Attorney-General, insists "we have no room for "fifth column" activties in Alberta or Canada".

Commenting last night upon the recent judgment of Mr. Justice E. R. E. Chevrier which outlawed the Communist Party in Canada, Mr. Aberhart said:

"The Alberta Government is whole-heartedly in favor of drastic action being taken against any pro-German or pro-Nazi propaganda spread by anyone whether belonging to the communist party or any other party of organization.

Voluntary Defence Visits Urged

A growing number of organizations are pressing for the voluntary mobilization of defence units or home guards as a precautionary measure against the rise of any subversive movement and also as an added protection against any parachute invasion of the country.

The Okanagan Municipal Association is sending all the way from the Pacific Coast to Ottawa two delegates to lay before the Dobinion authorities an appeal to intern all enemy aliens and investigate all persons of alien origin. ## DIONNE QUINTS NEARLY SIX

Will Celebrate Birthday Next Tuesday and Will Graduate to Primary School

North Bay, Ont., May 22—(CP)—About ready to celebrate their sixth birthday next Tuesday, the Dionne Quintuplets today looked forward to the excitement of graduation from kindergarten to primary school.

They will still get their lessons from their private tutor, Miss G. Vezina of Ottawa, at their Callander nursery, but English will be just one of the new subjects they will study. As in the case of other Ontario children, their educational program will follow that laid down by the Provincial Education Department.

A quiet birthday party is planned and there will be no radio broadcast this year because the Quints' guardians decided "it would not be fair" to the children to have them do further broadcasting until they have mastered the English languarge.

No Lack of Offers

"It wasn't because of any lack of offers from the broadcasting companies," Keith Munro, business manager of the Quints, said today in reference to the guardians' decision. He disclosed that, although the quints originally spoke a few words in English such as "goodbye", they now speak only French.

In accordance with the wishes of Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne French is used exclusively around the nursery. Under Ontario regulations, school children are not required to start a study of English until their sixth year, upon entrance to primary school.

Munro described the Quints' health as "swell—they're doing just fine." Starting Friday, the children will begin a two-showings-a-day summer schedule."

British Pilot Has Hair-Raising Experience On Return from Reich

London, May 22 (CP)—Anti-aircraft gunners on the east coast last night brought down a "phantom bomber"—a Royal Air Force Hampden, flying empty after its crew and pilot had taken to parachutes.

German gunners had crippled the plane, the Air Ministry said today, and the crew, except for the pilot, bailed out over Germany.

"Single-handed, the pilot nursed his aircraft across the North Sea, fighting every minute of the long journey to maintain height," the account related.

"As he crossed the British coast he was picked up by an anti-aircraft searchlight. He was all in, and his aircraft was in no condition to make a safe landing.

"He said, 'well, thank God, that's England anyway!' and opened the door of his plane and stepped out.

"At that moment anti-aircraft gunners, receiving no recognition signals, opened fire.

"As the pilot floated down in his parachute, he thought of 'parashooters'," a newly established civilian force to combat the possible invasion of German parachute troops—who might be waiting beneath.

"But his luck held. He landed safely and was able to establish his identity."

Would Organize Ex-Servicemen To Combat Activities Of Subversive Elements

Sturgeon Falls, Ont., May 22—(CP)—A proposal to organize ex-servicemen in a national voluntary force to combat subversive activities in Canada was approved last night by northern Ontario branches of the Canadian Legion.

Vanguards of German Advance 'Picture of Utter Chaos at Times' Says Air Ministry Report

Bombing by R.A.F. Bombers Often Impossible Because of Difficulty of Identifying Enemy Columns Among Fugitives on Tuesday

London, May 22 (CP)—An Air Ministry statement tonight said the vanguards of the German advance at times presented a picture of "utter chaos" from the air.

The statement described Tuesday's attack on the spearhead of th German push in northern France (which today had been driven back from Arras and Abbeville).

It added that often bombing was made impossible because of the difficulty of identifying enemy columns among streams of refugees overtaken by the rapid German advance.

The statement follows:

"Yesterday renewed attacks were made by relays of bomber aircraft on the spearhead of the German thrust toward the channel ports. From the air the head of the German advance presented at times a picture of utter chaos.

Bombing Difficult at Times

"Often bombing was made impossible because of the difficulty of identifying enemy columns among streams of refugees overtaken by the enehmy's rapid advance. On one enemy road reconnoitred at a height of 1,000 feet 40 to 50 green-painted German dorries were seen to be hopelessly intermingled with pedestrians, ambulances, civilian cars, tradesmen's vans and bicycles.

"A few miles away a road bridge over a river was packed with civilian transport making its precarious way around a gaping bomb hole almost in the centre of the carriage way.

"At other points along the line of advance where the enemy troop columns had drawn ahead of civilian traffic, bombing objectives were clearly defined. A convoy of armored lorries three miles long was bombed by two low-flying Blenheims and fires were seen to break out among the vehicles immediately after the attack.

Direct Hit on Tank

"Another Blenheim attacking a moving convoy of lorries in the same area overshot its target and saw its bombs register a direct hit on an enemy tank in a field close by.

"Fast moving columns of light armored fighting vehicles escorted by a strong force of motorcycle combinations were intercepted on the main road north of Abbeville and successfully attacked. Many direct hits were observed on closely packed vihcles and explosions were seen to break out. Another column of armored vehicles partially hidden in a wood nearer to Abbeville was heavily bombed by a formation of 11 Blenheims

"More than 150 bombs were dropped on this one target alone and salvos were seen to fall close to each side of the column on the road and in the wood. Main roads and railway lines at strategic points were also bombed with the object of impeding the dispatch of supplies and reinforcements to the enemy's advanced positions."

Navy Supply Bill Appropriation Added to

Washington, May 22 (AP)—Acting with the telephoned approval of President Roosevelt, the Senate Naval appropriations sub-committee added $478,000,000 to United States Navy's Supply Bill today to make provision for a 25,000 increase in enlisted strength.

President Roosevelt asked $314,000,000 for the navy in his emergency defence recommendations. The sub-committee wrote this into the pending Appropriation Bill and added to it at the same time $60,776,000 in cash and $100,000,000 in contract authority.

The total of funds being made available to the Navy under the expanded defence program thus stood at $1,464,000,000, as compared with $1,823,000,000 for the army.

The purchase of your product starts when the prospect reads your message in the Local Daily

"I sell more when I display goods advertised in the Local Daily!"

"Competition is keen in the retail drug trade, so I can't afford to waste space in my store displaying goods for which no demand has been created. Also I have found that I can sell more and get more profits from goods that are advertised in our local daily paper. For instance, one product persistently advertised in the Kitchener Daily Record gave us more than $1,000.00 in profit last year. The manufacturers who will always get the best display space in my store are those who help me sell, by placing their national advertising in our local daily."

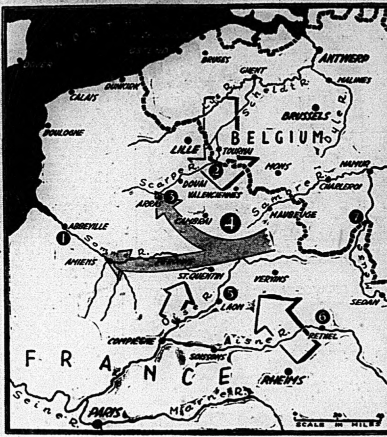
FRENCH LAUNCH COUNTER-ATTACK TO HALT NAZI DRIVE



Claims and counter-claims of the high commands confused the issues of the fierce, rapidly-moving fighting taking place in France and Belgium. The Nazi high command claims that an armored column of 60,000 men has reached Abbeville (1), on the English Channel. These claims are denied by the British and French, who admit that a few scattered tank units have gotten through and are now cut off from their own lines. Germans have entered Amiens but have been driven out of Arras (3), according to an announcement by the French high command. British forces at withdrawing into France in the Valenciennes sector (2), but all the Somme-Oise area (4), is being contested fiercely. Germans claim to have taken Laon (5), Rethel (6), and to have smashed through the French ninth army between Namur and Sedan (7).

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, being liver and onions in pop's honor, and ma said, Willyum, I've got a surprise for you?

Save it and let me enjoy the suspense, pop said. I'll remind you every day and keep begging you to tell me what it is and you keep on putting me off until I just cant stand it any longer, he said, and ma said, Now Willyum dont talk the height of nonsense, this is a pleasant surprise and it will overjoy you to hear it.

I cant wait another second and I'm not even going to try, hurry up and tell me, pop said, and ma said, I've got a beautiful cigar humidor for you, it's perfect, and the loveliest part about it is, it was absilutely free. It's made of pure mahogany and it has a separate compartment for pipe tobacco, she said.

It sounds like the answer to a smoker's prayer, did I understand you to say it was floating around free of charge? pop said, and ma said, Absilutely, Hookbinders announced a special gift day for customers only. Each customer was entitled to choose one free present. I thought it was a wonderful idea to foster pleasant relations, and I chose the humidor for you. It has a little combination lock and you dont need to tell a living sole the combination if you dont want to, and it has the most ingenious little self watering arrangement so it can never get too dry, she said.

Maybe it has a music box attachment too, pop said, and ma said, I don't think so. Anyway it's wonderful to get a handsome thing like that as free as the air. I hope you like the cigars, she said.

Yee gods is it full of cigars too? pop said, and ma said, No, they're separate, I had to buy 2 boxes of Caribbean Gems to be eligible for the gift, did you ever hear of them? and pop said, No, but something tells me I'll never forget them.

Proberly being partly sourcastic.

Police Blotter

Friday being Victoria Day there will be no session of city police court held in Belleville, His Worship Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C. announced today. The semi-weekly session of city police court will be held Saturday morning this week.

Two Indians, residents of the Tyendinaga Reserve, were arrested on charges of violations of the Liquor Control Act by Traffic Officer D. Ellis last evening. Solomon Loft was lodged in the county jail on remand charged with drunken driving, while a relative in his company was held on a common charge of intoxication. Constable Ellis observed a motor car being driven on East Dundas Street in an alleged dangerous manner and upon further investigation the officer alleges that Loft was driving while intoxicated. The pair were remanded in custody today.

Otherwise activities in city police circles were quiet and serene.

'Democracy at War' Subject Of Address by W. P. Zeller

Governor of Kiwanis District Speaks at Combined Meeting of District Clubs

5 NEW MEMBERS

"That it is a war against unbridled aggression is more abundantly clear. Any shadow of excuse that may have condoned Hitler's invasion of Austria, Memel and the Sudeten land of Czecho-Slovakia, cannot be stretched to cover the perfidious taking of Bohemia and Moravia, the blood-thirsty domination of Poland, the shameless occupation of Norway and Denmark and the ruthless invasion of Belgum, Holland and Luxembourg. Any doubts which neutral observers may once have had about the nature of Germany's aims and purposes have been shattered by the explosion of German bombs on the homes of her neutral neighbors," said Walter P. Zeller, governor of the Ontario-Quebec-Maritimes district of Kiwanis International in speaking to a combined meeting of district clubs which included Kingston, Peterboro, Lindsay and Belleville and of which the Belleville Club was host to the distinguished visitor at the Bay of Quinte Country Club on Tuesday evening. Governor Zeller spoke on the subject "Democracy at War."

Present at the meeting besides the Governor were the Past Governor, W. Y. Mills of Kingston, the Lieutenant-Governor, Jack McComb of Peterboro, the Past Lieutenant-Governor P. C. MacLaurin of the Belleville Club and Wing Commander Jack Sully of the R.C.A.F. Air Station at Trenton. George H. Griffin, the efficient secretary of the Belleville Club for eighteen years and now honorary life member, was also present and through Bill Anderson, the President, was presented with a beautiful clock suitably inscribed. Although taken by surprise George made an appreciative reply thanking all for their kindness and remarking that always would he have a warm spot in his heart for Belleville and especially the Kiwanis Club of this city.

St. Michael's Band

The meeting was also graced by the presence of the St. Michael's Children's Band and the members and visitors were delighted with the splendid program that was provided by the children, who range in years from five to eleven years. George A. Lee presented the band, giving a history of the organization from its inception and the thanks of the club was expressed by Eddie Shapiro for the delightful program afforded.

Fred Lewis of the Belleville Club and Andy Baldwin of the Kingston Club collected the several fines while Harold Carruthers of Belleville and Barry Spafford of Kingston led the members in song with Leo B. Riggs accompanying on the piano. Barry Spafford led in the singing of Allouette in honor of the Governor, who hails from Montreal, Quebec, and delighted with a couple of his famous stories, which certainly brought down the house. The toast to the visitors was proposed by Past President "Dick" Flynn and responded to by Ernie Sparks chairman of the Inter-Club Committee of the Kingston Club. Guests to be introduced included Jack Sully, Edward Shortt, Joe Shortt, Tom Fleury and Eddie George and these were all extended a welcome by the President, Bill Anderson and "Dick" Flynn.

Five New Members

An event of importance was the introduction and initiation of five new members into the Belleville Club after a delightful banquet had been enjoyed, served and prepared by the steward and his wife at the Bay of Quinte Country Club. Clarence L. Jewell, Manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce was introduced by Fred Deacon, Fred Bolte, C.N.R. Freight Agent in Belleville by Ross Stiver, Ray Grant, Funeral Director by Joe Imlah, Bill Dougherty by Dr. R. A. Flynn, Bill Doyle by Eddie Logan. Each was given an enthusiastic welcome into the club and the whole were initiated by Cliff Baragar in his usual fine style. Oliver W. Duff, Superintendent of the C.N.R. in the Belleville Division was the sixth member to be initiated but Mr. Duff was called out of town on business and will be introduced to the club at a latter meeting and the members initiated will be introduced to the Belleville members at the same time.

The speaker of the day was introduced by P. C. MacLaurin and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Kiwanian J. O. Herity. Others who spoke briefly at the close of Governor Zeller's address were W. Y. Mills, Jack McComb and Mayor Harry Stewart of Kingston, who incidentally has seven years with 100 per cent attendance. After thanking the club for the fine reception and congratulating the Belleville Club on winning the blue award for achievement during the past year, he stated:

In speaking to a Kiwanis audience such as I see before me this evening, it would seem irrelevant to refer to the real purpose of Kiwanis, which is to put into practical application the six objects to which the organization is dedicated. The objects are incorporated in its very constitution and they do not change. It is to realize these that Kiwanis exists. Among them are the following:

To give primacy to the human and spiritual rather than the material values of life.

To develop by precept and example a more intelligent, aggressive and serviceable citizenship.

WALTER P. ZELLER

Governor of Ontario - Quebec-Maritimes District of Kiwanis International, who addressed combined meeting of district clubs at Bay of Quinte Country Club, Tuesday evening.

These were the particular objects I had in mind in considering the subject about which I have chosen to speak—"Democracy at War."

We are at War:

In the trials and anxieties of these troubled times, the fact which above all others confronts the citizens of Canada is that we are at war. We are blessed in that our country has been spared the horrors of the actual fighting, but we cannot forget that millions of men and women in other lands are offering their lives in defense of our common cause—the freedom of democracy. What I should like to discuss this evening, therefore, are the obligations which as Kiwanians and as citizens of this country we must assume as a consequence.

Future of Humanity in Balance:

However, in the long annals of war there do stand out once and again struggles between rival groups and rival theories, on the outcome of which the future of humanity hangs in the balance. There have been times in history when the destiny of mankind was waiting to be determined by the tide of battle. It would seem that on the 3rd September, 1939, a war of that kind was begun.

Propaganda—plus—Satanic Principles:

But, this is more than a war against aggression. There is more to contend with than the enemy airplane and submarine and other material forces of war. We are also contending with an idea or philosophy—the totalitarian concept of life. There is an even greater danger than that of material destruction. If a building is destroyed, we can rebuild it. But the imagination is staggered by the prospect of what would happen to civilization if the ethics and standards which have sustained it for centuries should finally be sapped and undermined by Nazi propaganda. That is the most dangerous of all the fearful weapons of war used against us and it is used by an enemy, unrestrained by scruples of any kind, dishonest, cunning, arrogant and irresponsible, an enemy who will recognize no decency nor chivalry, who knows no God except an idol of its own making which is force and utter materialism. This is the satanic power with which we must contend, a power of principles which originate in Hell and which must lead to the same place.

Basis of Autocracy:

Stripped of the complications of detail, the fundamental basis of autocracy is exceedingly simple. The essence of its theory may be said to be this: That mankind divides naturally into two classes—the one, small, select, ambitious, aggressive, powerful, consisting of the few who lead. The remainder comprise the large inert mass who are content to be led. What separates these classes is force. Those who deserve to lead will be those who are impudent enough, cunning enough, ruthless enough to seize power. The others who can't do it deserve to be led.

Do not think that for the sake of making my argument easy, I am deliberately presenting the theory of autocracy from a cynical point of view. I am merely stating the avowed philosophy of its own leaders. This is what Hitler in "Mein Kampf" calls—"the eternal privilege of force and strength set up against the mass and dead weight of numbers."

Basis of Democracy:

Stripped of the complications of detail, the fundamental basis of democracy is likewise exceedingly simple. James Russell Lowell, one of the greatest of the succession of great men whom the United States has sent as Ambassadors to the Court of St. James, speaking as the representative of one great democratic state to the people of another, said:

"President Lincoln defined democracy to be 'the government of the people by the people for the people'."

This is a sufficiently compact statement of it as a political arrangement. Theodore Parker said: "Democracy meant, not 'I'm as good as you are,' but, 'You're as good as I am'."

And this is the ethical conception of it, necessary as a complement of the other. But that is idealism, you will say, and this is an only too practical world. I grant it; but I am one of those who believe that the real will never find an unshakeable basis till it rests on the ideal.

Democracy at Disadvantage:

What makes the situation so serious, since the struggle is being fought for the highest of stakes, is this—democracy, by its very nature, starts under an initial disadvantage in war against dictators. A democracy is a society organized for peace. It is so by its very nature. If democracy exists for the sake of the individuals of which it is composed, then the individual will soon make it clear, if consulted, that he wants nothing so much as to be left alone to carry on his business in peace. No wonder that as the breaking point drew near, a continuous stream of pilgrims filed day and night past the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Westminster Abbey with the same prayer on every lip—"Peace in our time, oh Lord."

States organized for peace, dependent upon peace, praying for peace, have at last found themselves unable to avoid a death struggle with an enemy organized for, dependent upon and eager to engage in war.

Autocratic State does not exist for those who Comprise it:

There is no question of the autocratic state existing for the sake of the individuals comprised in it. Such a doctrine is openly despised by the dictators. Hitler himself unashamedly writes in "Mein Kampf":

"And yet, if we ask ourselves what the forces are which make and maintain states, we find that they come under one single denomination—ability and readiness to sacrifice the individual for the sake of the community."

Democracy must meet Challenge:

We may as well face the facts. The democracies are engaged in a titanic struggle, one in which, as events have shown our foe must have an initial advantage—the advantage of a state organized as a single gigantic war machine against a people to whom peace is an ideal, a philosophy and a way of life. The democracies must meet the challenge and must strain every nerve and sinew to do so. Bravery alone will not be enough. Efficiency must be matched by greater efficiency. Resources by greater resources. There are two ways in which this can be done. To put our organization on an equal footing with Germany we must either:

1. Become a dictatorship for the duration of the war—and fight the dictator with his own weapons in the same way as fire fights fire;

2. Or, we may rely upon the loyalty and enthusiasm of each citizen to do on his own initiative and at his own desire what must needs be done to insure victory.

Must Make Necessary Sacrifices:

There is only one other alternative. It is this. The citizens of a democracy must willingly undertake to make the necessary sacrifices which in an autocracy they would be compelled to undergo. The autocrat despises what Hitler has sneeringly termed "the mass and dead weight of numbers." It remains to be seen whether that mass has the energy to set itself in motion and whether the dead weight of numbers can become the living weight that shall crush him like an avalanche. If government of the people, for the people and by the people is something more than a mere slogan, now is the time it must prove itself. The masses in democratic countries, so despised by the dictators, must show that they have the energy and ability to do what is needed of their own volition. Now is the time for a society of free men to demonstrate that it can match the efficiency of the Gestapo-ridden mob who through fear of the storm-trooper and the concentration camp dare not do other than they are told. Now is the testin time of intelligent, aggressive and serviceable citizenship.

Freedom of Speech.

One of these concerns that time-honored democratic right—freedom of speech. That freedom of speech is the cornerstone of our democratic liberties, no one will question. It is a liberty, however, which, in war, must of necessity be seriously curtailed. It may be curtailed in either of two ways, the dictatorial or the democratic. The right to free speech may be taken away from us for the duration of the war, or each and every British subject may, of his own volition, so conduct himself that the exercise of repressive measures will not be necessary. The choice is ours, but restrictions we must have.

Attack By Propaganda.

Hitler has boasted that the real blow which will bring the Allies to their knees will not be the German army, air force or submarines, but German propaganda. The defenses of the Maginot Line will crumble by propaganda boring from within rather than by the German war machine smashing from without. It is German propaganda that will eventually sap and drain away the Allied will to fight.

The answer to this boast is to be found in every conversation on every street corner, in every office, at every supper table, throughout the country until there arises a collective roar of defiance that shall forever silence the mouthings of Herr Goebbels and his entire propaganda office. Let freedom ring.

But there can be no such united cry of defiance if on every corner there stands an amateur strategist who imagines that he could manage the campaign better than the Supreme War Council and the Allied General Staffs combined.

At this point, I am reminded of a list of "don'ts" which Earl Curzon prepared for a British audience in 1914, and which are, I think, equally helpful for us today. They are:

1. Don't think that you know how to wage the campaign and that the War Office or Admiralty does not; accordingly, don't write to the papers telling the Generals and Admirals what they ought to do; but if you have an opinion that you could do it much better, keep that opinion for your own fireside, and tell it to as few people as possible.

2. Don't think that the war does not affect you individually, it touches every man, woman and child in this country.

3. Don't be overjoyed at victory; don't be downhearted at defeat.

4. Don't get nervous because the progress of the war is slow; it can only be slow in these stages.

5. Don't believe all you read in the newspapers, particularly when it comes from Berlin.

6. Don't under-rate the enemy.

7. Don't listen to anyone who cries "halt" before we have carried out the full purpose for which we are fighting.

8. When the war is over, don't throw away its lesson.

Financial Assistance Necessary.

There is another way in which each of us can do his bit. It has been said that three things are essential for warfare—First, money; second, money; and third, money. Canada has three ways of raising it—by inflation, by taxation, by borrowing.

Democracy Must Meet Challenge:

If democracy shall meet the challenge, then each individual citizen must meet the challenge. The challenge is this—that to win the war and preserve his democracy in doing so, he must cooperate completely in doing what his government makes it known must be done, and which in Germany it would have compelled him to do.

Marred in Some Respects

In conclusion, I suggest that victory in this war, as in the general struggle of life, depends primarily upon whether or not we are victorious in the battle with our own weaknesses. We cannot hope to retain absolute devotion to our system in theory if our system in practice is compromised and insincere. And who shall say that it is not marred by grave defects. Who shall deny that selfishness, insincerity and apathy are not sometimes in evidence in our public life. Who shall say that unpatriotic and unchristian sentiments and ideas, which are grist to the mills that grind out enemy propaganda, have not been taught and preached widespread. Who shall say that failure to distinguish between liberty and license has not permitted such propaganda to flourish without serious challenge. The challenge to selfishness, insincerity, apathy and compromise with fundamentals, if it comes, must be the indignant force of righteous public opinion. As each of us is, therefore, a formative part in the collective national voice, which we call public opinion, we shall be doing our bit as a British subject and Kiwanian if in the discharge of our duty as an intelligent, aggressive and serviceable citizen we make known in no uncertain manner the fundamental beliefs and tenets upon which our democratic civilization is founded.

Let us not forget that all-civilization is dependent upon a simple need which no material power can supply. Evil forces challenge us and something more than the sword is needed. Few will deny that we fight for Christendom and if indeed we do, it might be wise to draw upon the Strength from which that Faith derives its supreme and sublime authority. I hope I shall never forget the words of perhaps the first hymn I learned at Sunday School many years ago. I am sure most of you are familiar with them:—

"Ask the Saviour to help you,
Comfort, strengthen and keep you;
He is willing to aid you,
He will carry you through."

"Lover Come Back"

by BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

Sondra wasn't afraid to stay alone at the Place of Trees; but now that she knew the Forest Man wouldn't be along, the solitude took on a deeper, different quality—and her hunger a keener edge. With a determined eye on the cache, she got up and jerked on her dry slacks. But she sat down again, quickly. On the far side of the little meadow, swinging toward her through the trees, she had caught the movement of a figure in yellow oilskins.

Her heart gave a leap of anticipation. He had come back! And the axe and loaded knapsack he carried were evidence that this time he had come to stay. To protect her, in defiance of her orders. Although she knew these woods held nothing to protect her from, she felt a glow of satisfaction.

She turned her back on his approach and pretended to be very busy with her fire. She would treat him coolly at first, because—because he was a Reynall. Then gradually relent, and be nice to him.

But her softened mood changed to chagrin when he tossed his pack down under her tree, not eight feet from where she sat, and, ignoring her presence, opened a cheerful conversation with himself. "Jean, old scout, here's where we pitch camp. 'Neath hidden stars, in solitude unmarred by carping tongues. Ah, wilderness!" Then, alternately whistling and singing, he gathered wood and piled it under the tree—cedar saplings, drift from the beach, dry alder sticks.

So, thought Sondra, he intended to discipline her for telling him to leave her alone! Well, two could play at that game.

She kept her eyes resolutely averted, but her ears took in the little ceremony he made of laying wood on his fire. "Alder for heat," he reminded himself aloud. "Green cedar for fragrance, driftwood to make colored flames. . . . Um-m-m. Smells swell. Like sandalwood."

Despite her turned back, she could not remain unaware of his activities, carried on so near her. The flourish with which he spread a canvas square to sit on; his ostentatious laying-out of food he knew would increase her hunger—bacon, bread, a paper bag of coffee.

As twilight settled over the cove, tantalizing smells of boiling coffee and cooking bacon made her chance a swift look at him. He was rotating above the coals a peeled green alder shoot, on which skewered slices of bacon frizzled enticingly. He gave a loud, anticipatory sniff, and addressed himself enthusiastically: "M'sieu Jean, as a chef de bois you are the feline's whiskers. Behold the pale brown perfection of that bacon—crispy, sizzling, magnifique!"

Sondra stared stonily across the cove, trying to ignore all sounds from the old campfire. But now the selfish monster was noisily pouring his coffee—hot fragrant coffee she craved with all her being. . . . He was crunching bacon—crispy bacon, with bites of bread. . . . Her mouth began to water, and she plunged her mind into the dismal pleasure of calling him "pig" in various languages. Then she saw he had placed within her reach a cup of coffee and a broad leaf, on which he had arranged bacon slices and bread.

Because it took all her will power to keep from accepting his silent offering, she became more incensed than ever. If only she could show him she could provide her own food—when she needed it. Trout? She had no fishing tackle. But—salmon were running. She had watched Indian boys catch them with their hands. Could she catch one, clean it with her trail axe, and somehow broil it in front of her fire?

"I'll do it if it kills me," she determined.

But when she actually stood in the shallow stream, staring down at the struggling scores of salmon bumping past her ankles, she wished to heaven she had never attempted the feat. With his eyes upon her, however, she must go through with it. She must get a fish. . . . That smallish one, now . . . you crouched so . . . you slid your hands gently up along each side, so . . . you hooked your fingers into the red gills, SO!

The next instant she was splashing and staggerin toward the bank, barely restraining a yell for help as the captured salmon whipped like a flail against her straining arms and shoulders.

Sondra, genuinely elated over her ability to snare her dinner, was enjoying the cooking of it and, in a back-handed way, the presence of Reynall. Darkness lay on the surrounding wilderness. There was a primitive snugness, a stimulating if silent intimacy, in the flame-lighted circle of their little world, roofed with green branches and walled with white-blooming elderberry. She felt a positive glow of contentment when the fish, browned to perfection, proved a success.

She had started to eat, using a clean chip for a fork, when Reynall, pretending to pluck a spirited banjo accompaniment from the handle of his axe, broke into the so-called "theme song" of Alaskan fishermen:

"I don't care for a T-tone steak,
Cut from a steer from Texas;
But I like fish! Good old fish!
And I don't give a darn if I do pay taxes . . ."

He sang all the verses, improvised others, and was still at it when she finished her dinner. She longed to laugh, to capitulate and join in his foolery; but he had started this elaborate fiction of being alone, so let him end it by speaking directly to her. It was in a spirit of fun, however, that she hauled out the harmonica to practise "Home, Sweet Home".

He kept a straight face, but began to muse grandiloquently, and loud enough for her to hear: "Women, it hath been said, are the 'speaker sex'. Yet here we are, in a 'Midsummer Night's Dream' setting—barring the rain, of course—and she will have no speech with me at all. 'Tis said, when there's so much I'd fain impart, were we on speaking terms. Little does she dream how adorable, in every way, I do esteem her. . . . In her grandmother's lace gown—all feminine softness and grace. Who then would guess that she could catch a salmon with those little hands? . . . In her—ah—slacks, under a tree, she's boyish and cute as the devil. And I'm completely wild about her sixy little curls, her clear, straight-gazing eyes. Of course I haven't yet acquired a taste for her harmonica-playing, but in time I . . ."

Sondra drowned out the remainder of his soliloquy in a lugubrious, in-and-out chord, keeping her eyes tightly shut to increase her volume. When she opened them again, he was holding toward her a long stick on the end of which dangled her missing ivory bracelet!

She reached for it, forgetting all else in her joyous surprise. "Jean! My good-luck bracelet! Oh, oh, thank you!" She slipped it on her wrist and, holding it against her cheek, turned to meet his eyes. For a moment they looked at each other gravely; then, simultaneously, burst into a laugh.

In an instant he was sitting beside her. "Sondra, that's the first time I've heard you laugh since—since you've grown up. It's the most welcome, most delightful—"

A whistle, prolonged and somehow urgent, ripped into his speech and went echoing through the dark hills. He turned a quick listening ear to the panting exhaust of the approaching boat. "What the devil—why, it's the Baltic. Back two hours ahead of time. There must be something—"

He came to his feet, and Sondra rose also. Together they stood looking through the low fringe of alders at the Baltic's running lights, coming toward them in the darkness. Sondra saw that the boat was surprisingly close, feeling its way around the bar toward the landing. She felt frustrated, depressed. The advent of the Baltic had shattered the only moment of complete accord she and Jean Reynall had known since his return. He must have felt something of like nature, for when he turned to look down at her his eyes were filled with bafflement and regret. "I must go down and see what Shady wants, Sondra. But—I want to see you afterward. Will you wait here for me?"

She nodded. "That's a promise," he said, with his flashing smile. And turning, he headed swiftly for the landing.

Reynall leaped to the Baltic's deck. "What brings you back so early?"

"F-i-s-h!" spelled Shady triumphantly. "Halfway to the Lagoon I met Katlean bringing in the news. Slathers of herring, kid—in Shelikoff Bay, working up toward Shaman's Lagoon. If left unmolested for two more tides they'll all be inside our lagoon and—" He reached out and exuberantly shook Reynall's shoulder—"our pack is positutely and absotively cinched! But—there's a joker."

"Name it."

"Chris Sandvik, in the Tanya. Katlean saw him scouting south along the outer coast towards Shelikoff—that's why he was coming in after you. Chris will spot those herring within the next few hours—maybe he's seen 'em already. You know what that jasper will do then."

"I can guess."

"Guess—nothing! It's a cinch. He'll high-tail into Sitka, take out all the O'Moore boats, load 'em to the gunwales with fish, and then—powie! With his underwater exhausts he'll scatter the rest from here to Japan—and we're left holding an empty sack or the rest of the season."

"Right. We'll have to keep the O'Moore fleet away from Shelikoff for the next twelve hours."

"Just think—we'd have had 'em tied up all night and pretty this minute, if you'd let Miss Jacqueline go ahead with that injunction she slapped on 'em while you were gone. Why in heck you dissolved that, when—"

"That's finished, old man—and I wouldn't change it if I could. We'll find other means o keeping the O'Moore fleet in port until those herring have found their way into our Lagoon."

"Okey-doke, then. Let's get going."

"Not so fast, Shady. Miss O'Moore is here and I must see if she will let us take her back to Sitka, and send someone out or her stranded boat. If not, we'll have to stick around half an hour or so till the tide's in enough to let me pull her cruiser off without tearing out the bottom."

"Wait for her!" Shady exploded. "Look, Jean— I like that peppery little dame myself, but this is no time to play Galahad, even for her. You can bet that Dynamite, the old pirate, won't waste any time playing Alphonse to your Gaston after Chris gets to him with the news. Hustle the gal aboard, fella, and let's get out of—O migosh!"

The exclamation was prompted by two things—the sudden roar of another gasboat that came surging into the cove, and the sight of Sondra O'Moore coming along the landing, so near now that the port light cast a ruby glow on her red-gold hair.

Sondra, from her campfire, had seen the lights of the new arrival the moment they rounded the point. Thinking her grandfather might have sent someone after her, she had gone down to the landing, arriving in time to overhear Shady's speech.

Now she marched up to the Baltic and, ignoring the embarrassed engineer, addressed herself indignantly to Reynall. "You need wait no longer on my account, Captain Reynall. I wouldn't be seen dead on the same boat with this creature who consistently refers to my grandfather as a pirate."

"Oh, Sondra! I'm sorry, I wanted—"

Whatever he wanted was drowned in the shrill whistle of the incoming boat. The stranger was rounding the bar with a speed and precision that bespoke the pilot's complete familiarity with the unmarked channel. Sondra recognized the craft, even before Shady Lane growled: "The Blue Dragon! There's Starbuck and his Jap bodyguard on the orf'ard deck."

Paris, May 23 (AP)—The French armies, effecting what military experts called a "miracle of reorganization", fought today with new fury to reunite their northern and central armies and chop off the long, sharp spearhead which the Germans have driven through Northern France to the sea.

The central French army, using tanks, planes, motorized units and artillery, engaged the Germans in a bitter see-saw battle between Cambrai and Valenciennes, 25 miles apart.

Here, at the base of their long southern salient which extends northwest to the Abbeville coastal region, the Germans attacked in an attempt to make tighter and smaller the sack in which they are trying to hold the Allied forces in Flanders, estimated at between 500,000 and 1,000,000 men.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Hurricane factory! Hurricanes, the most terrific of sea storms, have their beginning in doldrums (the equatorial belt of calms). The conditions for their formation must be just right: warm weather, calm and very moist air, and a rotating earth. The conditions produce rapid convection because the cooler and heavier surrounding air crowds in and causes the warm air to rise. The rapid spinning or whirling motion of this mass of rising air is given by the rotating earth. This is most effective the greater the distance from the equator; therefore, hurricanes are more frequent in late summer or early fall when the doldrums are as far north of the equator as they can get.

GERMANY IS NOW VAST HOSPITAL

17 German Deserters Who Cross Into Yugoslavia, Declare Nazi Losses 'Unimaginable'

Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, May 23 (CP-Havas). — Germany has been transformed into a vast military hospital since the start of hostilities in the west, according to seventeen German deserters, including two officers, who crossed the Yugoslav frontier near Mount Ribur today. The men were disarmed and interned.

The deserters said they had heard that Colonel-General Wilhelm Keitel, Chief of the Staff of the German High Command, had been relieved of command in Belgium and Holland and that the public had been led to believe that he had been wounded in action.

They said the losses suffered by the Nazis in the drive were "unimaginable" and that they were deserting in order to escape being sent to the western front.

London, May 23—(CP)—All British arms factories went on a seven-day week today as the people welcomed drastic legislation giving the Churchill Government power to act by decree in a "win-the-war" dictatorship.

Britons without dissent surrendered centuries-old liberties "for the duration" and fell in line with the move to conscript labor, industry and wealth in a mighty effort to crush Adolf Hitler's Germany.

Winston Churchill, armed with greater power than that of any other Prime Minister in Britain's history, had all the nation's resources at his command.

One Plane Now Better Than Ten in 6 Months

London, May 23 (CP)—Viscount Caldecote, Dominion's Secretary, sent a message to the Dominions today declaring that "the fate of western civilization under God is in the hands of the Allied peoples" and "one airplane immediately is worth ten in 6 months."

The message read:

"The fate of western civilization under God is in the hands of the Allied peoples. I would like to repeat that the importance of every effort to produce supplies was never greater.

"One airplane immediately is worth ten in six months' time. The path to victory must be trodden by an unwearying effort on a scale never before attempted."

'This Battle Will be Decisive, Time Ends For Mock Concentration'

Motorized Veteran Divisions of French and Germans Reported Removed From Swiss Borders

VILLAGES EMPTY

Basel, May 23 (AP)—France and Germany, apparently putting all the strength they can spare into the battle in the west, have withdrawn almost all of their motorized veteran divisions from the Swiss frontier.

Villages on both the German and French sides of the border, packed with troops last week end, are empty.

Advices reaching Switzerland indicated also that the Nazis and the Allies had withdrawn many protecting troops which had checkmated each other in the Westwall-Maginot line regions.

French bombers flown to Morocco and then relieved there by British planes after the Allied retreat from Norway have come back across the Mediterranean to the western front, these reports said.

German air battle formations south of Vienna ready for a possible Balkan drive also have flown westward and north to the Swiss frontier.

"The time has ended for mock concentration now," one spokesman for a belligerent nation said. "This battle will be of decisive character."

A German hospital at Konstanz, on the south side of the Rhine within sight of Swiss territory, was filled with wounded from the western offensive.

French wounded were taken to a military hospital in southern Alsace originally designed to take casualties from the now inactive Rhine front.

Seat of Government Remains in Paris, Decision of French War Cabinet

Paris, May 23—(AP)—An official announcement today said the French war cabinet had agreed that the administrative functions of the government would not be removed from Paris.

After a war cabinet meeting with Premier Reynaud presiding, a communique announced that "no government employees" would leave Paris or the Paris region except those of administrative services which were sent to the interior at the beginning of the war.

It was agreed at the same time that there would be no further removal of civilian populations from any section of France, except on written orders of the high command.

The war cabinet also ordered all industries in the Paris area to continue functioning except for some national defence factories which have been in process of moving for several months.

The war cabinet's new orders apparently were a reflection of renewed confidence in France since General Maxime Weygand took over personal command of the army.

Governments of Britain and Eire 'Alive to Possibilities' of Invasion Of Britain Thru Ireland—Attlee

London, May 23—(CP) — The Governments of Britain and Eire both are "alive to the possibilities" of an invasion of Britain through Ireland, Clement Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, told the House of Commons today.

Mr. Attlee said he could make no statement relating to Britain's own defensive measures and added:

"There can be no question of the British government giving orders to the government of Eire, but all proper consultations have taken place."

Sir Henry Jones, Conservative, said he was not satisfied with Mr. Attlee's reply and would raise the question again.

A committee of members of the Conservative party said the problem was considered urgent because of activities of the outlawed Irish Republican Army and the presence in Eire of a German Legation.

A Dublin source said last night that the government of Eire is determined to prevent any use of its territory as a base for attack on Britain. Coastal defences have been strengthened and the army is at full strength. Reservists released last year have been recalled.

ROGERS PRAISES CANADIAN PEOPLE FOR AID OFFERED

Offers So Numerous Gov't. Unable to Reply Promptly, Says Defence Minister in Radio Broadcast

HELPING BRITAIN

Ottawa, May 23—(CP)—In the dark hours of the present war crisis Canadians have inundated the Dominion Government with offers of assistance and, in the words of Defence Minister Rogers the Canadian response is "the inevitable reaction of a people with pride of race and tradition."

Mr. Rogers praised and thanked the Canadian people for their reaction in a national broadcast last night in which he reviewed the planned speed-up in the war endeavor as given previously in the House of Commons and expressed faith in eventual Allied triumph.

Offers of assistance from individuals and various associations have been so numerous that the Dominion Government was unable in all cases to reply promptly but the minister said he wanted to assure the persons concerned their offers "are profoundly appreciated."

CANADIAN-BUILT DIVE BOMBER COMPLETES TESTS

Has Diving Speed of 572 M.P.H. and Cruising Rate of 258 Miles Per Hour at 9,000 Feet

HEAVILY ARMORED

Montreal, May 23—(CP) — The Gregor FDB-1 dive bomber, newest Canadian-built fighting plane, was flown into Montreal yesterday on its way to Mexico and South America for demonstration purposes.

The 4,200-pound single seater, built at the Fort William plant of the Canadian Car and Foundry, was given its first test at the Lakehead Tuesday and according to pilot Howard P. Klein lived up to all expectations.

In its test, Klein said, the plane attained a diving speed of 572 miles an hour and a climbing rate of 3,500 feet a minute. Its normal cruising rate is 258 M.P.H. at 9,000 feet. It has a range of 600 miles.

Full complement of the bomber consists of 618 pounds of bombs, two synchronized 50-calibre machine guns in the front section and four 30-calibre machine guns fitted in the wings. The plane was designed and constructed by Canadians with the exception of its 750 horsepower engine, imported from the United States.

Fighter Pilots in Continual Patrol of Skies Over France and Belgium Attack Enemy on Every Occasion Though Greatly Outnumbered

6 FAIL TO RETURN

London, May 23—(CP)—British fighters shot down at least 37 German planes yesterday in a series of engagements, the Air Ministry announced today.

The Air Ministry announcement said:

"From dawn to dusk, Royal Air Force fighter pilots yesterday continued the patrol of the skies over the battlefields of northern France and Belgium, destroying more Nazi bombers, fighters and army co-operation aircraft."

"At the end of the day, one fighter group had shot down 27 enemy raiders. Another 10 riddled with machinegun bullets were probably put out of action.

"During the week-end, the same pilots destroyed at least 50 enemy aircraft.

TREACHERY BILL UNDER DISCUSSION BY UPPER HOUSE

House of Lords Expected to Enact Bill Into Law Without Delay

DEATH PENALTY

London, May 23 (CP)—The House of Lords today began discussion of the new Treachery Bill, the main clause of which provides the death penalty for grave cases of espionage and sabotage, after the measure had been adopted by the House of Commons last night.

The bill was submitted for second and third readings by Sir John Anderson, Home Secretary and Minister of Home Security, and was rapidly passed through both stages by the Commons, being adopted without division.

The upper house will discuss the bill tomorrow and is expected to enact it into law without delay.

Under the death penalty clause, Sir John Anderson told Commons, it is an offence for any person, with the intent of helping the enemy, to do or attempt, or conspire with any person to do, any act designed or likely to give assistance to the naval, military or air operations of the enemy forces, or to endanger life.

In each case, Sir John stressed, "the act must have been done with intent to help the enemy."

The Home Secretary explained that the Emergency Powers Defence Bill presented to parliament at the outbreak of the war did not contain a clause providing the death penalty for treasonable acts.

MANUFACTURERS PLAN TO FOLLOW HOWE'S REQUEST

Wire Supply Minister They Will Co-operate in Every Way to Speed Up Wartime Production

WORK DAY AND NIGHT

One Firm Working on Holiday Without Overtime Pay, Says Wire to Minister

Ottawa, May 23—(CP) — Canadian industry engaged in filling war contracts rallied behind the government today to step up production of war materials, planning to follow Supply Minister Howe's request that day and night shifts be started and work continue on holidays and Sundays.

The minister's request was received this morning by heads of heavy industry, ship building and aircraft firms and immediate response was given by manufacturers all over Canada, who wired Mr. Howe that they would comply with the appeal.

The government's move to speed up the industrial war effort coincided with the message that Viscount Caldecote, Dominion Secretary, sent to the Dominions from London stating that the "importance of every effort to produce supplies was never greater" and adding that "one airplane immediately is worth ten in six months' time."

Response Immediate

An official announcement here said that the response to Mr. Howe's appeal "has been immediate and unanimous from all parts of the country. Wires and telephone messages have been received promising the full co-operation

'Now That We Are Frightened We Will be All Right'—Shaw

Irish Wit Says Hitler Made Same Awful Blunder as Kaiser, Frightening the English

HITLER TO 'FIND OUT'

By FRED BACKHOUSE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 23—(CP Cable) — The government's decision to control everything and everybody gained the approval today of the entire press, the man in the street, and George Bernard Shaw.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King's hint that Canada may have a full powers bill too was splashed in afternoon newspapers, leading favorable press comment from many countries.

Most men in the street said the Churchill government's action was a "damn good move—but why wasn't it done before."

Mr. Shaw said now that "we are thoroughly frightened we will be all right."

"Until the English are frightened they never do anything but play cricket, football, hopscotch and tennis," the playwright declared. "The Kaiser made the mistake of frightening the English. Now Hitler has committed the same awful blunder. He is going to find out what we are like when we are frightened."

The conductor on our bus said: "Blimey, when you think of chaps losing their lives for two bob a day nobody can complain if their savings are borrowed. There must be millions of pounds lying idle in this country."

The Evening Standard said: "had this measure been passed nine months ago 500,000, perhaps 1,000,000 lives might have been saved." It recalled the words of John Milton, the great poet and pamphleteer of another commonwealth: "Methinks I see in my mind a noble and puissant nation rousing herself like a strong man after sleep and shaking her invincible locks."

Predicts Airplanes Made in Molds Swiftly and at Low Cost

Van Nuys, Calif., May 23—(AP)—From a United States army aviation expert comes a prediction huge airplane "bakeries"—kneading plastics rather than dough—may open the door to mass production of fighting craft.

Col. Joseph L. Stromme of the Army Air Corps Planning Division witnessed the testing of an all-plastic airplane here yesterday. In an address to 300 spectators he said:

"Aviation heretofore has been individual production. It is almost as if each airplane has been handmade.

"Now we see demonstrated the extreme possibility that airplanes soon may be turned out of molds, swiftly and at comparatively low cost. This may mark the start of an era of mass production of aircraft, military and commercial."

Colonel Stromme said the sleek-bright blue-and gold plastic trainer which test pilot Vance Breese put through its paces was not the first plastic plane.

The manufacturers — the Timm Aircraft Corporation—pronounced the tests "completely satisfactory."

The plane is of thin layers of spruce plies glued together and coated with a phenolic resin plastic liquid, the composition of which is secret.

The material is subjected to extreme pressure in molds, the various fuselage parts pressed together without rivets, bolts or other metal fastenings. The entire structure is then baked in a huge oven for about two hours.

City of Abbeville In German Hands States Churchill

Prime Minister Addressing Parliament Says It is Too Early to Assess the Result of Coastal Fighting but it Carries "Implications of a Very Serious Character"

BRIEF STATEMENT

Churchill Admits Implications of Situation Serious With Germans Threatening to Derange the B.E.F.'s Communications From the Rear in Belgium

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 23 (C.P. Cable) — Abbeville is in German hands and there is fighting in and around Boulogne, Prime Minister Churchill announced in the House of Commons today.

The Prime Minister said it was too early to assess the result of this coastal fighting but it carries with it, he stated, "implications of a very serious character."

Abbeville, at the mouth of the Somme 12 miles from the English Channel, was reached by the Germans Tuesday but French reports yesterday said the Nazi advance guard had been "driven out."

Mr. Churchill said the implications of the situation were serious with the Germans threatening to derange the British Expeditionary Force's communications from the rear in Belgium.

General Maxime Weygand, commander-in-chief for the Allies, Mr. Churchill said, is conducting operations "with a view to restoring

"At one stroke Great Britain has voluntarily surrendered its hard-won liberties for the sake of preserving them.

"No victory won by the Germans has been greater than this demonstration of the spirit of a great democracy in time of peril."

FIRE-CHIEF LYNCH WANTS CARE USED IN FIRE-CRACKER DISPLAY

Friday is "Victoria Day", or, putting it in the language that every school boy understands, it is the Twenty-Fourth of May, a day which, although primarily held for its patriotic importance as the birthday of Queen Victoria, it means to the average school lad an orgy of exploding fire-crackers and a general display of aerial rockets. Such practices add greatly to the fire hazard, point out firemen, especially if such celebrations are held among buildings where the burning rockets are liable to fall on wooden shingles thereby setting them afire. Every twenty-fourth of May brings some fire calls arising out of boys being careless in the use of fire-crackers stated Fire Chief Lynch this morning.

MEETING POSTPONED

Postponement of the emergency meeting called for tonight by officials and members of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, Belleville branch, was announced today by President Fred Wiggins.

The meeting which was to have been an open one, was called for the purpose of registering a protest to the Federal Government in an effort to speed up the country's war activities. In all probability an open meeting will be held by the veterans in the near future at a place to be designated, and at which the general public will be asked to attend.

WARM SHOWERS OF GREAT BENEFIT

The warm showers which descended over this district early this morning will prove of immense benefit to farmers and gardeners. Many of the city residents have just completed planting their gardens and the rain is just what was needed to insure rapid sprouting and early growth, while the pasture and seeding in the country will also benefit greatly.

Coroner's Jury To Probe Death Of Stirling Man

A coroner's jury will probe the circumstances surrounding the death of the late Ira Whitten, resident of Stirling, who died in Belleville General Hospital yesterday from what is believed, complications following a fall that occurred at the Eata Shoe Company in March.

The preliminary hearing was held this morning at the hospital under Chief Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson and County Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan. Sergeant Arthur Booth was in charge of the hearing.

Following identification of the body by Police Constable Sam Eggleton, Stirling, the inquest was adjourned until Friday, June 21st. Coroner Dr. Robertson requested a lengthy adjournment due to the fact that a number of important pathological and other examinations will be held in connection with the case. No other witnesses were called.

The jury is composed of G. H. Carver, foreman, Thomas Harris, Thomas Thorne, R. A. Backus and Oliver Owen.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:-

The inequality and unfairness of the 8 percent War Tax on Hydro bills is quite evident, when the rate each consumer pays, is taken into consideration.

Taking 100 K.W.H. per month as the standard consumption for each to burn, we find:-

The farmer in Prince Edward County pays 6 cents per K.W.H. and $1.11 service charge and his war tax on 100 K.W.H. burnt per month would be $5.10 per year.

In Lennox County it is 5 cents per K.W.H. and the tax is $4.14 per year.

In Hastings County it is 3 1-2 cents per K.W.H. and the tax is $3.35 per year.

In many other parts the rate is 3 cents per K.W.H. and the tax is about $2.95 per year.

In the towns and cities the rate is from one cent to three cents per K.W.H. and no service charge. The consumer there would pay less than $2.00 per year, in war tax.

In Winnipeg the tax would be less than $1.75 per year.

In Nelson B.C., the tax would be less than $1.49 per year.

In Kingston, Napanee, Deseronto, Belleville, Picton or any of the other towns around, the tax would be from $1.40 to $1.82 per year, for each using the 100 K.W.H. per month. Other towns have a similar or lower rate.

Using 100 K.W.H. per month, the consumers in Canada have a spread of from $1.40 to $5.10 in war tax paid, per year, each using the same amount of current.

There is another phase that is harder to understand. The person using a private plant, or, a large industry manufacturing their own current, pays no bills hence no tax.

Several towns have built up huge surpluses and in some of these, the householder goes one, two and even three months, in the year and makes no Hydro payment, hence no tax during that time.

Is it any wonder the over burdened farmer, first paying a large Hydro bill and then being called on to pay a tax out of all proportions to other consumers of electricity, is complaining of the unfairness?

A more fair way would be to make the tax equal on each 100 K.W.H. used, with a consideration to manufacturing plants that are large users of Hydro.

If the tax was imposed at forty cents per 100 K.W.H., with minimum of 30 K.W.H. to burn per month, the tax would be equalized all over Canada and each would pay their just share.

In this way a larger revenue would be secured with no burden to any Hydro user.

Wm. J. Holden,
Deseronto, Ont.

Advocates Formation Local Defence Force

Editor, Ontario Intelligencer,
Dear Sir:—

There seems to be a feeling among a number of residents of this city that something should be done toward the formation of a local defence force. The fantastic happenings on the war front during the past few days would lead one to believe that anything can happen.

We have plenty of able-bodied ex-service men here who have had sufficient rifle training to take their places at once in a force of this kind.

I would suggest a battalion of 600 men at least, to start, officered by veterans and the necessary steps taken to procure arms and ammunition.

Signed
Reg. Hinchey

M. HAWLEY IS GIVEN TWO YEARS

Found Guilty of Theft of Car and Leaving the Scene of an Accident

PICTON—Appearing in magistrate's court here Wednesday afternoon, Marshall Hawley, Bloomfield youth, was found guilty of the theft of a car owned by Finley MacArthur and also of leaving a scene of an accident. He was sentenced to two years in Kingston penitentiary.

That Hawley did not face more serious charges was fortunate as when he drove the stolen car at a fast rate near Bloomfield he grazed Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Purtelle, who were standing beside their car, which had stalled. Mrs. Purtelle was bruised and the car passed over Mr. Purtelle's foot. MacArthur had left the car in front of a home, while he made a brief call. Children advised him it was being stolen and he contacted Picton and Belleville police. The car was later discovered on highway 14 near Crofton, it having turned over in the ditch and was badly damaged. Creighton Lockyer stated he had given the accused a ride to Bloomfield and he was captured by Constable Harry Palen and Deupty Reeve Ralph Warren on the highway, but not until he had attempted to escape across a field. Hawley had previous convictions against him.

SITUATION GRAVE, SAYS SPOKESMAN

Authoritative Source Refers to Nazi Thrust Which Reached Neighborhood of Coast

London, May 23 (CP)—An authoritative spokesman said today that the Allied situation on the western front was "extremely grave."

He said that British communications were in danger.

"There is a gap between the two armies," he said, referring to a German thrust which a British official communique earlier had stated reached "the neighborhood of the coast" of the English Channel.

"German armored forces are cruising about behind (the lines), cutting telephone communications and attacking nodal points."

The military spokesman said he was unable to say whether the Channel ports still were usable by the Allies. However, he added, he was certain they had "not been bombed to blazes."

Cautions Against Intense Optimism

He cautioned the press against sounding "a note of intense optimism" over the Allied counter-attack on the Cambrai area yesterday.

"The situation is grave. You only have to look at the map to see that British communications are in danger," he said.

The spokesman said that, so far as is known in London, the Allies had not as yet started any first class counter-attacks and that he believed that the Germans were in considerable force in the area where the British counter-attacked yesterday.

In that action, he said, the British took 400 German prisoners, killed 300 and destroyed a number of tanks.

"But this counter-attack was only a small part of the picture," he warned.

Full Picture Not Revealed

"The situation is extremely obscure. It is impossible to know with any certainly what is going on."

A B.E.F. communique said:

"The Germans have attacked the Escaut (Scheldt) position at many places without success except near Audenarde, where they forced a crossing.

"In the Arras sector there has been fierce fighting and we have successfully maintained our positions on this flank of the gap between Arras and Bapaume.

"Through this gap the enemy have succeeded in passing armored elements followed by motorized units which have succeeded in reaching the neighborhood of the coast.

"Steps are being taken to guard vital points against these detachments.

"There has been much air activity over northeast France and German bombers and reconnaissance aircraft are being shot down in numbers by anti-aircraft artillery and small arms fire."

EMPIRE DAY AND VICTORIA DAY

It is natural that the celebrations of Empire Day and Victoria Day this year should bear the mark of a deeper earnestness and a finer sense of appreciation on the part of the people than in other years for these days very clearly rivet the thoughts of everyone on the Motherland and the Empire. Boys and girls, men and women realize as never before how much those national and imperial things which they treasure as so peculiarly their own, mean, and they realize that the blessings which Britain and Empire represent are very real and that they in the final test would treasure them more than their own lives.

These two days in May serve to make the children and their elders realize the place which the national aims and ideals count in the life of the people. British liberty is a part of national life and individual life. It has been the greatest political development of the ages of a race which has been peculiarly fitted to be the exponent and home of freedom. May 23rd and May 24th fittingly keep our minds on this great fact.

WARTIME EMERGENCY LAWS PASSED IN BRITAIN

Britain has girded herself as the Government has been invested with powers to conscript wealth and labor as one of the essential steps to fight back at the German threat in this hour of grave peril. Complete control of persons and property has been deemed advisable, the legislation requiring "all persons to place themselves, their services and their property at the disposal of His Majesty for securing the public safety, the maintenance of order, the efficient prosecution of the war and for maintaining essential supplies and services essential to the life of the community."

The new emergency laws grant the government authority to set up production councils to control the manufacture of munitions, ships and aircraft and regulate mining and farming; to impose a 100 per cent. excess profits tax to prevent wartime profiteering; to take over munitions factories; to regulate other business and industry and consolidating where necessary to avoid duplication and conserve labor; to regulate the wages and hours of labor and control banks.

This is wartime emergency meant to achieve the end—that complete organization—to make the greatest contribution through all agencies for the downing of Hitler.

The measure was passed three hours after its introduction. It was not done in panic said the Right Honorable Clement Attlee, but in the national interest. Such could only be possible in wartime and not in time of peace when the fullest discussion would have taken place. But in wartime the people know that anything that will help within the code of honor must be done to achieve the purpose of victory for the Allies.

SUNDAY A DAY OF NATIONAL PRAYER

His Majesty has set next Sunday as a day of national prayer for the nation and Empire, the Allies and the cause in which they are united.

Prayer will nerve the hearts of men and women, for it means the complete surrender to Providence and to right and justice. The human heart in time of war feels the need of the strength which prayer supplies to fight the battle for freedom.

The Empire will pray and on the day of prayer nations of the earth will join for blessing on the arms of the Allied Powers who fight for the freedom of nations and for moral principles.

RESOURCES OF THE SPIRIT OF THE ALLIES

The resources of the spirit of the free democratic peoples of the earth form one of the great treasuries of strength of the Allied nations.

Democracies entered the war at a disadvantage with the enemy who has been regimented for many years. Democracies believe in the rights of peoples to their own development so long as they do not infringe upon the rights of others. Under the result of the influence of the great democracies of Britain and France and of the United States, a great many of smaller nations have been safe as they were developing along democratic lines. Throughout Europe there is a number of these small states which have developed but have not the power to defend themselves. Some hoped against hope that they would be safe and the world has seen the results even in the resisting small democracies when they are faced with the thrust of an enemy which ignores all the laws of right and justice.

Hitler has "cashed in" on his ability to invade the neighboring small nations. But their spirit is with the Allies as are the armies of Norway, Holland and Belgium. In Southeast Europe are anxious /nations which have no love for things Nazi.

The free nations know what a blessing their democracy has been, they have it in their souls and in their body politic, while the enemy has not. He knows only repression and the crushing influence of Nazi-ism.

The Allies know why they fight—it is for justice. That is an inspiring motive against which is the enemy principle of violence and force.

HOME FRONT IN PLANE PRODUCTION

Plane workers in British factories have been asked by the new Minister of Aircraft Production, Lord Beaverbrook, to give up their Saturday and Sunday holidays for the coming two weekends, and are asked to work night and day for full overtime for the present.

That is an evidence of the importance of airplane production in the present struggle in which the mechanized branches of warfare play so gigantic a part.

Britain has gripped the situation with a firm hand and Britishers are a unit in their action for Britain, the Empire and the Allies.

Today the home front and the front line are linked as never before. Time was when war did not affect the home front as much as it does today in a time of totalitarian war. Today war means the complete organization and cooperation of all the forces to battle for the preservation of the ideals and justice among nations.

Stowaways Absorbed Into Canadian Units

London, May 23 (CP Cable) — Canada's latest contribution to the Empire's forces included some Trans-Atlantic hitch-hikers — stowaways whose number the News Chronicle today placed at 22.

They originally were part of the latest Canadian contingent to arrive here, but had been ordered to stay at home for the time being because of lack of accommodation, the newspaper said.

"They were almost heart-broken about it," one of their friends told the newspaper, "and we were not much surprised when after a few days out they were found aboard."

Except for a severe reprimand, however, they escaped the usual fate of stowaways and were absorbed into the unit.

BLASTING GERMAN TANKS

A British gun crew is shown, TOP, loading up an anti-tank gun for rapid transfer to a new position and operating the rapid-firing gun, BOTTOM. Thousands of these guns have been swung into action to stop the drive of German mechanized forces in France and Belgium. ## Under the Nazi Heel

When the Huns Took Denmark

At midnight under a clear, cold sky and a sickle moon Copenhagen looked the gay, peaceful city which it has always been within living memory. The next morning at about six I was awakened by a series of explosions.

My first thought was that floating mines, detached from their moorings by the ice, were being destroyed; my second that a naval engagement was in progress in the Sound. The appearance of a large number of aircraft diving low over the city in groups of three and nine soon put an end to these illusions, but even then I imagined their presence to be no more than a demonstration lending point to demands on the Estonian model which the Germans, I thought, might at that moment be putting to the Dutch Government.

Going down into the streets where the earliest workmen were already trudging stolidly to their work, I found sickly green leaflets scattered by the aircraft which made it abundantly clear how the land lay.

I did not have to go far to discover the real state of affairs. In front of the Osterport station a cordon of troops were turning back all those proceeding towards the centre of the city. Workmen were told to return to their homes and to resume work on the morrow. At the corner of Gronningen and Toldbodgade a machine-gun had been set up, and before my eyes a member of our own Legation was stopped, made to park his car diagonally across the road, searched for arms, and presumably in ignorance of his identity, allowed to proceed towards the Legation.

It did not go so well with our diplomates later, for when I reached the Legation at 9 o'clock I found an armed sentry in front of the door and a big crowd awaiting developments. They had not long to wait, for a few minutes later two open lorries drove up, the great doors opened, and a motley crowd of secretaries, attaches, women typists, and even children were unceremoniously made to climb on to these tumbrils and driven off with loaded guns and fixed bayonets pointed at them in a manner which augured ill for the consequences of any sudden bump in the road.

Gradually the city began to resume its normal appearance, the cycles reappeared, and cars and trams were again on the move. Only isolated machine-gun posts at the most important crossroads, the sentries outside the German headquarters at the Hotel Phoenix, and the coming and going of military cars and despatch riders remained to remind one that Copenhagen, independent since its foundation by Bishop Absalon, had been forced to capitulate to the barbarism of the Teuton.

It was only later that it was possible to piece together what had happened that morning, and even now the sequence of events is uncertain in a number of details. There seems little doubt that Denmark was taken by relatively small numbers of men who relied on the element of surprise and on the unlikelihood that any serious resistance would be offered.

Zero hour seems to have been at or about five o'clock in the morning, when the column reported in South Schleswig crossed the frontier and after ecountering sporadic resistance, pushed rapidly up through Jutland toward the Skaw. Simultaneously landings were made at Middelfardt on the island of Funen near the Little Belt bridge, at Korsor and Nyborg on the Great Belt, and a Gedser, the Danish terminus of the Warnemuende ferry. Meanwhile three small German transports steamed into Copenhagen harbor, and the first aircraft circled over the city. Shore batteries fired warning shots at the aircraft but thereafter were silent, and no resistance was offered as the transports made fast alongside the Langeline and disembarked their troops. These to the number of about 800 made straight for the Kastellet citadel, dynamited the gates, and rounded up all the garrison, who appeared to be taken completely by surprise and offered no resistance.

Detachments were next sent to strategic points in the nearest parts of the town, including the Amalienborg Palace, where King Christian was in residence. Here the guards in their old-time bearskins offered resistance. One of them was killed and two others injured before the King, with characteristic courage, came out and ordered the cease fire in order to stop unnecessary carnage. The German troops appeared highly nervous and excitable, and there were a number of quite unnecessary discharges, in one of which a woman had her leg blown off by a hand grenade.

Immediately before these operations had begun the German Minister called on the Danish Minister for Foreign Affairs and informed him of the German intentions. The negotiations, in which King Christian took part, lasted throughout the greater part of the morning, and resulted in Danish acceptance under protest of the terms forced upon them. By the afternoon the streets were plastered with copies of the German proclamation and of King Christian's dignified appeal to his people ending with the moving words "Gud bevare Danmark." (God preserve Denmark).

Meanwhile an unprecedented violation of diplomatic usage had taken place at the British Legation. So far as the story can be pieced together from the accounts of different members of the mission, it runs as follows:

When the staff realized what was happening they all tried to reach the Legation. Only those who were not held up by the cordons at the Osterport Bridge were successful and at once set aboout the tasks which devolved on them in such an emergency. Telephonic communication was difficult and irregular, but a message was conveyed to the American Minister, Mr. Ray Atherton, entrusting him with the charge of British interests and the protection of all British persons and property, including the legation building.

Soon afterwards eight German sentries were placed on the door and no one was allowed in or out. A few minutes later an attempt was made to enter the Legation for purposes of "control" and a junior secretary went to parley with the officer in charge. He explained that the Legation was under American protection, that the troops had no right to enter and that if they did so it was under protest. This produced an outburst of threats and shouting, and the young secretary was placed in handcuffs and kept prisoner in the porte-cochere.

The Germans later complained that he had been "unfriendly" to them. At all events he had saved the best part of an hour, for the officer waited for reinforcements, and it was not until after nine that the Legation was violently broken into and all its inmates — men, women, and children—rounded up in the drawing-room, placed under arrest, and searched for arms. All the staff are agreed that the soldiers gave the impression of expecting resistance, and occupied the building according to the rules of house-to-house fighting.

Including the Minister and Mrs. Howard Smith, who was not even allowed time to put a hat on, the party were now marched downstairs, where they were joined by those who had not been able to obtain admittance. Here they were forced at the point of the bayonet to clamber on to two open lorries, the property of the Tuborg breweries, in which, with the exception of the Minister and his wife, who were taken in a car, they were driven under guard through the streets to the Kastellef citadel. Here they were drawn up, in line, their papers having been taken from them, and placed under guard in the barracks, where they were detained for from three to eight hours before being released with profuse apologies.

Meanwhile the Legation was searched, thus revealing the true object of the outrage, the only consolation to its occupants being that the search must have proved fruitless.

On that fatal Tuesday Copenhagen presented an extraordinary sight. It was a brilliant day (Hitler weather!), and the concourse of cyclists and pedestrians had never been thicker. They thronged the streets, staring their fill at the German troops, surrounding the machine-gun posts and chattering inquisitively to the invaders, who, to give them their due, appeared to be behaving in a correct and courteous fashion.

Yet it would be unjust to suggest that this betokened indifference on the part of the Danes to the loss of their independence. The Copenhagener is an inveterate flameur, and it would take the crack of doom to keep him off the streets if there is any new sight to be seen. By the next day the crowd's demeanor had changed, and the change continued as the week progressed.

If there were few outward indications of indignation, sadness and depression were apparent on all sides. A glum expression appeared on the usually impassive, contented faces of the crowd, while within four walls Danes gave vent to the whole range of their feelings from misery and despair to open shame that not even a token resistance had been offered.

"We are utterly disgraced," a spirited Danish girl said to me on the Wednesday morning. "It is all the fault of this pusillanimous government which has disarmed us in the last 20 years. Now the Germans will force us to fight against our English friends, and our nation will be wiped out."

Above all else, my conversations with innumerable friends betrayed an intense anxiety to know what Britain would think. "Will our British friends think that we ought to have fought and that we are irremediably disgraced?" they asked "Will they now write us off and abandon us to our German enemies?"

For the present the majority of Danes may be expected to swallow their feelings and make the best of a bad job. But they have a traditional hatred of Prussianism and an inherent dislike of interference.

Slow to wrath though these easy-going, easy-living folk may be, there is nothing in the Nazi record so far to suggest that it will be successful in conciliating the Dane in the long run. Denmark was defended with courage and tenacity against overwhelming odds in 1864, and if there have been some signs of spiritual decay since then adversity is likely to reawaken the old spirit, and a struggle no less dour, even if less covert, maye be expected in the land of the Vikings and Holger Dansker.—London Times Special Writer.

New Allied Chief

General Marie-Gustave Gamelin's displacement from the command of all the Allied land forces will not cause any great surprise. The event was forecast by the French Prime Minister, M. Paul Reynaud, in the Chamber of Deputies on Thursday last, when he said that France might be compelled to "change men and methods" to meet the German peril. A change in the high command seemed inevitable in sequence to the turn of land operations, particularly in the region of the Maginot line's prolongation northwestward, where the Germans drove across the Meuse River to Sedan and beyond, to create the peril of which Premier Reynaud spoke.

General Gamelin is replaced by General Maxime Weygand, Allied Army Commander in the Near East, the significance of whose presence in Paris in the last few days has been noted in the news dispatches. General Weygand was the right-hand man of the late General Foch, who led the Allies to final victory over the Germans in the war of 1914-18. That it may be the experience of General Weygand to make history repeat itself, and that the laurels of victory shall be his in full measure, will be the devout hope of the democracies. Reinforcing that hope is the fact that the military talents of another high French officer who glory and renown in the World War, Marshal Henri Philippe Petain, the saviour of Verdun, are now at the disposal of the French War ministry and the Allied forces. The new methods and new men of which Premier Reynaud spoke last week have been brought to bear in this instance by calling Marshal Petain into the Cabinet as Vice-President of the Council, with the special task of advising the War Minister.—Montreal Gazette.

Stomach Cancer—Early Signs

As it is known that early treatment of cancer will save life, physicians everywhere are advising patients with symptoms in any way resembling cancer, to report immediately to their physician for the tests of cancer that now can be made.

In cancer of the mouth and skin where any sore or growth can be seen the cancer can be removed by use of Xrays, radium, or by operation. It is in places such as the stomach that symptoms of cancer may be present which the patient does not consider serious enough to even report to his physician.

What should make men and women past thirty years of age give early thought to stomach symptoms is a study of the early symptoms of cancer of the stomach in 251 cases made by Dr. Sara M. Jordan, Boston, in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Dr. Jordon points out that when the general practitioner or the specialist in diseases of the stomach and intestine are consulted, they are in a position to tell the patient whether or not cancer of the stomach is present by the use of Xrays, test meals, and the gastroscope which enables the physician to see the inside of the stomach. The whole trouble is that patients will not consult their physician when the first signs of stomach cancer occur.

What are the first signs of cancer of the stomach? Dr. Jordan's investigations show that the first signs in the great majority of cases are:

(a) pain or distress in stomach region or in upper right side of abdomen;
(b) loss of appetite,
(c) loss of weight and strength,
(d) vomiting.

In what type of patient does cancer of the stomach occur?

The investigation showed that all persons over 30, men twice as often as women, should be suspected of cancer of the stomach when the above symptoms are present. It would thus appear that women seek relief from their symptoms earlier than men.

The simple and commonsense suggestions made by Dr. Jordan are:

1. Cancer of the stomach should be suspected in any patient over 30 complaining of "any digestive symptom, but especially abdominal distress or less of appetite, weight, and strength.

2. Middle-aged patients who complain of tiredness or anaemia may be early cancer cases.

3. Patients who are known to lack sufficient hydrocholoric acid in their stomach digestive juice and patients with healed stomach ulcers, should be carefully watched.

4.— Patients should be warned of the need of early and frequent examination if unexplained symptoms continue for any time.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

French counter-attacks yesterday won back the towns of Arras and Abbeville from German mechanized forces and upon the ability of the French army to push home such attacks in widely separated areas, largely rests the outcome of the present battle.

There can be little doubt that the far extended lines of the German forces are vulnerable. But a major part of the German plan is the demoralization of the enemy by fire, explosives and terror. The advance units of motorcyclists and parachute troops perform this function.

By terror they seek to stampede the civilian population so that refugees in thousands take to the roads and slow down military movements. By fire and explosive they seek to destroy communications, roads and bridges. This makes maintenance of contact between headquarters and units in the field difficult.

The German forces have not yet clashed with the main Allied forces and their aim apparently is to avoid such a clash, at least until they can bring up infantry and artillery in large numbers to consolidate positions in the recently-won salient.

The immediate task of the new commander-in-chief, General Weygand, would appear to be the delivery of counter-attacks in force before the Germans are able to so consolidate their positions.

Company Three Guides Entertain Mothers at Banquet, Closing Season

A year marked with splendid achievement by the members of Company Three, Belleville Girl Guides, was brought to a close last evening when badges and awards of merit were presented at an enjoyable Mother - and - Daughter banquet held in the Y.M.C.A. The lecture room presented a most artistic appearance with its decorations of red, white and blue carried out in streamers and bunting. The guest table was centred with the doll figure of a Girl Guide flanked with flag-decorated tapers, while the centre table had as its decorative motif the insignia of the Brownies.

The welcome of the Guides was graciously extended by the captain, Miss Jean Dickens, who acted as chairman for the interesting program which followed the delicious banquet. Miss Dickens introduced the guests of the evening, the divisional commissioner, Mrs. M. E. Branscombe, the district commissioner, Mrs. Leo B. Riggs, the deputy commissioner, Mrs. H. W. Ackerman, Miss Hilda Collier, who acted as camp nurse for the Guides for 13 years, Dr. Noble, Miss Bush, and the captains and lieutenants of the other Belleville companies.

Addressed on Guiding

Mrs. Riggs addressed the girls on the "Importance of Guiding" and in the course of her inspiring talk discussed the latest Guide project, the selling of doughnuts to aid in the purchase of an ambulance and motor boat as their part in the war efforts of the Empire. Mrs. Branscombe read a beautiful story on "Thoughts," urging Guides to guard their thoughts, to be strong in the war within themselves, that they may remain true in thought and deed to the high ideals to which they as Guides subscribed.

A piano solo was played in fine style by Louise Pattrick after which Guides from the O.S.D. Company, the only deaf company, entertained the guests with clever tap dances.

Presentation of Guide badges then took place, Lieutenant Betty Holland presenting thirty service stars. Dorothy Blow and Rita Webster were presented with Knitters' Badges by Mrs. Ackerman, who also presented a Gymnasts' badge to Mary Flintoff, Child Nurse Badge to Reta Webster, Book Lovers' and Homemakers' badges to Mary and Margaret Aman.

Visitors listened with awed respect to the list of accomplishments the Guides must master before earning their second class badge, and looked upon the winners with new admiration. Lieutenant Betty Holland presented these awards to Lois Flindall, Shirley Meagher, Muriel Rollins and Eileen Jeffs. The coveted all round cords were won by Mary and Margaret Aman.

Miss Riggs Gives Two Solos

Miss Leona Riggs delighted the gathering with two solos "May Day Carol" and "At Parting," Mr. Alec Gordon acting as accompanist.

The eagerly awaited announcement of the year's winning patrol was made, Honesty patrol winning after very close competition. Their leader, Mary Flintoff was presented with a wrist compass and the Guides with frying pans. The patrol coming in second, with only six points less than the leading group, was the Cornflower patrol, whose leader, Pat Holland, was presented with a jack knife and the Guides with notebooks. The prize of a notebook for the best posture was awarded Ruth Blatherwick.

Lieutenant Betty Holland expressed appreciation to all those who helped make the banquet a success. The support and co-operation the mothers displayed in coming to the banquet would inspire the Guides to new efforts to attain the ends for which they worked. The occasion would stand out in each Guide's book of memories, upon which she would look back with happiness and pride.

Mrs. Ackerman on behalf of the mothers thanked the girls for the evening's entertainment, and the artists for their part in the happy occasion.

King George Home-School Assoc. Has Regular Meeting

The regular monthly meeting of the King George Home and School Association was held Wednesday evening, May 15th., in the Teachers' room with Mrs. A. Greenwood in the chair. The meeting opened with "O Canada" followed by the Lord's Prayer. After the reports were given from the various committees and the business part of the meeting ended Mrs. R. Ashbury introduced the guest speaker, Rev. W. J. Walker, the minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church. His subject was World Fellowship. In spite of world conditions the speaker stated the thought of how to obtain world fellowship should not be postponed. The prime factor in the development of a perfect character is religious education.

As an example of self sacrifice the speaker viewed the past years in the life of Albert Sweitcher, a German character. He showed an aptitude for music and at an early age studied the pipe organ. At this time he wrote books for the organ and revived editions of Johann Sebastian Bach. While playing concerts throughout the country he was paid much money. Later Mr. Sweitcher studied theology to be a minister and published text books some of which are used today in theological seminaries. After his marriage to a nurse they both graduated as medical doctors. Finally he disappeared and no word was heard from him. When discovered he was serving as a missionary in some far station in Africa. During the World War he was interned.

In closing Mr. Walker stated that World fellowship can only be obtained when the acquisitive spirit is burned out, and hoped that examples of men like Albert Switzer would be of great benefit to the generation of coming men and women.

On behalf of the Club Mrs. W. Harrison expressed a vote of thanks which was seconded by Mrs. H. Quinsey. A piano solo by June Wardle brought the program to a close. The meeting closed with the National Anthem followed by a social half hour.

The Stars Say

For Friday, May 24

STEADY PROGRESS may be looked for in this day, judging by the lunar aspects, which favor the stability of the fortunes and the happy culminations of social, domestic or romantic hopes and desires. While there may be much stirring in the personal affiliations, with a caste of the perplexing, intriguing and perhaps mysterious, yet the solid status of affairs are to be enhanced by industry, diligence sound judgment and perhaps rewards of labor and fidelity in responsible trusts.

Those whose birthday it is may look with high hopes and confidence for a year in which solid and enduring rewards for labor, steadfastness and loyalty may be visible.

A child born on this day may be endowed with all the solid qualities for success and satisfaction enhanced and enriched by a gracious gift for social, domentic and emotional balance and happiness.

For Saturday, May 25

AN EVENTFUL and memorable day, with breathtaking occurrences of insistent and far-reaching influence is presaged from the lunar and mutual planetary aspects. The unusual, unforeseen and unpredictable may be looked for—these probably uprooting, upsetting and drastically disturbing, not without much benefit and profit; but the gains mature because of shrewd insight and clever manipulation of subtle and singularly obscure and challenging factors. It may take intrigue or secret understanding, with advice from elders, to profit.

Those whose birthday it is are at the brink of a surprising year, of rapid and swiftchanging events, with radical and far-reaching effect of the fortunes and future happiness. Dramatic adventures and drastic upheavals may open up a world of fresh thrills and spectacular achievements, lucrative and gratifying because of subtle and intriguing situations. Wise counsel of elders may assist in these dynamic and singular excursions.

A child born on this day may be talented in some extraordinarily and spectacular way, original, independent, unorthodox and audacious and at the same time crafty, intuitive, imaginative and of far vision. It may explore unknown fields in art, drama, science, romance, religion or mysticism.

Improved Reading Gains School Success

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

THE CHILD above the second or third grade who lags or fails at school usually lags or fails in reading; the farther up the grades he goes, the more hampered he is. This is because practically all his lessons are reading lessons—history, civics, geography, science, even mathematics. An occasional poor reader may hobble along in the primary grades but grow hopeless after a few years unless he improves greatly in reading skill. Some, indeed, may read aloud well without knowing what they read.

A mother writes of her daughter: "In the first four grades she was an average student. Since then she has shown less interest and she is failing now in the seventh grade. . She doesn't care to read. She reads well but is not able to tell what she has read unless it is a simple article or story . . ."

Points Out Cue

I answered her personally about as follows:

"In as much as she can read well for meaning when the story or article is very simple and interesting, you have the cue. Find books and magazines, especially children's magazines, in the library which will appeal to her. Encourage her to search for such materials herself. As she reads for pleasure at home, from any source, show delight when she reads certain parts aloud to you. Be sure then to give her your whole attention.

"Help her to feel it proper to read from easy sources of third or fourth grade level. If she is to gain skill at reading, what she reads will have to be easy enough for her to read well. Also have her vision tested.

"It would be excellent if this girl could be induced to read to a young child under six to amuse him. In doing so she would naturally read from things very easy and, while she supposes she is reading only to entertain this little child, she also would be helping herself learn to read better."

Interested in Magic

Girls as well as boys are interested in magic and there are some good and easy books on this subject. In order to do the trick one must work out the directions—superb motivation.

Discussing this sort of poor reader before a group of teachers recently I was asked the question, "What about the child's regular school work in the meanwhile?"

I replied that she should be left to do the best she can. At the present rate she isn't getting it anyway. Her parents should be induced to read to her at home from her regular texts to help her get the meaning and put it into her own words. By and by she will gain enough skill at reading to be able to do, gradually more and more of this regular work herself.

I should like to think of hundreds and hundreds of fathers and mothers reading to their sons and daughters in upper grades and high school from their hard text books with a view to helping them master the content and keep up their courage to carry on. Think of the benefits of such comradeship — youth and age learning together!

Solving Parent Problems

Q.—My child, 14 months old, persists in sucking the thumb. Please help me.

A.—Have your doctor check the child's diet. Strive for more serenity in yourself and the family. Never jerk out the child's hand nor slap it. Don't scold or even look or breathe disapproval. Act as if you did not see it for two weeks.

Behavior in Skirts

By HELEN FOLLETT

SHORT SKIRTS make a woman feel young and gay, but long draperies are more flattering to the figure. Knee cap kilts are as cute as a baby's bonnet when the limbses are straight and slender. But the plump darling with calves that are fatted should avoid them. Or, if she must be kilted, let her buy a child's jumping rope and skip off the adipose tissue. It can be done, not in a day or a week, but 15 minutes of fast leaping about each day will do the slithering act in course of time.

It is surprising how clothes affect behavior. A girl in shorts or slack will sit on tables, be a gamin. Let her don the ankle-length robe and she is interested in being graceful, desires to wear her dry goods beautifully. The present arrangement is thoroughly satisfactory. Skip around in short duds during the day, be queenly when you put on the glad attire and sail forth for the gorgeous, merry evening.

The long skirt has made woman mindful of her back, critical of the lines that sweep downward from the ribs, to waist, to hips, to thigh, lines that should be snappy if the little model is to appear at its best. You get them by pulling yourself up tall, holding in your tummer-tum, tucking back your hips, balancing your head. Which is not as big an order as it sounds.

If eyelashes call for the help of mascara, put on eye shadows first. Begin the application close to your winkers, work upward, stop well aoaft the eyebrow. There must be a natural tone between shadow and eyebrow.

The trick is to know where to cease shadowing. The line should be long and narrow if it is to flatter the eyes and bring out the color. It should not extend beyond the eyebrow.

Unless a girl is expert at make-up she'd better not monkey with shadows. They must be faint, they must be perfectly blended. A neat job puts the cream on the beauty cake; a bad one is just a mess.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

How To Answer An Informal Wedding Invitation

Since an invitation should be acknowledged with a reply "in kind" with the invitation, we write a note of acceptance or regret when we receive a note from the bride's mother or from the bride inviting us to the wedding.

This informal invitation is, of course, particularly personal, it pays compliment to us as being close in family of friendship relationship.

We should answer this invitation promptly, since this courtesy will be of help to the hostess in making her plans for a specified number of guests. Our reply should be written on our very best letter-paper, in our very best style.

If the note of invitation is from the bride's mother, and we are accepting, we might write:

Dear Mrs. Allen,

I was so happy to receive your invitation to the wedding of Dorothy and Kenneth, and I shall be delighted to come. I will be at the United Church Chapel on Tuesday, June fourth at four for the ceremony, and afterward at your home, to wish happiness and good fortune to the bride and groom. Thank you so much for inviting me.

Affectionately,
Nancy Wood

Let's say that the bride has written the invitations, and that we must regret. Then our note might read:

Dorothy dear,

Bob and I are heart-broken that we won't be able to be presnt at your wedding to Kenneth on June fourth. Bob's mother is ill, and we are leaving today for San Antonio.

We had looked forward to being with you when you two dear friends were being married. But we'll be there in spirit at four o'clock on that great day, and sending you our dearest wishes for happiness and good fortune always.

Our love to you and Kenneth and to your mother and father.

Affectionately,
Mary

1st Anniversary

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please tell me what would be a proper gift for a first wedding anniversary?

S. V.

If there is to be a special kind of party to celebrate this anniversary, with a chosen symbol, your gift would be something made of that symbol. Usually the gifts brought to the first wedding anniversary party are of paper, though sometimes of cotton—authorities differ about this, and the gifts would have to be according to the kind decided on.

If there is to be no special kind of party, then you may properly choose any kind of gift that you sense will be welcomed

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Idleness After Marriage Breeds Discontent

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"In the four months of my marriage, I have often realized the wisdom of my old nurse, a remarkable Negro philosopher. She used to say, 'Honey, marriage is one thing, co'ting is another.'

"From this you will realize that I come below the Mason and Dixon Line, where we're still foolish enough to believe in chivalry and that a woman should look up to her husband and be protected.

"Naturally, I was amazed when my husband, after two months of marriage, suggested that I take a position in an office so that we could complete the payments on a home we are buying. He said, as we had no immediate prospect of any children, he thought it would be a good thing, the honeymoon being over, if I took a job.

"I suppose I was silly, but this suggestion almost broke my heart. I had expected to remain in our own home always and while the little three-room apartment we have gave me a good deal of leisure, I never imagined that my husband would suggest my going out to work.

"I really am ashamed to write to the folks at home and tell them that I have taken this job. What do you think I should do? Pride keeps me from going back home, and yet the idea of going to work in an office as a file clerk hurts more than I can express.

Regretful."

I'm not going to answer your letter, my dear, by telling you of the millions of married women who now work. I understand perfectly your reaction about taking that job. You see, I know the South, and a good many girls of your background would feel as you do about helping to bring home the bacon.

But please let me remind you that in these days of grim economic struggle many young married women do take jobs until the stork favors them with a visit.

As you say, your little three-room apartment gave you a good deal of leisure. Why shouldn't that leisure be turned to profit? If you spend your spare time playing bridge, going to the movies, window shopping, with an occasional cocktail party as a red-letter day, it's likely you would soon grow discontented and look for crumpled rose-leaves.

Many women who lead that sort of life write me letters full of discontent, without ever stopping to think that the reason they're unhappy is because time hangs too heavily on their hands. You would certainly enjoy that little home more if your industry helped to pay for it. And, of course, your husband would establish joint ownership in recognition of what you've done.

It has become almost a platitude that the most difficult time of married life is during those first years of adjustment. Women for some unaccountable reason expect the honeymoon to continue forever. A job is really a fine way to get over this ultraromantic period and realize how fine is the comradeship—the foundation stone of marriage—that comes after those first trying years. If you went back home, you'd find your position much more humiliating than if you stayed, took the job for at least a year or two, and helped pay for the new home. This is my candid opinion.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

"Birth Control"

Raising a large family seems to be becoming more of a lost art every year. Families of eight, ten or twelve children are exceptional today in many sections, whereas they used to be almost a rule everywhere. Today their is a surprising number of childless marriages, and a great many more couples with only one child.

When I was a boy, large families were common and childless couples were considered very unfortunate. Couples married in their teens and began having children immediately. There were also social and economic forces at work encouraging them to have babies frequently. More lived on farms or in comparative isolation from other humans and family life comprised most of the social existence. Many children were needed for the work of maintaining and supporting the home and family. Children in those days meant the only security in old age to parents.

In my own family there were five girls and two boys but it was considered small. Neighbors all around us had families of a dozen or so. I know some of the children of those large families. They moved to the city, and now they have one or perhaps two children.

It is my observation that the number of the childless and one-child homes isn't as much the result of deliberate choice as seemed to be popularly supposed. No, there is a more disturbing reason. In these times both men and women tend to marry later, or if they marry early, to wait for several years before beginning parentage. With the result that when they do seek to start families, they all too frequently find that due to the harried, high tension lives that many must lead today, their ability to reproduce has been lost or impaired.

Commentators have blamed divorce, a looser morality and an increased use of contraceptives for the steady decline in the birthrate. Personally, I think these factors have been over-emphasized. When I am in bigger cities and see how many women are employed in stores, factories and offices, I don't wonder that many of them never have babies. They work all day in tense surroundings. They travel wearying distances in trains or buses to and from work. At night they are tired, perhaps nerve-wracked, worried. The need they feel for some form of release causes many to smoke too much, drink too much alcohol and eat too much or the wrong kinds of things. In brief, they are made unhappy by unnatural, unhealthy lives for which they were never intended. The life led by many women who don't work isn't much different. Is it any wonder that they become sterile when this kind of existence is prolonged for years?

Men are similiarly affected by corresponding conditions today. The number of both men and women with ailments of the heart, the kidneys and nerves and with mental diseases is larger. These conditions affect to some extent the ability to reproduce, for when part of the body deteriorates or doesn't function properly, the whole body suffers.

An old professor of mine at medical school had a memorable phrase he applied to childless couples. He was a religious man and he would shake his head and say: "They have sinned their day of Grace away."

I do not pass judgment on them. The fault is not entirely their own. Young men and women are under pressure today to continue their educations longer, there are fewer opportunities for youths to achieve an economic condition permitting establishment of a family, and they feel the necessity of reaching a greater degree of economic security than their fathers and grandfathers usually had when they set up homes, before becoming parents. And, as indicated above, when they are at last ready to have children, it frequently happens that their ability to reproduce has waned or become impaired.

Fortunately, many of these childless couples wanting babies can often be helped by modern medical knowledge. In many cases a minor operation, a new living regimen or some other treatment can remove the cause that is preventing conception.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

Sondra knew she should be feeling joyous relief at the arrival of Kemp, undoubtedly come to take care of her. But she didn't. And because she didn't, she became even more vexed with herself, and Reynall, and the whole universe. She held her small figure very still in the shadow of the Baltic, while the Dragon approached. As it came to a boiling stop on the far side of Reynall's boat, Kemp leaped to the Baltic's deck and, with Ikeda at his shoulder, faced Reynall in front of the pilothouse.

"You, Reynall! What have you done with Miss O'Moore?" The arrogant challenge in his tones, the tense manner in which his feet appeared to grip the deck, were utterly foreign to the mild-mannered Kemp that Sondra knew.

In the following moments of silence, Ikeda took one catlike step aside. The very stillness of Reynall's tall figure told of leashed forces assembling for some swift, destructive release. Sondra, moving instinctively to prevent violence, sprang from the shadows. "Kemp!" she called breathlessly. "Here I am."

He was instantly beside her on the landing, his hands gripping her shoulders, his voice husky with emotion. "Sondra! Darling! Are you all right? I've been half-crazy, thinking of you out somewhere, alone in the night. Sweetheart, I—I—"

"Don't be absurd, Kemp." She twisted free of his hands and managed a laugh to temper the sharpness she could not keep out of her voice. "Of course I'm all right."

Kemp's anxiety, his tumbled endearments only added to her mounting vexation. She fancied she could feel the amused gaze of Reynall on the two of them, and was not surprised when she heard his cool, sardonic voice beside her, saying: "And she hasn't been alone, old chap, really! I've been in practically constant attendance."

"Which is no guarantee of her safety." Kemp, narrow-eyed, swung to face the other. "If I thought you had so much as—"

"Your solicitude is touching, Starbuck," Reynall laughed. "But don't you think you're carrying it a bit too far, since it's neither required nor requested?"

Kemp retorted, stiffly and distinctly, "I'm naturally concerned about the safety of the irl I expect to make my wife."

"I . . . see." Sondra caught a brief, startled widening of his eyes; then they were crinkling again at the corners in one of his flashing smiles. "Expectations are pleasant things, old man — but sometimes devilish tricky in the matter of fulfillment."

Disdaining reply, Kemp turned again to Sondra. "You're sure you're all right, darling? I'd never forgive myself if—"

"Oh, for heaven's sake, Kemp!" She stamped her foot. "Stop acting like a doting grandmother! I can take care of myself by myself, anywhere in this country."

Reynall leaned toward Kemp with an exaggerated confidential air. "She's always been like that, Starbuck. A sort of fixation against being rescued." His indulgent, humorous tone subtly conveyed a lifetime of intimate acquaintance with Sondra's likes and dislikes. It angered Kemp, as it was designed to do. But he merely said in a taut voice, "I'll render Miss O'Moore any service she may require. We'll not detain you longer, Reynall."

"An amazingly kind thought, old bean. But I think Sondra can be trusted to make known her desires, without an interpreter."

Looking from one man to the other, Sondra all at once felt thoroughly fed-up with an impossible situation. Both stood there in the light from the Baltic's wheelhouse, silently awaiting her word. She hardly knew which made her the more furious — Kemp's belligerent solicitude, or Reynall's bland assurance that he knew what her choice must be, if truthfully expressed. But it was the taunting knowledge that his assurance was justified—despite all he had done against the house of O'Moore—that suddenly tipped the scale against Reynall.

She slipped one hand under Kemp's arm, and conscious that she was behaving badly, said in a cool, crisp voice "Captain Reynall I seem to recall telling you once this evening to leave me alone and go about your own business. I'll repeat that now, in a manner better suited to your comprehension, perhaps. . . . Scram!"

"The queen has spoken!" He stepped at once to the Baltic's deck, flipped loose the line that held the boat to the landing, and called to Shady, already at the wheel, "The marines have landed and we're free to go lug. Back her out!" But before the vessel began to move, he turned to look straight at Sondra, smiling a little wistfully. "Goodbye . . . Sunny," he called softly.

It caught her unawares, that childhood name which no one else had ever called her, and made her feel closer to him than to anyone else in the world. She fought against the spell of it, her wide gaze on the disappearing Baltic. Kemp's voice came to her as from a great distance, but his words meant nothing; for with heart and mind she was following after Jean Reynall . . . and hating him, with tears in her eyes, because—because she couldn't hate him.

Sondra and Kemp went up to the cedar tree, to wait by the campfire until the tide should float the Spindrift. . .

Sondra was standing beyond the fountain of sparks, watching the dim headland where the Baltic's masthead light was just slipping from view.

"Sondra! Stop it!" Kemp was beside her in an instant, roughly twirling her toward him. You're looking after that fellow as if—as if you belonged to him!"

"I am not! What if I am?" she blazed. "I certainly don't belong to you, and I won't have you acting as if I did."

"You do belong to me!" His hands shot out and fastened savagely on her shoulders. Unable to move, she looked up into his burning eyes, reading there something strangely thwarted and despairing. Her arms grew numb under his grip, while he went on pouring out words — wild, reckless, passionate words that ended with, "They can have everything else, but you—you're mine! All mine—and no one can take you from me! Not even the—"

He stopped as if a silencing hand had been clamped roughly over his mouth. His hands slid limply from her shoulders, and the unnatural brightness in his eyes gave way to that haunted, hopeless look she had seen there once before.

"Sondra . . ." In the half-whispered sound there was such an anguish of supplication, of yearning regret, that her heart warmed to him in a flood of compassion.

Impulsively, she caught his hand in both of hers. "Kemp, my dear, what's wrong with you tonight? Are you in trouble of some kind? Tell me."

In his weary ravaged face she sensed a stiffening of reserve; felt a stillness growing within him. By a brief flare from the campfire she saw that look of guarded watchfulness coming to life again behind his shadowed eyes. Then, like a soldier coming to attention, he was suddenly the old Kemp—assured, quietly smiling.

"My only trouble is you, darling." He raised her hand to his lips. "You're the sweetest woman in the world, and I'm mad about you, and I'm likely to go violent at just the thought of losing you. I've been acting like a fool kid, and — I'm sorry. Forgive me?"

"We'll skip it, Kemp." She spoke a shade brusquely, because she felt he had withdrawn from her, held her outside the citadel of his reserve. "Shall we go down now and see if the Spindrift is afloat?"

"Nosseh. No froating yet." Ikeda's brown face appeared above the bushes at Sondra's very elbow. "But plenty water now for pulling off and not hurting."

x x x

It was cool, silver dawn when the Dragon eased in to the American Packing Company's float.

"Shocking hours we keep," Sondra laughed as they climbed the ramp to the wharf. "Everybody asleep but us."

"Not everybody." Kemp nodded toward the Baltic, berthed as usual near the Glory. Nothing stirred aboard the craft itself; but alongside, in an Indian canoe, Shady Lane was perched precariously on a thwart, wielding a battered tin bailer. Every movement of his huge top-heavy torso threatened to capsize the frail craft under him.

"If that redheaded bozo can't swim he'll soon be learning the hard way," Kemp commented. "There should be a law to keep cheechakoes out of these Indian dugouts."

Before Sondra could say anything, a long-drawn whistle ripped the morning silence, and the Tonya came tearing up the channel around Spearhead Rocks. As it passed the anchored trawlers, Chris thrust his blond head from a pilothouse window and bellowed joyously, "Rise and shine, you Rip Van Winkles! Herring in Shelikoff! I'll see the boss and be right on your tails before you get your mudhooks up!"

On the instant, the sleepy air of the waterfront changed to one of high excitement. The O'Moore fleet came to life, with tousled heads popping up at windows and portholes, stand-by bells jangling in engine rooms, half-clad figures scuttling about the decks.

"Let's wait here for Chris." Sondra stopped at the head of the ramp leading down to the O'Moore float, where the Tanya was now making fast. Chris had already leaped from the pilothouse and was racing up the cleated gangway, his square white teeth bared in a grin.

"Fish?" Kemp queried eagerly.

"And how! You'll be buried in 'em before night, mister. All we've got to do is—"

"Ahoy, there — Cap'n — Sandvik! Wait—a minute."

Chris whirled toward the jerkily bawling voice. Shady Lane, in his cranky dugout, was making a wobbly approach to the O'Moore float.

Shady waved his paddle at Chris, lost balance, caught himself; then, as his craft veered within arm's reach of the Tanya, he dropped the paddle and frantically clutched the vessel's stern rail. His big paws held, but the canoe, darting ahead, caromed off the side of the Tanya and barely escaped swamping.

Cautiously the big engineer hauled himself up to a position of comparative equilibrium at the Tanya's stern. With the dugout under him darting off at sudden tangents, like the unco-ordinated feet of a tyro roller-skater, he turned a flustered face toward Chris and brayed, "Did you say there's herring in Shelikoff, skipper?"

Chris swallowed his grin and struck a truculent stance. "There is!" he roared back. "So what?"

"Oh, nothing — nothing at all," Shady bellowed placatingly. "We got some Indian boats waiting around out there, and I just thought—"

"Yeah! I saw 'em, big boy! And they'll have a good long wait before they get any fish out of this school. So don't — Wow!" He broke off, slapping his thighs and roaring with laughter. For the dugout, taking a sudden shoot under the Tanya's overhanging stern, had knocked its occupant flat. All that could be seen was an enormous pair of waving feet near one end of the canoe, and farther along, an upthrust arm and hand that frantically pawed the air in search of something stable to cling to.

So comic was the effect that Sondra and Kemp were doubled-up with laughter; and even the men on the O'Moore trawlers stopped their work to guffaw at the cheechako's ludicrous predicament.

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

Shady's pawing hand raked across the Tanya's transom without finding a grip, and the canoe impelled by the thrust, shot out into clear view, its gunwales almost dripping water with the big fellow's struggles to right himself.

"Ride him cowboy!" Chris jeered through cupped hands. Then, as Shady by some miracle managed to drag himself upright without capsizing, Chris bellowed the supreme insult of the sea, "Get a horse, you farmer!"

Shady flashed a sickly grin toward the laughing faces on the wharf and set a wobbling return course to the Baltic.

Sondra wiped her eyes, and turned to the still chuckling Chris. "Tell us about the herring, skipper. Will they be—"

"Chris Sandvik! Ye hidebound son of a limpet! Are ye stranded there? Lay aft!" That stentorian voice turned every eye upward toward Echo House where Captain O'Moore, bareheaded but fully dressed, leaned from an upstairs window.

Sondra felt a twinge of consicence. He had not gone to bed in her absence, though he himself would never admit feeling any anxiety about her.

Chris grinned. "Guess I'd better beat it up there, or the Old Man'll be pinning my ears to the main-m'st."

The three sprinted across the causeway, hearing the engines of the O'Moore trawlers exploding into life, and the winches clanking up their heavy anchor chains.

They found Captain O'Moore in his big chair in the upstairs sitting room, a blue fire of eagerness in his eyes. As Sondra ran to him he flashed her a smile, and drew her down to the chair-arm beside him. But his first words were for Chris: "Ye found the fish, lad. Where?"

"Shelikoff Bay, Cap'n. Slathers of 'em—milling up toward the mouth of Shaman's Lagoon!"

"They'll not have worked inside before the fleet gets out?"

"Nah! Not for another twelve hours, anyhow. There were no whales or anything around to disturb 'em. Katlean and old Ish were scouting around the edges with the Scundoo, but it's too rough in Shelikoff for the rest of that cracker-box fleet."

"What's that?" A wariness dropped suddenly over the Captain's lively interest. "You say there are Indian boats in Shelikoff?"

"Yeah. The whole armada is holed up in the Lagoon. Must have some screwy idea of trying to fish inside there, though even a Siwash ought to know it can't be done."

"I . . . wonder." O'Moore's eyes took on a far-away look, his fingers drummed thoughtfully against the chair arm. "With shallow boats and shallow nets, it might be done—if one knew the currents and the bottom, as old Ish does. . . . Let a big school once get inside there . . . our boats can't even enter that lagoon, much less fish it. . . . By the livin', horn-billed jeezwax!" he concluded explosively, "we've been near to missin' a trick, me lad!"

He took his arm from around Sondra's waist and leaned forward beating a fist into his palm as he snapped his orders. "Get ye out there with the fleet, me bucko. Fill the holds and the decks. Then cut in all your underwater exhausts, and scatter that school from Shelikoff to Borneo! And look to it that no other school gets inside Shaman's Lagoon this season."

"But, Dynamite! Why scatter the—"

"Eelay, gurl! This is man's business." The captain's steely eyes switched back to Chris. "Ready to shove off, Skipper?"

"All set, Cap'n—and so are the others as you can see."

They all turned to the window, through which came the accelerated rattle of winches that told of anchors now rapidly nearing the hawsepipes. There was always spirited rivalry among the O'Moore trawlers to see which should be first away, and the Captain chuckled when he saw all five mudhooks lift clear of the water at almost the same time. "'Tis a dead heat," he said. "And there—they're off! The beauties! All surgin' ahead at once, as if—but wha—what the divil—"

The five trawlers, simultaneously, had lost headway and now like a fleet suddenly bewitched lay drifting aimlessly while yet, their exhausts beat out a song of undiminished power. The crews, seemingly seized by an identical madness, raced aft, flopped on their stomachs, and began jabbing with pikepoles at something under the sterns of their vessels.

"Fouled propellers!" snarled Chris. "But—something's screwy! One of 'em might pick up a line by accident but not all five at once."

"Reynall!" The captain spat out the name. "He's out to keep our boats off those herring till they've worked inside Shaman's Lagoon!" He whirled on Chris. "Move, man! Get ye down there to the Tanya and over to Shelikoff as quick as you can! No, no—never mind the fleet. I'll take care of that. Your job's to get to Shelikoff and scatter those fish! Take a boatload of 'em if ye have the time; but whatever else ye do—keep 'em out of Shaman's Lagoon. Ye hear me?"

"Aye, aye, sir!" the speeding Chris shouted back from the stairway.

They saw him race down the float, snatch off the Tanya's lines, and plunge into the wheelhouse. Instantly, with a roar of her exhaust, the O'Moore flagship surged astern. But her bow had not yet cleared the float when she, too, was stricken with the prevailing paralysis. And Chris, like the other skippers, flew and hung head downward over the stern.
aft, threw himself on his stomach.

Then, rising, he lifted his face, shook both fists at the morning sky, and gave utterance.

With an odd air of finality, the captain turned away from the window. "Would ye believe it?" he said slowly, incredulously. "I've let the Reynall pup out-fox me, and cripple me entire fleet. A whole season's pack of herring will be swimmin' into his blasted lagoon, and not a wheel can I turn to stop 'em."

"But he's had no chance to cripple the Tanya!" exclaimed Kemp. "She was all right when she came in, not fifteen minutes ago."

"Aye, so she was. But remember that big baboon in the canoe, wallowing under her stern while we all roared at his clumsiness? Reynall sent that omadhaun with his monkey tricks to spike the Tanya's propeller, just as he'd already spiked the others. And, by the powers, he did it right under the eyes of us all!"

Sondra was looking down at her fleet, drifting helplessly in the channel. "So that's what he was planning at the Place of Trees, while he smiled into my eyes!" she thought furiously, her hands tightening into fists.

"Dynamite!" she turned to her grandfather, now sitting very still in his high-back chair. "We're not going to let him get away with this, are we?"

"Wire rope!"

It was not the captain who spoke, but Chris, wrathful and red-faced, bursting into the sitting room. "A loop of flexible wire rope, Cap'n, dropped over one blade of each propeller! The first whirl wound it into a solid ball of steel that will take chisels and hacksaws to clear." The big fellow brought up in front of the table, braced for his employer's explosion of rage.

But the unpredictable O'Moore continued to sit very still in his chair while seconds ticked by. Finally he emitted an ambiguous sound that ended in a cough. "Any other damage, Chris?"

"Why, no! But—"

"Very well, then. Haul the boats out on the sand beach here, and get their propellers cleared. By the time you're ready to put to sea, I'll have figured out where the next big school seems likely to strike in. This is Reynall's round. But the fight's not ended yet, mind ye."

"Then why don't we end it now?" Sondra burst out angrily. "There's a law in this land to deal with such—such piracy."

"Law!" The captain threw up a small, scarred hand in horror. "All I ask of the law, darlin', is that it keep hands off me personal fish fights. When I'm pulling no punches meself, sure, I can't yell murder if I catch one amidships. Next time—"

"Oh, why think about a next time, then? If this is ust a personal fight, Dynamite, why don't you drop the whole messy business right here?"

Kemp, looking anxious and impatient, bent forward. "Will your missing-out on this school seriously impair my chances for early fish, sir?"

"Not at all, lad. There's many another school will he heavin' up offshore, and we'll be taking our pick of 'em. I promised ye a pack, and I'll deliver that same, me boy."

When Kemp and Chris had gone, Sondra dropped to her knees in front of her grandfather and looked up wonderingly into his face. "Dynamite—I just don't understand you. Here Jean Reynall wrecks our entire fleet, and you seem almost to approve—"

"'Tis not wrecked they are, darlin'. Once their propellers are cleared, divil a one will be any the worse."

"There! You see, you make excuses for him; and yet you persist in fighting him. I could understand your doing almost anything to keep him from using the Glory as a fish cannery. But now, when nothing you can do will prevent that—you go right on fighting. It isn't like you, lamb, to show such—vindictiveness."

"Vindictiveness," he repeated thoughtfully. "Aye, that's what it is, Sondy; but 'tis none of mine." His eyes met hers fairly with a strange look she could not name. "Look ye, darlin'. 'Twould be a different thing had anyone else brought the Glory here as a floating cannery. But when Jacqueline Reynall drags me old command back as a fish scow, she does it for but one reason—to put a knife in me heart. To made me crawl and beg, as once she vowed I must. It was her last word to me, and she standin' slim and wild there on the deck, with her black eyes flashin' and her black hair whippin' in the wind. 'One day, Danny O'Moore, ye'll come crawlin' to me, beggin' me favor!'" He was staring back through the years to that tempestuous scene. "Over fifty years!" he said, in a hurt, bewildered voice. "And still she carries the hate of me strong in her heart."

Sondra caught his hand in a rush of fierce, protective tenderness. "That woman! I could— But put her out of your mind, darling. Don't let her hurt you any more."

"Hurt me!" He straightened indignantly. "Why, Jacqueline Reynall couldn't hurt me now, after—" The fire suddenly went out of him. "I'll not lie to ye, Sondy," he said with weary gentleness. "Belike, it does hurt a bit even now. But no hurt can make Dan O'Moore crawl or beg for what he'd have of man or woman." He cleared his throat harshly; then patted his shoulder and pushed her gently away. Arrrgh, now, darlin', 'tis starvin' I am for a bit of breakfast. See if Jodin is astir."

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

The tourist season opened bringing three liners a week to flood historic old Sitka with crowds of eager sight-seers; and Captain O'Moore's shipmaster friends, proud to show Alaskan hospitality at its best, invariably brought all their travelling notables to Echo House.

For Sondra, this meant almost daily entertaining; and the social tempo was further quickened when, one morning the squadron of United States Navy bombers settled, like a flock of gigantic silver birds, among the little green islands in the bay.

Sitka hostesses filled a gala fortnight with social affairs for the flyers; but it was to Echo House that they came most often—informally and at all hours.

Captain O'Moore, his leg now free of its cast, turned only the most jovial of countenances upon his guests and the world. But in his hours of privacy, more and more often he frowningly perused the pages of his herring records. This season, fish were not appearing offshore as they should; and when they did appear, cruising whales quickly chased them into more constricted waters where the O'Moore boats could not fish. So far, the fleet had managed to keep Starbuck's cannery fully supplied — but only through ceaseless effort.

Sondra, swept up in a whirlwind of gaiety, had almost forgotten the fishing business. Waking rather late the morning after the bombers had taken off for their base in the States it came to her, with a twinge of remorse, that she hadn't seen Kemp since the arrival of the squadron. At breakfast, when she mentioned it, her grandfather told her Kemp put off two weeks ago to scout for inside fishing-grounds for his shallow seiners. Ikeda was in charge of the cannery.

Sondra had planned to spend a quiet day free from guests, but even before breakfast was over a sleek, gray destroyer came nosing in to the steamship dock. "The U. S. S. Pelley", her grandfather commented. "That's Ellsworth's command. I met him when he was stationed at Bremerton."

Commander Ellsworth promptly presented himself at Echo House, with word that his vessel's mission in Sitka was one of science rather than war. "I'm carrying a group of oceanographers from the Hydrographic Office, and a whole mess of modern equipment for the study of ocean currents," he explained over a cup of coffee. "My professors are beginning their work around Cape Edgecombe and St. Lazaria Island. Knowing you have done a lot of local research along their lines, captain, I wondered if you'd let them come up here today and look over your records?"

The captain assented, heartily; and Sondra was soon greeting the group of scientists, and trying to conceal her surprise at their appearance. Instead of the greybeards she had expected, they were all rather young, alert, keen-faced men. And their leader Mayes was a forceful individual with an incisive manner of speech quite at variance with the dreamy personality commonly ascribed to men of science.

Throughout the day the group was in close conference over the O'Moore herring records. Working in pairs with the captain supplying a clarifying word here and there, they compiled their notes with machine-like precision. Though it was late afternoon when they finished, Mayes refused the captain's invitation to remain for dinner.

"Thank you, sir. Immensely in your debt already," he said in his brisk, clipped fashion. "Hope to enjoy your hospitality later—return it also. Bit pressed for time now—pushing on this evening to anchorage at St. Lazaria. Remain there some weeks. Perhaps you'll run out—Miss O'Moore, too. Glad to have you aboard, any time."

When they had gone, Sondra went in to find her grandfather absently rubbing a hand over the model of the Glory. There was a dispirited droop to his shoulders.

"Did you show Dr. Mayes your Aleutian charts lamb?" she inquired.

He shook his head. "I mentioned them, but I could see he wasn't interested. Belike, even the War Department has lost interest in them. 'Tis weeks since I heard."

She slipped a comforting arm about his shoulders. "Don't be downhearted, darling. Maybe the very next boat will bring you a letter."

"Aye—maybe. And maybe I'm an old fool, who sees in me charts what no one else can." He reached out a hand and listlessly began twiddling the dials of his radio.

"I don't remember ever seeing them, lamb."

"They're nothing to look at—unless you're tryin' to take a ship through those waters. Just copies on thin tracin' linen."

"I'm sure there was nothing like that in the safe when I straightened it up. I—Dynamite!" She jerked up, startled by a sudden thought. "Do you suppose the safe-blowers stole—"

"No, darlin', I'd not trust me charts to that old iron box. Besides, I like to keep 'em always near. To look at sometimes . . . and remember. . . . Belike, as Starbuck once said, that's all they're good for. Just relics, to—"

"Phooey for Kemp's opinion! He's not a sailor."

"No-o-o. Though I do be always forgettin' that for some reason. The sea puts her mark on a man, and there's that about Starbuck—Well, no matter."

x x x

That evening at sunset, the Pelley left for St. Lazaria Island.

Sondra, leaning from an arch in the cupola, watched the Navy greyhounr nose out between the islands into the rose-gold west, but her thoughts were elsewhere. This was the first time she had come to the cupola since the night Jean Reynall had talked to her across the water. She had kept away purposely, avoiding the place as one instinctively avoids a spot where the pain of disillusion has shattered the beauty of a dream.

But this evening, with the house quiet for the first time in weeks, a strange loneliness had come upon her. She had felt the need to get away by herself, to think . . . to dream.

Since that morning when his looped bits of cable had temporarily disabled the O'Moore fleet, she had had no word from Jean. Had not heard his name, nor spoken it aloud. Yet she had not been able to crowd him out of her mind. Always, she was conscious of him. But she felt him most poignantly when she looked down on the transformation he had wrought in the Glory of the West. For the old ship was no longer dingy, battered, darkly scrofulous; outwardly, in all save masts, she was again the counterpart of the shining white model on the captain's table. At sight of her now, faintly flushed with sunset, Sondra was stirred anew by the grace of her snowy hull, and by the sheer beauty of her upcurving prow where, under a lengthened bowsprit, the golden mermaid pointed a way to adventure.

All that marked the Glory for a cannery was the day-and-night rumble of machinery in the hold. Sondra heard it now—steady, muffled, the heartbeat of a great industry.

The Baltic had come puffing in with its loaded scow at dinner-time, and still lay in its berth near the Glory. Sondra had thought it deserted until, suddenly, a man and a woman stepped out from the pilothouse—Reynall, and Liane Bootrin.

During the past month Liane had kept away from Echo House displaying a surprising indifference toward the personable young officers who came and went there. She seemed to have developed an absorbing interest in affairs of the waterfront, for she met the Baltic each time it came in, and she never failed to be on hand when the O'Moore fleet arrived to unload.

Now she and Reynall climbed down into the Indian canoe that lay alongside the Baltic. They had knelt in the bottom, native fashion, and swung their paddles with accustomed ease. The little craft came skimming down the channel spilling their laughter, until they were passing Echo House. There both of them looked up and waved to Sondra.

Sondra watched the canoe glide out on the bay where the twilight islands had already turned to purple velvet patches. When, finally, it was lost in the shadows, she was swept by a fierce nostalgia for something she could not name. She tried to think of other things, but her mind persisted in envisioning Liane and Reynall in the canoe; slipping along in island shadows, night air fresh on their faces—and her eyes only for her.

She had momentarily forgotten the "talking spot" when, startling her, Liane's petulant voice filled the cupola. "Oh, you never have time for anything I want to do, Jean. Why can't we go out to the Place of Trees?"

"Because it would take all night to paddle out there and back, lady, and I must start back for Shaman's Lagoon within the hour," Reynall replied.

"Darn Shaman's Lagoon, and every fish in it! If you must rush back, why did you hustle me into this canoe when I had just snugged down for a cosy chat aboard the Baltic?"

"What could be cozier than this, my little wildcat? Relax now, and rest your paddle while we drift through between these two islands. I've always liked this little spot—ever since I used to paddle out here as a boy."

Sondra held her breath. Was he going to tell Liane about the acoustic properties of the cupola, and how he used to talk to her, Sondra, when she was a little girl? "If he does, I'll murder him," she thought savagely.

But there was no more talk. Only the sound of paddles laid athwart the canoe, and Reynall humming. Then his voice, deep, poignant, and not very loud came intimately across the water:

"Wild geese cry flying high,
Where silver spruce and hemlock sigh.
The campfire's glow lifts high,
drops low.
My heart goes out to you."

Sondra's eyes filled with tears, and her heart with a wild, tender happiness. Their song! He had seen her in the cupola; had inveigled Liane into a canoe ride that would take him out to their secret "talking spot", so he could sing to her.

Suddenly the night seemed vibrant and glamorous with promise. She lifted her face and threw out her arms, feeling that she could embrace the whole wonderful world.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was taking a walk with pop for his health and I said, Have you decided anything about my allowance, pop?

Why, was there some question about your allowance? pop said, and I said, Aw G, pop, you remember, I asked if I could have 15 cents a week instead of 10 and you and ma were going to talk it over whether to give me at least 12, so have you decided anything, pop?

It's rather a serious matter, pop said. Many a stronger caracter than you has slidden weakly off the lap of luxury. In fact entire nations have been lost just through having things made too easy for them. You've heard of the fall of Rome, haven't you? he said.

Sure, but that was away back in history, I said, and pop said, Everything is away back in history sooner or later. The Romans at one time were the strongest and bravest people in the world. Roman children could outrun and outwressle full grown men from other countries, and the average Roman lady could do a day's washing in 20 minutes. But they got too rich for their own good and they all had so much money working for them that they stopped working for their money, and all they could think of was what they called a higher and higher standard of living until every member of the family including the dog had his own bathroom, and everybody got so fat and lazy they were unable to protect themselves, and the country fell an easy victim to the dictaters of that time, pop said.

But G wizzickers, pop, that couldn't happen to me, I said. Holey smokes the main reason I want more money is so I can save up faster and buy one of those puntching bags in the middle of a long rubber cord that I can put up in the doorway of my room and make myself stronger instead of weaker, so that's just the opposite, I said, and pop said, By gollies so it is, I'll see what I can do.

Sounding like the best news yet.

Shell 'Oilers' Take Corby's In Opening Tilt of Season

Win 6-5 With Harris on Mound for Corby's Walking Three in Row in Eighth for Winning Run

FINE FIELDING

Continuing where they left off last season as champions of the Belleville Softball League, the Shell "Oilers" won the opening game of the local "mushball" loop by defeating their ancient diamond rivals, Corby's A. C. by a 6 to 5 score at Coleman Flats, in a pitching duel that saw Johnnie Bawden best Connie Harris in a well-hurled match.

Bawden helped his own cause and put the "Oilers" in a commanding lead with a circuit blow in the seventh, while Harris developed a wild streak and walked three, forcing in the winning run in the eighth frame. With the odd run going to the Bawden-led "Oilers," they also out-hit Corby's 8-7, while each team left seven players stranded on the runways. Only three errors marred a perfect opening game, although Harris' wild streak in the eighth ultimately led to his own defeat.

The Scoring

Cole drove Henn across the plate in the first and the "Oilers" went two ahead, when Amo scored on Reynolds' long fly to right in the second. Corby's rallied in the fourth and Chuck Barriage hit for the circuit with the bases clogged to the limit, putting Corby's 4 to 2 to the good. After doubling in the fourth, Rowbotham scored on two successive Corby errors, when Bawden rose to the occasion and hit for the circuit with Ronsky aboard in the seventh. An error and Reid's double tied the score in the top half of the eighth, but Harris' wild streak in the last half gave the winners' their sixth run, unearned, and victory.

Eight Put-outs

The fielding sensations were supplied by Jimmie Barriage, veteran left fielder of Corby's, who retired the "Oilers" in succession in the sixth and had eight put outs to his credit during the entire game. Both pitchers hurled good steady ball in view of the fact the game was the season's initial contest.

The time-honored opening ceremonies were taken care of by President Ken Edgecombe, Harry Rollins and Harry Knott, all league officials.

DODGERS, REDS TIED FOR LEAD IN THE NATIONAL

Each Team Has Won 18 and Lost Eight Since Season Opened

INDIANS WIN

Cleveland Increases Lead in American by Beating Boston Red Sox

By JUDSON BAILEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

There was a time that the National League pennant chase looked like it might be a runaway. First Brooklyn Dodgers won nine straight, then Cincinnati Reds gave the appearance of gunning for a 10-game lead by July 4.

The result was inevitable, of course. Then senior circuit is having its customary brawl for the lead and today the Dodgers and Reds are tied with 18 games won and eight lost.

The American League is having nearly as desperate a dispute for first place between Boston Red Sox and Cleveland Indians. New York Yankees have assumed winning ways, and have finally escaped the cellar.

Derringer Question Mark

Cincinnati's chances depend considerably on big Paul Derringer, who suddenly has changed from an exclamation point to a question mark in the Reds' story. He has been knocked out of the box three times in his last five games and the only reason he lasted the route yesterday as New York Giants and Carl Hubbell beat Cincinnati 6-4, was the great faith of manager Bill McKecknie.

Johnny Rizzo hit a double and a two-run homer to help give Derringer a three-run lead in the first four innings. But Paul permitted the Giants to rally for three runs in the sixth and three more in the eighth after Bill Werber had put him in front again with a homer.

Fitzsimmons Beats Pirates

In the meantime fat Freddy Fitzsimmons led the Dodgers to a 3-1 decision over Pittsburgh Pirates. He permitted only six hits. Brooklyn won the game with two unearned runs in the fifth following a fumble by Arky Vaughan.

These were the only games the weather allowed in the National League.

Cleveland took first blood in its crucial series with the Red Sox, winning 9-6 on home runs by Hal Trosky, Roy Weatherly and Ken Keltner. The triumph raised the Indians again with 1 1-2 games of the Sox.

Tigers Wrecked

The Yankees continued their assault with a 16-hit bombardment that wrecked Detroit Tigers 8-2. Babe Dahlgren had a perfect day with a home run and four singles while George Selkirk also hit a homer.

Chicago White Sox, who hadn't won a game in their own park until Monday, now have won three straight, including a 10-1 triumph over Philadelphia Athletics yesterday.

A seven-hit pitching performance by southpaw Ken Chase, brought Washington Senators a 9-2 victory over St. Louis and sent the Browns into the cellar.

TORONTO HANDS BUFFALO BISONS SECOND DEFEAT

CHIEFS IN CELLAR

Syracuse One of the Biggest Disappointments of the Present Season

(By The Associated Press)

Syracuse Chiefs, rated highly by the experts before the start of the season, have been one of the biggest disappointments in the International League so far—and no one knows it better than Manager Dick Porter.

Yesterday Chiefs blew a fourteen inning, 3-2, decision to Jersey City Giants to drop into last place. It was their fifth straight loss.

Johnny Wittig turned in a fine relief pitching job for Little Giants, and topped it off by batting in the winning run. The Chiefs had a 1-0 lead going into the last of the ninth, but with two out Tommy Neill doubled and Mickey Vernon singled to tie it up. Vernon saved Jersey City again in the 13th, with a homer. After Syracuse had pushed across its second tally.

The victory boosted the J's to within a few percentage points of the first place Rochester Red Wings who lost 8-3 to Montreal, and second place Baltimore Orioles, who were idle. The Newark-Baltimore night game was postponed because of threatening weather.

Montreal clubbed Mike Ryba for 12 safeties, including a home run by Bert Haas with the bases loaded, to move into fifth place in the standings.

Toronto Maple Leafs handed Buffalo Bisons their second straight setback, 3-2. Floyd Giebell went the distance for Buffalo but pitched a home run ball to Tommy Heath in the eighth inning. Phil Marchildon, after tossing one-hit ball for six frames, was relieved in the eighth by Pat McLaughlin, who received credit for the win.

GARCIA FAVORED TO BEAT OVERLIN

Held at 1 to 2 to Knock Off Boxing Skill of Illinois Battler

New York, May 23—(AP)—Ceferino Garcia, Ken Overlin and a piece of the world middleweight championship are having a little get together in Madison Square Garden tonight for some plain and fancy fisticuffing, with a geography lesson thrown in.

Garcia is a Filipino from Los Angeles who has been fighting about halfway around the world. Challenging his right to a claim on the 160-pound throne is Ken Overlin, born in Illinois, lived in Norfolk and Washington and has been kicking around in rings the world over.

Just to make the geography lesson complete, the championship is no stationary target. Garcia owns that part of it recognized in New York, California and a few way stations. The National Boxing Association, functioning in some other parts of the country, bestows its blessings on Al Hostak of Seattle, who has defended his title claim outside his own "back yard" only once.

Tonight's 15-rounder should go a long way toward straightening out the middleweight mess. Garcia and his right hand bolo punch go into action as 1 to 2 favorites to knock off the boxing skill Overlin has acquired in his years of campaigning.

Yesterday's Stars

Ed Smith, White Sox: Allowed but seven hits and shut out Athletics after first inning to win 10-1.

Fred Fitzsimmons, Dodgers: Held Pirates to six hits and permitted no runs after first frame.

SEVERAL EVENTS ON VICTORIA DAY

Golf, Bowling, Yachting and Wrestling to be Featured on Holiday

Only two public sporting events are scheduled to be held in Belleville on Victoria Day, when the Belleville Yacht Club will inaugurate their summer's program of punt sailing races off Victoria Park in the afternoon, while in the evening professional wrestling will be featured at the Hume Arena.

Nick Pavick, the Greek badman from Detroit, will make his Canadian wrestling debut at the Arena versus "Nibs" Palmer, former Montreal grappler in the main bout of the evening. Pavich is heralded "south of the border" as having future ring possibilities and is being groomed by his manager for a shot at the world's heavyweight title, despite the fact he is a few pounds in weight below the accepted 210 pounds avordupois. In the semi-final bout on the program Jim Beamish, the veteran Toronto matman, will meet Eddie Sobul, the Hartford mat villian.

Otherwise, golfing and tennis will also be officially opened at the Belleville Golf Club, Bay of Quinte Country Club and at the Quinte Skating Club courts. Impromptu bowling on the green will be featured at the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club when inter-club games will be the order of Canada's first National holiday that welcomes the summer vacation and recreation period.

Did you know that—Walt Gerow, Jr., is a cinch to cover the initial sack for the Peterboro seniors this summer?....That Walter, Sr., is shopping around in Northern Ontario for a coaching spot, but doesn't like the northland any too much, it is rumoured? .... That Chuck Barnett, erstwhile coach of Corbys A.C., has switched his softball allegiance and will tutor the "Big-Z" nine in the ladies' "mushball" loop?....That Joe E. Brown, who is appearing in a rugby football picture at the Capitol, was a professional baseball player before he turned to acting?....That several outstanding Pacific gridiron stars appear in the picture with Brown in a hilarious football epic? ....That playing-manager "Lippo Leo" Durocher of the Dodgers, was named the most valuable manager in the National League last year?.. The Belleville lawn bowlers will launch upon their lengthy season's activity on their spacious greens tomorrow?....That all of the local softball clubs will be wearing brand new and natty uniforms this summer?

To sum up last night's opening softball game it can all be centred around the two pitchers. Bawden practically won his own game, when he hit for the circuit in the seventh, while Connie Harris was directly responsible for his own loss, when he developed a mild streak and walked three successive batters in the eighth and forced in what proved the winning run. However, the game was productive of a good brand of softball, it being the opening game and only three errors chalked up all around. The "Oilers" only out-hit Corbys eight to seven, while each team left seven stranded on the runways. The candy cane or mythical orchid goes to Jimmie Barriage, Corbys left fielder who had eight putouts in his field, he going so far as to retire the side single-handed in the sixth. Judging from the all-around picture, however, it is quite evident that neither team is as strong as they were last year.

The sympatny of the sporting public is extended to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hughes in the death of their nine-year-old daughter, Patricia.

Although there wasn't much publicity given to it Steve "Crusher" Casey, the Irish wrestler, got the duke over "Tiger" Warrenton, a Boston heavyweight in a mixed bout recently. The bout was held in camera and at the request of Casey, who was anxious to prove for himself that apparent difference in methods of attack between a grappler and a boxer. According to reports that leaked out after the bout, Warrenton clipped Casey with a savage right hand uppercut to the jaw to open hostilities. Casey weathered the attack, however, shook it off, and closed in on Warrenton to toss him to the mat and win with an inside crotch hold. All of which reminds us that the professional grapplers are holding forth in their weekly performances at the Hume arena Friday night when Nick Pavich, the Greek rough-house matman, meets 'Nibs' Palmer, formerly of Montreal while Eddie Sobul clashes with Jim Beamish. Incidentally we often wondered why the local promoters did not try a mixed boxer-wrestler bout here. Doubtless such an experiment would prove popular as well as profitable.

Early indications point to it being Rex Mays versus Bob Swanson for the pole position in the Memorial Day 500-mile speedway race at Indianapolis this year—or youth versus old age and experience. Both are Californians, May hailing from Glendale and Swanson from Los Angeles. May is the veteran and Swanson the energetic youth, but the former has never won simply because no car ever stood up under his heavy accelerator foot. It is estimated that speed between 130 and 135 miles per hour will be attained to win the pole position. Incidentally the car, making the fastest qualifying speed on the first day of qualification gets the pole, regardless of the speed attained between now and May 30th.

Paul Riganti, the South American racing champ, is entered in the 1940 Memorial Day classic and will shoot for the pole position, although observers say his qualifying speed won't top 125 miles per hour. Others who will try to qualify this week and their approximate or estimated speed include: Wilbur Shaw of Indianapolis, 1939 winner, 128 miles an hour; Duke Nalon of Chicago, 112; Cliff Bergere of Hollywood Calif., 127; Mauri Rose of Columbus, O., 125; Harry McQuinn of Indianapolis 126; Ted Horn of Los Angeles 127; Frank Warne of Pasadena, 124; Shorty Cantlon of Detroit, 124, and Russell Snowberger of Detroit 122.

Do you remember when the first night major-league baseball game in history was played two years ago tonight. Cincinnati switched to "after dark" contests and it made an immediate hit when 20,000 persons turned out, as compared with an average 5,000 for day games, to see the Reds defeat Philadelphia 2-1.

There isn't the usual amount of pre-fight ballynoo emanating from the camps of Tony Galento or Max Baer, simply because it is generally agreed that "Two-ton Tony" will slap Maxie's ears down in right smart order. If Galento can knock Baer down for keeps, he'll get another shot at Joe Louis' crown, (but we don't understand for the world why) just as surely as little potatoes get larger. It must be remembered that Galento had Louis on the floor once before and he hopes to make him stay there if there is ever a second occasion.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, May 23—(AP)—The educated Prof. Moe Berg of the Red Sox follows the International situation closely. . . So when the Sox had an off day in Detroit, he hopped over to Windsor to give war conditions there a quick once over. . . . Ken Overlin has bet $400 of his own dough against $1,000 he beats Ceferino Garcia in the Garden tonight. . . . Since Henry Armstrong has been coaching Overlin, Garcia has asked the Boxing Commission to warn Ken against thumbing and butting.

Papers here say the Brooks have a deal cooking. . . . Lee Savold goes to the post against Ed Tipperary at Kansas City June 4 for his first fight since he broke his hand. . . . Larry Gutsch, a Salina (Kas.) bowler, threw 19 successive strikes the other night. . . . Monte Barnard, Rensselaer (N.Y.) High School hurler, warmed up with three consecutive shutouts, then came through with a no-hit, norunner.

Add a leg injury to Bill Dickey's long list of woes. . . . A swanky Maryland Club is playing polo for two-bits admission. . . . As the Yanks were riding from Cleveland to Detroit Tuesday night, some lug hurled a rock through the train window, spraying Babe Dahlgren with splinters. . . . Wolves, rare animals in Comiskey Park, are howling at the White Sox.

U. S. Senator Castigates Lindbergh For Criticism Of States' Defence Policy

Washington, May 23 —(CP)—The Roosevelt administration has a "definite policy of defence"—a policy entailing the defence of the western hemisphere which President Roosevelt has stated repeatedly in the last two years, Senator James Byrnes, South Carolina Democrat, said last night.

In a broadcast speech, considered the Administration's reply to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's criticism of United States foreign policy in an address last Sunday night, Byrnes replied to Lindbergh's three speeches since September, including the one in which the aviator suggested Canada break off from the British Empire.

That was, in effect, a demand that the United States go to war with Canada, Byrnes said, because "had we followed his advice and made such a demand upon Canada and she refused to comply with our demand, we could enforce that demand only with force."

Lindbergh, said Byrnes, chairman of the Senate Naval Appropriations Committee, was no more qualified to speak on United States foreign policy than "Wrong-Way Corrigan or any other aviator who may fly the Atlantic Ocean."

"Fifty columns are already active in America, and those who consciously or unconsciously retard the efforts of this government to provide for the defence of the American people are the fifth column's most effective fellow travellers," he declared.

Byrnes said he "shuddered to think of the kind of American Mr. Lindbergh is willing to accept" when he says that "regardless of which side wins this war, there is no reason, aside from our own actions, to prevent a continuation of peaceful relationships between America and the countries of Europe."

Speech a Comfort to Isolationists

"Since last September Lindbergh has taken it upon himself to speak three times to the American people upon what their attitude should be toward the conflict now raging in Europe.

"When his first speech was delivered the question of the arms embargo was uppermost in the minds of Americans. . . . Few who heard his speech could doubt that its net effort was to give great comfort to those opposing the shipment of planes even under the cash-and-carry clause to the Allies fighting in defense of their national existence.

"The following month Mr. Lindbergh addressed the American public a second time. He pleaded that, 'for the benefit of Western civilization we should continue our embargo on offensive weapons.' He wanted to forbid the sale for cash and delivery in this country of bombing plane to Britain and France while they would lie unpitied beneath the bombs of German planes. . . . .

Trying to Find Meaning

Of Lindbergh's last speech, Byrnes said: "I am still trying to discover the meaning of it.

"Mr. Lindbergh states that while it is true that bombing planes can be built with sufficient range to cross the ocean and return no such planes exist today in any air force. Would Mr. Lindbergh have us wait until they are built by a nation capable of producing thousands every month?

"Mr. Lindbergh seems not concerned with the flagrant violations of the rights of peaceful little nations, the cruel and bitter persecution of God-fearing, men, women and children, because of their religion, race or political opinions; the burning of books, the bombing of helpless women and children fleeing terror from their homes; the parachute spies and the torch troops. To Mr. Lindbergh all these seem to be only little trifling insignificant incident to a age-old struggle for power.

"But to me these vile, barbaric deeds represent an attack against everything that we hold dear, an attack against international good faith, against religion, against learning, against political freedom, against civilization itself . . .

"Apart from all moral values, does Mr. Lindbergh really believe that our problem of national defense would not seriously be affected by the destruction of the British Fleet or its surrender to Germany?

British Fleet Aids in Defence of States

"The British Fleet has made it possible for us to get along with a fleet large enough to protect our interests on either the Atlantic or Pacific, but not on both oceans at the same time.

"Is there among us a thoughtful person who believes that should England be brought to her knees within the next few weeks or few months Hitler would permit her to scuttle her fleet? Must we not realize that Hitler would warn that if Britain destroyed her fleet, he would destroy England? Could we expect the British Government under such circumstances to sink its fleet or send it to help the United States? If the British did what you would do under the same circumstances and surrendered its fleet to save the people, we would be confronted by Hitler possessing a navy superior in strength to our own, and with more warships in the course of construction in England than in any other country.

"Mr. Lindbergh may tell us to 'stop this hysterical chatter of calamity and invasion, but I thank God that America has at last been aroused to the dangers that beset her in a world menaced by brute force and strident ambition and is grimly determined to arm in self-defence."

FRIENDS, ROMANS—

Lend me your ears while I tell you that the very modern young officer cadet shown ABOVE, is Julius Caesar. Yes. That's his name, so help us. And apparently he's preparing for another conquest. That gadget he has on his shoulder is the latest word in 2-inch trench mortars. He is training at a cadet camp somewhere in England.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Little Orvie"

At the McCarthy theatre now is one of the most delightful films brought to the screen so far this year. Booth Tarkington's famous story "Little Orvie", we urge you not to miss this grand movie and recommend that you bring some little boy or girl with you, as it's thrills, it's heart appeal, it's down to earth drama, it's wholesome fun, is down the alley of any man or woman who has had a dad and mother, and will delight the heart of any boy or girl who perhaps otherwise would miss it.

Deftly directed and brilliantly enacted, the simple tale of a small boy with a dog-owning complex and a stern resolve is told with just the right proportions of laughter and tears.

Although Orvie's father is in favor of the youngster having a puppy, his mother is opposed to the idea and fails to comprehend the depth of the boy's feeling in the matter. When a stray Great Dane comes along and adopts Orvie, things begin to happen. Orvie finds himself in hot water with various disgruntled citizens and with his own family; his efforts to get rid of his affectionate but embarrassing canine pal prove futile, and his final attempts to dispose of a litter of puppies and to keep one of them for himself, bring about the delightful conclusion of the story.

In young John Sheffield the studio discovered a perfect actor for the title role, Ernest, appealing and talented, he gives a marvelous performance, making Orvie a very real character. He is aided and abetted by a clever little actress, seven-year-old Ann Todd, who is involved in the puppy business with him.

Ernest Truex and Dorothy Tree, as Orvie's parents, handle their parts excellently, and fine work is also contributed by Daisy Mothershed as a colored maid. Ray McCarey's direction of the production by William Sistrom is effective in the extreme, and with a Lynn Root-Frank Fenton — Robert Chapin screen play, "Little Orvie" is a real cinematic treat.

Charles Starrett, Belleville's favorite cowboy star of the screen, in his newest musical-western hit "Blazing Six-Shooters," an amusing scrappy cartoon, "Worm's Eye View" and a new episode of the excellent serial "The Shadow" are shown in addition to the feature presentation number one "Little Orvie."

AT THE CAPITOL

$1,000 A TOUCHDOWN"

The picture for which millions of Joe E. Brown and Martha Raye fans have been waiting— Paramount's hilarious new football comedy, "$1,000 a Touchdown" — has its first local showing at the Capitol Theatre, hitting a new high score for sheer hilarity.

Followers of the large-mouthed pair had always hoped that Joe and Martha would be starred together, and they have good reason to be pleased with the result. From the moment when Joe and Martha meet, to the hilarious climax in a thrilling and whacky football game, the picture speaks mammoth mouthfuls for the laugh-provoking ability of the comedians.

At the outset—or is it the kick-off in a college comedy?—Joe joins up with Martha because he can't become an actor. It seems that he loses his voice when more than ten people are in the audience! Martha needs Joe's help, for her only asset is a bankrupt college and she's determined to make a go of the school.

Assisted by a group of stranded stage people, Joe and Martha open for business, but students fail to appear. Then they recruit a football team to advertise the college. Joe becomes coach, even though he can't talk to eleven men at once, and doesn't know anything about football anyway!

Somehow Joe does turn out a team. Martha get a game for them with a champion pro outfit, and when she breaks out in a rash of betting on her team to attempt to lift the mortgage on Alma Mater, the picture reaches a fun-filled climax highlighted by a wonderful and whacky football game.

The picture provides occasion for Martha to sing a new Robin-Rainger tune, "I Spell Love With a Capital You," and she delivers it in that grand Raye style. Involved in the humorous proceedings in important roles are Eric Blore, Susan Hayward, John Hartley — they fall in love along with Joe and Martha—and Joyce Mathews. James Hogan directed from an original screenplay by Delmar Davies.

On the same programme, Belleville's favorites, Three Mesquiteers are seen in the western "Covered Wagon Days." The 5th chapter "The Phantom Creeps", and a looney toon cartoon complete the bill. There will be a daily matinee Friday May 24th and on Saturday.

AT THE BELLE

"Johnny Apollo"

What is said to be the most daringly realistic jailbreak ever shown on a screen provides the breath-taking climax of "Johnny Apollo", the new 20th. Century-Fox drama, starring Tyrone Power and Dorothy Lamour, which is now on the Belle Theatre screen.

But then realism is the keynote of this thrilling picture, which tells in terms of bite and dynamite, the story of the banker's son who turned from college man to mobster when the father he idolized was sent to prison and his wealthy friends turned against him.

Tyrone is seen as "Johnny Apollo," while Dorothy Lamour has her best role to date as "Lucky" Dubarry, the sophisticated night club entertainer, who walks out on her gangster boy friend, Mickey Dwyer, when Apollo walks into the picture. Edward Arnold is the banker father.

Lloyd Nolan plays Dwyer and others selected by Production Chief Darryl F. Zanuck for important featured roles are Charley Grapewin, who is cast as a tippling ex-judge turned underworld lawyer, and Lionel Atwill.

Involved in the jailbreak sequence are Power, Nolan and Arnold and among its many breath-taking thrills the scenes include one of the most terrific hand-to-hand battles the screen has ever shown. This battle is staged between Power and Nolan and both boys disregarded the script and gave it everything they had.

The Vatican of Pius XII

The first complete story of Vatican City in motion pictures will be seen in "The Vatican of Pius XII.", the new edition of the March of Time, and the greatest one yet.

In these official motion pictures on the same program you see what His Holiness, the Pontiff is doing in behalf of peace in a war-wracked world. "Harvest Time," a clever and funny cartoon in technicolor concludes a splendid program.

The Fighting 69th.

James Cagney's newest starring picture, "The Fighting 69th." will be the next attraction at the Belle Theatre. In "The Fighting 69th." he shares starring honors with Pat O'Brien, and George Brent, with a featured cast including Jeffrey Lynn, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, and dozens of others.

Previewed in Hollywood, "The Fighting 69th" has received raves as the most excitement-packed film entertainment of the year, and many insist that it is Cagney's best role to date, even over-shadowing his performance in "The Roaring Twenties." Says Film Daily: "It is an outstanding, distinctive picture, taking rank with the best in screen history."

E. C. H. (Red) Rowland, who, in 1915 wrote the world-famous war song hit, "Mademoiselle From Armentieres," plays it on the piano at his home in a suburb of south-west London. As the British army, which popularized the song, once more finds itself engaged in conflict, perhaps "Red," as he is affectionately known, is thinking of composing another song to cheer on the current edition of Tommies.

Rumania Enforces Series of New Measures to Cope With Possible Invasion by Germany or Russia

By MAURICE CASTAGNE
(Havas Staff Writer)

Bucharest, May 23 (CP-Havas).—Some 350,000 reservists—almost all the remaining men not previously mobilized—today began a 30-day period of service with the colors as Rumania enforced a series of new measures to cope with possible invasion from Germany or Russia.

A fully mobilized armed force of about 1,300,000 men now faces a German army massed in Slovakia and Soviet troops concentrated on this country's Polish and Bessarabian frontiers.

Only workers on vital rearguard undertakings — fortifications, roads, railways, oil wells and coal fields— were exempted from the latest call.

Official quarters insisted the move was occasional by no new alarming development, but reports from Slovakia told of important German troop movements toward the Hungarian border and mobilization of all Slovaks in the classes of 1923 to 1938 inclusive. Hungary was believed already to have agreed to give the troops free passage toward the Rumanian frontier.

Expect Ultimatum Momentarily.

On the pretext of the long-standing Soviet threat on Rumania's northeastern border, Germany was expected in many quarters to present Bucharest momentarily with an ultimatum demanding complete control of Rumanian oil fields and ports.

While reservists were crowding into railway stations throughout the nation, the following additional measures were taken on the home front:

1. King Carol cancelled the celebration of the 10th anniversary of his coronation, scheduled for June 8, declaring that in the present juncture the country's entire manpower and energy were needed elsewhre than in such demonstrations.

2. Polish refugees residing in Bucharest were ordered to present their identification papers to police for verification by June 2. All provisory residence permits will be voided after that date. Persons who fail to submit their papers are liable to heavy pealty.

3. The Iron Guard leaders who secretly entered this country from Germany were arrested—the first breach in the incipient reconciliation between the government and the pro-Fascist organization, which most Rumanians continue to view as a potential fifth column.

Press Under Rigorous Orders.

4. The press was placed under rigorous orders to refrain from giving Germany any slightest provocation, and newspapers formerly sympathetic with the Allies began giving a decidedly Nazi tinge to their war reports.

Germany was reported in some quarters to have offered Rumania assurances against Soviet expansionism — centred chiefly around Russia's longstanding demand for return of Bessarabia—provided this country would fully gratify the Nazi economic demands.

Nazi diplomats were reported to have approached the government unofficially through representatives of the Rumanian metal industry to propose that Rumania break all its other alliances and trade agreements and place itself unreservedly in the German sphere.

Belgrade, May 23—(CP Havas)—The discovery of arms in the baggage of members of the Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra led to cancellation of a concert by the orchestra here and an immediate request to the players to quit Yugoslavia at once, it was learned here today.

The concert was to have been given last Monday night, but was cancelled at the last minute, without explanation. Today it was disclosed that the well-armed musicians had been accompanied by a corps of "technical experts," relatives, substitutes, friends and newspapermen, totalling altogether about 500 persons and these too were found to have weapons in their baggage.

LONDON WILLING U. S. TAKE PART IN RECONSTRUCTION

Says U. S. Should Help World to Return to Normal Trade After the War

POST-WAR TRADE

Washington, May 23.—(AP)—Alf M. Landon said today, after a conference with Secretary of State Cordell Hull, that he personally is willing that the United States take part in the economic reconstruction of the post-war world.

Landon, the Republican Presidential nominee in 1936, went to Hull for a "fill in" on Foreign Affairs and received it in a 50-minute conference. Landon said afterward they had discussed not only Europe but also Latin America and the Far East.

Landon refused to say whether, after his talk with the Secretary of State, he supported Hull's policies, but did remind reporters that he had not opposed Secretarys' Hull's trade agreements program.

"We Have a Stake in Europe"

"We have a stake in Europe", he told them.

"When the war ends the world will be either on a barter basis or willing to return to normal trade. In the latter case our position is clear. We should help the world to return to normal trade".

He declined to say whether he had discussed with Hull the question of a third term for President Roosevelt, against which he came out strongly in a statement yeterday following a luncheon with the President.

The corps head insist the men shall know there's a job to do—a payless job yielding only bed and board, the hours uncertain and the hazards not small.

It costs about $2,000 to put an ambulance in the field and maintain it.
